Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will make a statement about the amount of expenditure and the activities to be supported through education support grants in the financial year 1987-88.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Subject to Parliament's approval of regulations which will amend the Education Support Grant Regulations 1984, excluding midday supervision in schools, it is intended that expenditure of some £3·3 million will be supported by education support grant in 1987-88. We propose to devote £1·8 million of this total to support continuing expenditure from projects first approved in earlier years. About £1·5 million will be available to support expenditure on new activities and on new starts on existing activities. Grant will be paid at the rate of 70 per cent. of the amount of expenditure approved for support.

The following tables show the activities on which expenditure is committed in 1987-88 and the new and extended activities which we propose should rank for education support grant in Wales in 1987-88; the amount of expenditure for each; a provisional assessment of the number of LEAs likely to be supported and the length of support. The precise division of the £1·5 million available for new and extended activities and the distribution among authorities will not be settled until applications have been received and considered.

SCOTLAND

Drift Net Salmon Fishery

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what is his present estimate of the total number of people in the east of Scotland whose employment has been affected by the expansion of the north-east drift net salmon fishery, including those whose jobs are dependent on angling and tourism; and if he can express this total in terms of man days per year.

Mr. John MacKay: I regret that information on employment in salmon fishing and related industries is not collected in a way in which it would be possible to make the kind of estimate the hon. Member has asked for.

Psychiatric Nurses

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many whole-time equivalent community psychiatric nurses have been employed by each health board in each year from 1974 to the latest available year, broken down by (a) RMN, (b) RMNS, (c) SEN-M, (d) SEN-MH, (e) others and (f) total in Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: The information requested is not held centrally. Numbers of qualified nurses employed as community psychiatric nurses in Scotland for the years 1981 to 1985 were given in my answer of 23 April to the hon. Member for Greenock and Port Glasgow (Dr. Godman) at column 173.

TRANSPORT

Drink-Driving Campaign

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Transport, further to his answers to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn of 28 April, Official Report, column 310, if he plans any further publicity campaigns beyond those set out in order to publicise drink-driving enforcement in May and June.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Drinking and driving is a year-round problem. Information and promotional material is always available to the public. Our rolling paid publicity programme focuses on this problem during those parts of the year when it is most important to remind drivers of the risks they face if they mix drinking and driving. I will consider further initiatives. Knowledge, self-discipline and enforcement all matter.

Vehicle Registration Prefix

Mr. Roger King asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many representations he has received against the movement from 1 August to 1 October of the motor vehicle date licence prefix; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Michael Spicer: We have received 605 letters, mainly from motor dealers, opposing the move to October in 1987.

Orange Badge Scheme

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he is satisfied with the working of the regulations for disabled parking badges; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: We are currently reviewing the operation of the orange badge scheme with local authorities. This will form the basis for a discussion document for wider circulation in the summer.

London (Transport System)

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Transport what was the number of miles and percentage of route mileage, respectively, of bus services within the aegis of London Regional Transport run by (a) London Buses Ltd and (b) other organisations.

Mr. David Mitchell: It is not clear to what period the hon. Member's question relates. The information requested would, however, be a matter for LRT.

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is the estimated percentage change in the first quarter of 1986 from the previously lowest figures for the first quarter of a year in (a) passenger miles travelled and (b) passenger journeys taken, in the London Underground system.

Mr. David Mitchel: Data for the first quarter of 1986 are not available yet. I will write to the hon. Member when they are.

School Buses

Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) what plans he has to assist local authorities and passenger transport executives to continue operating the schools special journey buses, especially those not being registered with the traffic commissioners by the Yorkshire Traction Company; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what consideration he has given to awarding special grants to those local authorities whose school buses are likely to be withdrawn from service as a result of bus companies not registering them with the traffic commissioners because they do not operate on a profitable basis; and if he will make a statement;

(3) what system he intends to operate to safeguard young schoolchildren's safety on the roads walking to school as a result of school bus services being withdrawn, as under the terms of the Transport Act they cannot be registered because they are unprofitable services; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: Local authorities and passenger transport executives can subsidise local bus services, including school services, to supplement those which have been registered as commercially viable. Their expenditure on public transport revenue support is taken into account in the calculation of the rate support grant. Competitive tendering for subsidy contracts will ensure value for money spent on bus service subsidies.

Radioactivity

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for Transport if any assessment has been made of the danger of radiation building up on the fuselage of commercial planes; and whether he has given any advice to airlines about safety precautions in the light of increased atmospheric radiation.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Civil Aviation Authority has advised operators of British aircraft to monitor their aircraft for increases in radioactivity levels so that precautions may be taken if necessary. Monitoring of British aircraft operating over Europe has indicated only slight localised increases in levels of radioactivity.

Woolwich Ferry

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is his Department's policy on the granting of extensions to the licences of any of the Woolwich ferry vessels which are not being regularly maintained.

Mr. Ridley: The three vessels operating the ferry service at Woolwich are surveyed at 12-monthly intervals by marine surveyors in my Department: if satisfactory, they are issued with passenger certificates, valid for 12 months. When there are good reasons why the ferries cannot be taken out of service for this survey these certificates may be extended for a short period, but only if it is found safe to do so following an inspection by one of my Department's surveyors.

Mr. Cartwright asked the Secretary of State for Transport what information he has as to maintenance work currently being carried out on each of the three vessels operating the Woolwich ferry to ensure that his Department's safety standards are being met.

Mr. Ridley: One of the ferry boats, the John Burns, is still undergoing a major refit which should have been completed by the GLC in October 1985. The Ernest Bevin and the James Newman receive a visual inspection twice a day by the marine superintendent of the London borough of Greenwich. Following an inspection by the Department's marine surveyor, both received three-month extensions of their passenger licences on 8 May.

British Caledonian

Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is his estimate of the financial loss in terms of (a) revenue and (b) profit accruing to British Caledonian following his decision to revoke the licence to operate the helicopter airlink between Gatwick and Heathrow.

Mr. Michael Spicer: The Civil Aviation Authority estimated that the loss to British Caledonian in terms of both revenue and profit would be about £2 million to £3 million annually, but this has to be balanced against the environmental disturbance caused by the helicopter service. Moreover, in my right hon. Friend's view, the completion of the new motorway link between the two airports means that alternative fast surface links can be provided which should prove acceptable to the majority of passengers wishing to transfer between the airports.

Melbourn Bypass

Sir Anthony Grant asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is the reason for the delay in reaching a decision on the siting of the Melbourn bypass; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Some 600 objections were received to the draft orders. They raised a number of complex issues, including the possibility of an alternative to the route proposed. It has necessarily taken some time to consider the objections and the inspector's recommendations. The Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Transport hope their joint decision will not be long delayed.

A1-M1 Link Road

Sir Anthony Grant asked the Secretary of State for Transport what time has elapsed since the conclusion of the public inquiry into the A1-M1 link road; when he expects to receive the inspector's report; when he intends to make a decision; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Public inquiries into the proposed 45-mile M1-A1 link road ended last June after nine months. I understand that the inspector does not expect to complete his report before June or July of this year. Given the scope and complexity of the issues, my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for the Environment and for Transport do not expect to announce their joint decision before the end of the year at the earliest.

Sir Anthony Grant asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many representations he has received on the subject of the A1-M1 link road.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: At the public inquiries, the inspector had before him about 1,200 objections and representations, including some in support of the proposals. A few representations have been received since the inquiries.

Transport Undertakings (Audit Control)

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Transport what audit control is proposed to monitor the efficiency and effectiveness of new transport undertakings established under the Transport Act 1985.

Mr. David Mitchell: The audit of public transport companies formed under section 59 and 67 of the Act will be carried out in accordance with the Companies Act 1985 by auditors approved by the Audit Commission for England and Wales or the Commission for Local Authority Accounts in Scotland.

Helicopter Coverage (North-West Scotland)

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether, in assessing helicopter coverage off north-west Scotland, the United Kingdom SAR committee's working group will take into account the response times to the incidents off Benbecula in October 1981 and off Lewis in December 1983.

Mr. Ridley: The United Kingdom SAR committee's helicopter working group is intended to consider the casualty risks arising from shipping, fishing vessels and aircraft, including light aircraft, such as those lost in Hebridean waters on 3 October 1981 and 8 December 1983. In making its recommendations, the working group will take into account all relevant factors, including changes in pattern of activity, weather, survival times and performance of SAR helicopters.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Education Act 1980

Mr. Michael Cocks asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many changes to areas of prime responsibility have been submitted to him under the terms of section 12(1)(d) of the Education Act 1980.

Mr. Dunn: I understand that the right hon. Member is referring to changes of catchment area for which proposals under section 12(1)(d) are not required.

Pupil-Teacher Ratios

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are the most recent figures for the pupil to teacher ratio in schools in the United Kingdom; and what information he has about the equivalent figures for France, Japan and the United States of America.

Mr. Dunn: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 11 March to my hon. Friend the Member for St. Albans (Mr. Lilley) at column 397.

Higher Education

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are the most recent figures for the number of young people in higher education as a proportion of the 18 to 25-year-old population in the United Kingdom; and what information he has about the equivalent figures for France, Japan and the United States of America.

Mr. Walden: Information for other countries is not available in the form requested. The table shows new entrants to higher education expressed as a percentage of a single year age cohort (the average population in the most relevant age range). This measure was devised by the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development as the fairest measure for international comparisons of higher education participation.

New entrants to higher education as a percentage of the relevant population 1982-83

‡ 1983-84. Overseas students and those already with a higher education qualification excluded. Excludes correspondence courses and others outside the public education system other than nursing and paramedical students at DHSS establishments. If included the United Kingdom figure would be around 40 per cent.
‖ Includes private sector colleges.

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set out in tabular form the proportion of those in employment with higher education qualifications or the equivalent in the United Kingdom, France, West Germany, Italy, Japan, Canada and the United States of America, respectively, and show these proportions for each year from 1970 to the latest available date.

Mr. Walden: I will reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many student places in higher education have been unfilled in each year since 1979 in the universities and the public sector institutions, respectively; and what number of those places, and what proportion of the total, have been in science, technology and engineering.

Mr. Walden: Information on student places is not collected centrally.

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish information available to his Department setting out the correlation between the number of young people in the 18 to 19-year-old cohort and the number entering higher education in each of the years from 1970 to the latest available date.

Mr. Walden: The relationship is measured by the age participation index, which is defined as the number of home initial entrants, aged less than 21, to full-time and sandwich courses of higher education expressed as a percentage of the most relevant age cohort. This is taken as half of those who were aged 18 and 19 in the relevant year. The figures for Great Britain are as follows:

	API	API†
1972	14·3	12·4
1973	14·0	12·3

‡ Early estimate.

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish information available to his Department indicating the extent to which there is a connection between levels of participation in higher education and national economic performance.

Mr. Walden: It is very difficult to quantify the effect that higher education has on economic performance. Calculations of the social rate of return approach this question indirectly by analysing the relationship between levels of education and earnings. An account of work in this area by DES economists was published in Cmnd. 9524 "The Development of Higher Education, into the 1990s". This suggested that the overall social rate of return to university first degrees was in the region of 5 to 8 per cent. in real terms.

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish information available to his Department indicating the social rate of return from higher education provided at particular institutions or in particular departments of such institutions.

Mr. Walden: No information is available on the social rate of return from higher education provided at particular departments or institutions.

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will publish any information available to his Department from sample surveys indicating the extent to which those who have experienced higher education believe that they have benefited from it.

Mr. Walden: I am aware of only three studies, which, while not of the precise kind referred to by my hon. Friend, have a bearing on students' perceptions of the value of higher education:

(a) a study undertaken in 1977 of persons graduating in 1970, which attempted to assess the extent to which student aspirations had been realised by their subsequent employment. The results were published in June 1981 as a Department of Employment Research paper (Number 26) and are available in the statistics section of the Library.

(b) a graduate employment study sponsored by CNAA and my Department and carried out under the direction of Miss B. Hollinshead of Manchester Polytechnic. The Technical Report of the project ("Early Careers of Graduates") was published this month and I am arranging for a copy to be placed in the Library.

(c) a 1982 survey of final year undergraduates, which formed part of a research project commissioned by my Department from Professor Kogan of Brunel University. The results are summarised in "Expectations of Higher Education: A synopsis and commentary on its main findings" (published in 1984). A copy is in the Library.

Graduate Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are the most recent figures for science, engineering and technology graduates in the United Kingdom; and what information he has about the equivalent figures for France, Japan and the United States of America.

Mr. Walden: The information is as follows:

Teachers (Duties)

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any proposals to seek to control the time teachers spend on duties outside the classroom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: No; talks between the parties under the leadership of an independent panel appointed by ACAS are now in progress on, among other things, a clear definition of the contractual duties and responsibilities of teachers and their employers. The Education Bill includes a provision in clause 37 giving the Secretary of State an enabling power which, if used, would require LEAs to appraise the performance of teachers in discharging their duties and engaging in other activities. I refer my hon. Friend to what my right hon. Friend the Earl of Swinton said on this matter in another place on 1 May at columns 399-402.

Teachers (Deployment)

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he has any proposals to encourage better deployment of teachers between schools; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Chris Patten: In the White Paper "Better Schools", the Government emphasised their aim to improve the effectiveness with which the school teacher force is deployed across and within local education authorities. We recognised that authorities had difficulty relating Government policies for the size of the teacher force nationally to their decisions on local teacher numbers, and encouraged the establishment of a joint official working group with the local authority associations. This group has recommended that national planning horizons should be established for teacher numbers, and appropriate guidance should be issued to local education authorities. In considering our response to the group's advice, we shall want to take account, among other things, of the scope for local authorities to rationalise their school provision and thus to mitigate the staffing diseconomies associated with smaller schools.

School Buildings

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he is satisfied with the progress made by local education authorities in closing redundant school buildings; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: Local education authorities are expected to exceed existing targets for the removal of surplus places up to 1987; but much remains to be done, particularly in secondary schools where, against a stock of 4·1 million places, pupil numbers are projected to fall from 3·5 million in 1985 to 2·8 million in 1991. My right hon. Friend plans to promulgate new targets for the period to 1991 shortly.

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will undertake a new survey of the state of repair and decoration of schools in England and Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Denton and Reddish (Mr. Bennett) on 10 February at column 320, regarding the sample survey of school building improvement needs currently being carried out by my Department. This seeks information on work, which may include repair and decoration, considered necessary to bring the school buildings in the sample which will be retained in 1991-92 to the defined standard of physical condition. The survey covers England only; schools in Wales are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Teachers (Pensions and Lump Sums)

Mr. Gareth Wardell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will indicate the length of time that his Department will take to complete the payment of pensions and lump sum arrears to teachers whose last day of service was on or after 1 April 1985.

Mr. Chris Patten: Approximately 16,000 superannuation awards fall to be revised as a result of the late 1985 teachers' pay settlement, of which some 4,000 will have been processed by the end of this month. Bearing in mind the need to give priority during the summer to first-time awards for some 12,000 teachers expected to retire at the end of the summer term, the Department estimates that the remaining pension revisions will be completed by the end of November.

Teacher Training

Mr. Gorst asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science how many entrants into teacher training courses there have been in each of the past five years in (a) total and (b) scientific subjects; and if he is satisfied that there is currently no shortage of suitably qualified teachers in these fields.

Mr. Chris Patten: The number of entrants into initial teacher training courses in England in each of the past four academic years is given in the following table. Comparable data for the academic year 1981-82 are not available.

Recruitment to initial teacher training in England

Academic years	1982-83	1983-84	1984-85*	1985-86
Primary and secondary	15,756	14,861	15,404	15,435
Secondary only	9,712	8,029	7,667	7,330
Secondary sciences	1,790	1,400	1,279	1,215

*The figures for 1984-85 exclude a small number of entrants to degree courses with concurrent certificate in education.

We are satisfied that for most areas of the curriculum there is a sufficient supply of teachers nationally to meet the needs of schools, but we are concerned about continuing difficulties with the supply of suitably qualified teachers in the physical sciences, in mathematics and in craft, design and technology.

Institute of Psychiatry

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science (1) what information he has on the change in the number of clinical posts at the Institute of Psychiatry in each of the years 1979 to 1986;

(2) what information he has on the number of posts at the Institute of Psychiatry which have fallen vacant in the last two years, and as to how many remain vacant.

Mr. Walden: The numbers of clinical staff in post at the Institute of Psychiatry at 31 December each year, were as follows:

	Numbers
1980	51
1981	46
1982	50
1983	61
1984	66
1985	60

I understand that there are currently five clinical vacancies at the institute.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement on the rôle of the Institute of Psychiatry in the training of doctors, psychologists and nurses in the treatment of psychiatric patients, the mentally handicapped and the elderly.

Mr. Walden: The Institute of Psychiatry is a school of the University of London and a federated institute of the British Postgraduate Medical Federation. In association with the Maudsley and Bethlem Royal hospitals, it provides clinical training in psychiatry. The institute also provides training in clinical psychology. It is a major centre for research into aspects of mental disorder, and offers a range of clinical or laboratory-based higher degree courses.

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what information he has on the projected deficits of the Institute of Psychiatry in the years (a) 1985-86, (b) 1986-87, (c) 1987-88, (d) 1988-89 and (e) 1989-1990.

Mr. Walden: None.

Education Support Grants

Mrs. Roe asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make a statement about the amount of expenditure and the activities to be supported through education support grants in the financial year 1987-88.

Sir Keith Joseph: The Education (Grant and Awards) Act 1984 empowers the holder of my office to pay education support grant to local education authorities in England. It is intended that expenditure supported through education support grant will amount to some £53 million in 1987-88. I propose to devote £31·5 million of this total of planned expenditure to committed expenditure arising from projects first approved in earlier years. About £10·1 million will be available to support new starts on existing activities and £11·3 million on new activities. Grant will be paid at the rate of 70 per cent. on the amount of expenditure approved for support through education support grants.

Following consultations with representatives of the local education authorities, my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I have today laid before Parliament draft regulations setting out the new purposes for or in connection with which we propose to pay education support grants in 1987-88. Those regulations will amend the Education Support Grants Regulations 1984 and will be subject to approval by both Houses of Parliament.

The following tables show the activities on which expenditure is committed in 1987-88 and the new extended activities which I propose should rank for education support grant in England in 1987-88, the amount of expenditure for each; a provisional assessment of the number of LEAs likely to be supported and the length of support. The precise division of the £21·4 million available for new and extended activities between these purposes and the number of authorities to be supported will not be settled until applications have been received and considered.

Should Parliament approve the regulations, a circular inviting bids will be sent to all education authorities in England. I propose to ask authorities to submit bids by 1 October and I further propose to announce decisions on applications in December.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Regional Aid

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has as to the account taken by the European Community when assessing the extent of regional aid to be made available to an area and of the impact on existing and prospective industry of the character of existing industries in that area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: In deciding whether to approve member states' own regional aids or whether to grant aid from the European regional development fund, the European Commission has regard to a range of factors, including the relative need of the area in question for assistance with economic development. The character of existing industries in an area may be related to its degree of need. For certain ERDF purposes, areas which are dependent on industries which are particularly associated with Community policies may receive more favourable treatment.

Generics (UK) Ltd.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has as to the ownership of Generics (UK) Ltd.

Mr. Howard: Information on the ownership of companies is submitted to the Registrar of Companies once a year on the company's annual return, and on other returns when new shares are allotted. This information, together with other details about the company, is publicly available. The latest documents available on the public record show the following as members:

Name of Shareholder	Number of Shares held at 7 May 1985 (1985 Annual Return)	Additional Shares Allotted at 28 June 1985
Interpharm Inc	360	30,240
Julian Neil Tabatznik	69	5,796
Anthony S. Tabatznik	69	5,796
Bernard Samuels	30	2,520
Lawrence G. Stolzenberg	24	2,016
Henry Brian Davis	24	2,016
George Calvin Davies	12	1,008
Robert Miller	12	1,008

Subject to any restrictions the company's articles of Association place on transfers of shares, there may have been changes in ownership since these dates. The company is required to hold an up-to-date register of its shareholders, which may be inspected at its registered office.

Japan (Leather Industry)

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what evidence he has of infringements of the general agreement on tariffs and trade by Japan in relation to quantitative restrictions, licences, and other methods of protecting the Japanese tanning industry.

Mr. Alan Clark: In May 1984, the GATT Council adopted a report which found that quantitative restrictions applied by Japan to imports of leather were nullifying or impairing benefits accruing to other contracting parties under GATT. In accordance with the GATT Council decision, Japan eliminated these quantitative restrictions on 1 April, while introducing a tariff quota system. The Community has reluctantly accepted the new arrangements in the course of negotiations with Japan in GATT. The tariff quota offers British and Community exporters improving access to the Japanese market for at least five years. We hope that the arrangements will be further improved in future.

Food Imports

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, further to his answer of 28 April, Official Report, column 351, on food imports, whether he will provide the 1984 figures for the countries listed in 1970 and not in 1984 and the 1970 figures for countries listed in 1984 and not 1970.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information is in the following table.

United Kingdom Trade

	*Share of United Kingdom food imports	United Kingdom share of imports of manufactures†
1970
Italy	1·5	6·3
Belgium/Luxembourg	0·8	7·2

Soviet Union (High Technology Exports)

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what precautions are being taken to prevent highly sophisticated industrial products for the purpose of military or nuclear use being sold to the Soviet Union; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: Strategically sensitive goods are subject to control under the Export of Goods (Control) Order 1985. The Government's policy is not to grant licences for exports which would be likely to damage national security.

USSR (Market Access)

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he is satisfied with the access available to United Kingdom firms to the market in the Soviet Union; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: I am aware that some firms experience difficulties in obtaining access to reliable market information and to end users in the Soviet Union, but have no reason to believe that United Kingdom firms are treated any differently from other Western European companies. The Department takes the opportunity of Government-to-Government contacts, such as the joint commission, to raise these difficulties with the Soviet authorities.

Soviet Nuclear Accident

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what assessment his Department has made of how British companies, trading with the Soviet Union in light industry, computers, fibres, furnishings and construction engineering will be affected by the Chernobyl disaster; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: I have at present no reason to believe that British companies trading with the Soviet Union in these sectors will be seriously affected by the Chernobyl nuclear accident.

USSR (Trade Statistics)

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the most recent figures available for the balance of imports and exports to and from the Soviet Union; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The most recent figures available are the provisional figures for March 1986, which show a crude United Kingdom trade surplus of £5·3 million. This compares with a crude surplus of £34·2 million for the first quarter of 1986.

USSR (Construction Industries)

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what financial assistance Her Majesty's Government are providing to the Soviet Union, in order to expand the construction industries in the Soviet Union; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: None — nor do I see any reason why Her Majesty's Government should do so.

Cannon Group (Takeover Bids)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will refer to the Monopolies and Mergers Commission the takeover bids promoted by the Cannon Group in the cinema industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: The acquisition of Screen Entertainment by the Cannon Group is currently being considered by the Director General of Fair Trading. My right hon. Friend will make his decision on whether it should be referred for further investigation by the Monopolies and Mergers Commission in the light of the Director General's advice. The Director General is not aware of any other bids for United Kingdom companies involving the Cannon Group.

Foodstuffs (Importation)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what duties, levies and quotas are imposed on the import of foodstuffs from east Europe to the EEC; and if there are any significant differences in the duties, levies and quotas imposed on imports from East Germany to the Federal Republic of Germany by comparison with other east European countries.

Mr. Alan Clark: The current import duties charged by the Community are set out in the Official Journal of the European Communities, volume 28 number L331 of 9 December 1985; the current quotas on imports of East European products are set out in Official Journal volume 28 number L382 of 31 December 1985; and the levies which are charged by the Community are also published in the Official Journal, but these change frequently, there is no consolidated list of them, and it would be disproportionately costly to list them here.

East German products entering the Federal Republic of Germany are treated more favourably than those from other East European countries, in accordance with the protocol on German internal trade annexed to the treaty establishing the European Economic Community.

Inner German Trade Agreement

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what alleged abuses of the inner German trade agreement have been reported to him; what representations his Department has made to the EEC Commission about the alleged abuses; and what has been the result of these representations.

Mr. Alan Clark: Since 1980, my Department has received 12 representations about alleged abuses of the inner German trade agreement. The complainants were able to supply detailed evidence in one case relating to powdered egg, which the European Commission has investigated at our request. But to date it has proved difficult to produce conclusive evidence that products resulting from inner German trade are adversely affecting the Community's egg products market. The Commission has however undertaken to continue to monitor developments closely.

ENERGY

Polkemmet Bing

3. Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on his latest contacts with the National Coal Board about the smouldering bing at Polkemmet.

Mr. David Hunt: I understand from the chief scientist at NCB's area laboratory in Edinburgh that the fire at the Polkemmet bing has been extinguished and that the contractors are now tidying up and landscaping the site.

Home Insulation Scheme

8. Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will expand the home insulation scheme to incorporate a fuller range of energy saving methods within the home.

Mr. David Hunt: The 1986-87 homes insulation scheme allocation is expected fully to meet total demand, but my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for the Environment has said that he will bear in mind Energy Efficiency Year in considering any applications for additional allocations.

Energy Conservation

9. Mr. Bruce asked the Secretary of State for Energy what fresh plans he has to provide financial assistance to companies in order to encourage investment in the conservation of energy.

Mr. David Hunt: My energy efficiency office continually encourages firms to take advantage of the highly attractive investments which energy efficiency measures offer. Its latest initiative has been to set up 2,000 free half-day surveys by expert energy consultants.

Gas Bill

10. Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many representations he has received, respectively, in favour and against the Gas Bill.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: I have received a large number of representations. Only a small minority join the Opposition in opposing the privatisation of British Gas.

Energy Scientific Adviser

14. Mr. Stott asked the Secretary of State for Energy what is the salary and length of contract for the recently appointed energy scientific adviser in his Department.

Mr. Goodlad: The recently appointed chief scientist and head of energy technology division in the Department of Energy is on secondment from the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority for a period of two to three years. His salary is equivalent to that of a Grade 3 (under-secretary) in the open structure.

Energy Efficiency Campaign

16. Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for Energy how much has been spent to date in advertising the energy efficiency campaign run by his Department; and which advertising agencies have been used.

Mr. David Hunt: I am hoping this year to obtain £20 of outside advertising expenditure for every £1 of Government advertising.

Advertising expenditure by my Department on energy efficiency was as follows:

Agency	Year	Amount spent with agency £
Young and Rubicam	1983-84	1,630,000
Young and Rubicam	1984-85	1,660,000
Doyle Dane Bernbach	1984-85	2,567,000
Doyle Dane Bernbach	1985-86	8,987
Saatchi and Saatchi	1985-86	4,182,000

Energy Efficiency Year

18. Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will report the latest progress with his Department's energy efficiency year programmes.

Mr. David Hunt: Over 550 Energy Efficiency Year events have already taken place. Our television and press advertising campaign promoting the Monergy message has generated a greatly increased awareness.

Severn Tidal Power Group

19. Mr. Heathcoat-Amory asked the Secretary of State for Energy when he plans to publish the feasibility study of the Severn tidal power group.

29. Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for Energy what recent representations he has received about the construction of a Severn barrage; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he is yet in a position to state when he will make a statement on his conclusions on the Severn tidal power group's report on the Severn barrage, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Hunt: As I said in reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Falmouth and Camborne (Mr. Mudd) on 18 April, the Secretary of State for Energy has received the report of the Severn tidal power group assessing the viability of a private sector barrage across the Severn estuary.

We are considering the report. The Severn tidal power group hopes to release its report shortly and we will place copies in the Libraries of both Houses of Parliament at that time.

Nuclear Power Generation

20. Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give figures for the percentage of electricity generated by nuclear power in each of the last three years.

Mr. Goodlad: The figures, as percentages of electricity available from the United Kingdom public supply system, are as follows:

	Per cent.
1984	18·6
1985	20·5

Local Authorities (Energy Efficiency)

21. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Energy how much money he estimates might be saved in 1986 by local authorities implementing good energy efficiency practice; and what incentives are available to both them and ratepayers in this respect.

Mr. David Hunt: The Audit Commission has identified potential savings of at least £135 million a year through improved energy efficiency in local government buildings in England and Wales. These savings themselves are the incentive for the necessary measures to be taken.

NCB (Chairman)

22. Mr. Orme asked the Secretary of State for Energy when he last met the chairman of the National Coal Board to discuss the future plans for the industry.

Mr. Peter Walker: I meet the chairman of the National Coal Board regularly to discuss all aspects of the coal industry, including its plans for the future.

Coal Prices

23. Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Energy by what percentage the average price of coal to the domestic consumer has changed since 1979; and how this compares with gas and electricity.

Mr. David Hunt: Between 1979 and 1985 the current price index for domestic coal rose by 97 per cent. In the same period the current price indices for domestic gas and electricity rose by 121 per cent. and 82 per cent., respectively.

Oil and Gas Exploration

24. Mr. Portillo asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether he will make a statement on the current level of oil and gas exploration activity on the United Kingdom continental shelf.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: A total of 79 exploration and appraisal wells have been drilled on the United Kingdom's continental shelf and onshore in the United Kingdom in 1986 in the period to 24 April.

Nuclear Power

25. Sir Trevor Skeet asked the Secretary of State for Energy what recent representations he has received advocating the increased use of nuclear power in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Goodlad: There is widespread demand for cheaper electricity from industry and in the home. The Government believes that nuclear power, subject as it is to the most stringent safeguards, has an essential contribution to make in the provision of electric power economically.

British Gas

26. Mr. Lofthouse asked the Secretary of State for Energy what assessment his Department has made on the impact of the fall in oil prices on the privatisation of British Gas.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The offer for sale of shares in British Gas will take full account of prevailing market circumstances.

Yorkshire Coalfield

27. Mr. Mason asked the Secretary of State for Energy, when he next meets the chairman of the National Coal Board if he will discuss with him the future of the Yorkshire coalfield.

Mr. David Hunt: My right hon. Friend and I meet the chairman of the NCB regularly and discuss all aspects of the coal industry.

Welsh Coalfields

28. Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Energy what is his Department's estimate of future investment in the Welsh coalfields.

Mr. David Hunt: The Government agree an overall capital expenditure limit with the NCB, but it is for the board to determine levels of investment in individual areas.

Oil-fired Power Stations

Mr. Eadie asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many tonnes of coal equivalent was burned in oil-fired power stations in March and April; and what were the stations.

Mr. Goodlad: Figures for fuel used in the generation of electricity in March and April will appear in future editions of "Energy Trends", which is published monthly. The actual stations used in meeting demand for electricity are an operational matter for the generating boards.

North Sea Output

31. Mr. Douglas asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement of the latest level of output of oil and gas from the United Kingdom sector of the North sea.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The most recent figures are for March, when daily offshore production is provisionally estimated to have been 2·6 million barrels of crude oil and 6·1 billion cu ft of natural gas.

NCB (Non-mining Activities)

32. Sir Geoffrey Finsberg asked the Secretary of State for Energy when he next expects to meet the chairman of the National Coal Board to discuss the privatisation programme for the non-mining activities of the National Coal Board.

Mr. David Hunt: The organisation of the National Coal Board's non-mining activities is a matter for the board. In the past five years the following NCB subsidiary interests have been disposed of to the private sector:

Redwood Corex (Services) Ltd.
Associated Heat Services plc.
J. H. Sankey & Son Ltd.

The board is currently completing disposal of its interest in Scottish Brick Corporation Ltd.

Boiler Conversion Schemes

33. Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Energy in how many cases the maximum grant has been paid in respect of boiler conversion schemes during the last two years; what proportion of the total number of grants paid this represents.

Mr. David Hunt: Over the last two years 132 projects have been offered maximum assistance under the scheme, representing some 62 per cent. of all offers made in the period. Of these, 93 have been accepted, some 66 per cent. of all acceptances during the period, 28 were rejected and 11 are awaiting acceptance.

Oil Prices

34. Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the effects of falling oil prices on the future of the coal industry.

Mr. Peter Walker: It is still to early to judge the likely extent and duration of the recent sharp decline in oil prices, which, together with imported coal and other fuels, have increased the competitive pressure on the NCB. It is therefore too soon to assess the implications for the future of the coal industry.

Building Regulations

35. Mr Evans asked the Secretary of State for Energy what representations he has received concerning the benefits of changing building regulations to improve energy efficiency.

Mr. David Hunt: Firms and trade associations in the building energy efficiency industry have made representations to me concerning the scope for improving comfort and reducing fuel bills through cost-effective improvements to the standards of energy efficiency set in the building regulations.

Dungeness B

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Energy what was the total construction time and final commissioning date for the Dungeness B power station; and how these figures compare with the originally estimated construction time and commissioning date.

Mr. Goodlad: I have asked the chairman of the CEGB to write to the hon. Member.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Energy what is the latest estimated final cost of the Dungeness B power station; and how this compares in real terms with the original estimated cost.

Mr. Goodlad: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to the then hon. Member for Dearne Valley (Mr. Wainwright) on 8 March 1982 at column 289.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Energy what is the current capacity of Dungeness B power station in megawatts sent out; how this compares with the original design capacity; what is the total output to date in megawatts; and what was the original estimated annual output.

Mr. Goodlad: Maximum output obtained to date at Dungeness B has been 580 MW generated from the first unit (R21) and 440 MW generated from the second unit (R22), equating to a total of the 900 MW sent out. The original design capacity was 660 MW generated from each unit equating to a total of 1200 MW sent out. It is expected that the final output achieved will be close to this design output. Total output achieved to date has been 4·6 million MW hours. Original estimated annual output was in the region of 7·5 million MW hours.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Energy what is the current cost of producing one megawatt hour of electricity at Dungeness B advanced gas cooled reactor power station; and what is the equivalent figure at Drax coal-fired stations.

Mr. Goodlad: I shall arrange for the CEGB to write to the hon. Member.

Electricity Generation

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for Energy what is the present mix of electricity generated in the United Kingdom according to the source of generation, coal, oil, nuclear or hydro measured as percentages; and how that mix compares with that in 1979.

Mr. Goodlad: The figures, for production of electricity by the electricity generating boards on a fuel-used basis for 1979 and 1985, are as follows:

Electricity production, public electricity supply in the United Kingdom (fuel input basis) percentage share

Coal*	73·0	64·6
Oil	14·9	15·7
Nuclear	10·1	17·7
Hydro	1·5	1·6
Natural gas	0·5	0·4
	100·0	100·0

* Includes small quantities of coke.

Sizewell Inquiry

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Energy how much time in days has been devoted to the Sizewell B inquiry to date.

Mr. Goodlad: The inquiry sat for 340 days between 11 January 1983 and 7 March 1985. Since it closed the inspector has been assessing the evidence and preparing his report. As my right hon. Friend announced on 13 March, at column 555, the inspector has told him that he hopes to deliver the report in September.

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for Energy what has been the total cost to public funds to date of the Sizewell B inquiry; and if he will provide a breakdown of the costs.

Mr. Goodlad: Costs up to 31 March 1986 falling to my Department were some £890,000. Other costs incurred to the same date in running the inquiry and recoverable from the CEGB by agreement with the board total approximately £2,299,000. Costs incurred by parties to the inquiry, including the CEGB's own costs, are a matter for them and are not included in this total.

Electricity Prices

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will give a general direction to the electricity boards to reduce their prices to consumers in view of the fall in their fuel costs; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Walker: Reductions in fuel prices automatically reduce the monthly bills of industrial and commercial customers. The Central Electricity Generating Board and the National Coal Board are discussing coal prices in the light of their assessment of the present uncertain oil market. They are seeking to reach a commercial agreement which will enable this changed market situation to be suitably reflected in the price that the CEGB pays for NCB coal. The intention of the electricity supply industry is that all customers, including domestic customers, should benefit.

NCB (Redundancy Payments)

Mr. Ray Powell asked the Secretary of State for Energy how many employees of the National Coal Board opencast executive have received payments from the European Coal and Steel Community fund for redundancy, and, under what provision of articles 49 to 53 of the treaty of Paris.

Mr. David Hunt: None.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Fruit Machines (Tokens)

Mr. Nicholas Brown asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what proposals he has to seek to amend the law regarding the exchange of tokens from fruit machines for cash or kind; and what representations he has received from the Gaming Board on this matter.

Mr. Giles Shaw: We have no plans to amend the law and have received no representations from the Gaming Board on this subject.

Police-Population Ratios

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the ratio of police to population in (a) Cardiff and (b) Cardiff, West.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the chief constable that the police/population ratios of Cardiff central and Cardiff greater divisions, which are the two territorial divisions covering Cardiff in the South Wales constabulary, are as follows:

	Ratio
Cardiff Central Division	1:213
Cardiff Greater Division	1:575

South Wales Police (Recruitment)

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many police officers were recruited by South Wales police constabulary between 1975 and 1980 and 1980 and 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The information is as follows:

South Wales Constabulary

Year	Number of Police Officers Recruited	Strength on 31st December
1975	250	2,962
1976	210	2,982
1977	113	2,872
1978	170	2,886
1979	213	3,025
1980	126	3,068
Total	1,082
1980	126	3,068
1981	101	3,082
1982	133	3,096
1983	87	3,082
1984	123	3,106
1985	95	3,064
Total	665

Some police vacancies have been held in south Wales during the past year, but the force continues to recruit to replace wastage. I understand that finance is available in the current financial year to enable the force to fill its existing vacancies, and arrangements are in hand for it to do so as soon as possible.

Parliamentary Boundaries

Mr. Madel asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list those parliamentary constituencies currently being investigated by the Parliamentary Boundary Commission with a view to possible changes in their parliamentary boundaries; when he expects the Parlimentary Boundary Commission to report; if it is his intention to lay any orders to implement any changes during the lifetime of the current Parliament; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: A list of the 42 constituencies which are the subject of current interim review by the Parliamentary Boundary Commission for England was given in reply to a Question from my hon. Friend the Member for South West Surrey (Mrs. Bottomley) on 24 February at Cols. 417-418. I understand that the Commission hopes to submit its final recommendations towards the end of this year, subject to the possible need to hold local inquiries and publish revised recommendations in the light of those inquiries. My right hon. Friend will then comply with his statutory duty to lay the commission's report before Parliament as soon as may be after its receipt, together with the draft of an Order in Council for implementing the commission's recommendations, with or without modifications.

Hampshire and Isle of Wight Police

Sir David Price asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he will now authorise an increase of 26 police officers in the authorised establishment of the Hampshire and Isle of Wight police force.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My right hon. Friend is considering, in consultation with Her Majesty's Inspector of Constabulary and in the light of the specific needs of the force, the application of 29 April 1986 from the Hampshire police authority for an increase of 28 police posts in the authorised establishment of the force. He will reach a decision as soon as the consultations have been completed.

News International Plant, Wapping

Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many arrests have taken place at Wapping in connection with the print dispute from 21 April to the latest available date.

Mr. Giles Shaw: One hundred and seventy one, up to 9 May.

EMPLOYMENT

Labour Statistics

Mr. Nellist asked the Paymaster General what information he has as to the hourly average earnings of industrial production workers in sterling at 1986 prices for (a) 1960, (b) 1970, (c) 1980 and the latest available date, for (i) Great Britain, (ii) Sweden, (iii) Canada, (iv) the United States of America, (v) West Germany, (vi) France, (vii) Italy and (viii) Japan respectively.

Mr. Lang: Harmonised statistics of hourly earnings are only available for European Community countries; the earliest common date is October 1972 and the latest is October 1983.

The available information is given in the following table. It relates to gross hourly earnings (including overtime and before tax and social security contributions) of manual workers in manufacturing industries. The figures can be used to show trends over time in real hourly earnings in each country, but since they make no allowance for changes in exchange rates over the period, they are not appropriate for making comparisons between the level of earnings in different countries.

Keyboard Productivity (Scotland) Limited

Dame Judith Hart asked the Paymaster General what arrangement he is making for the payment by the Manpower Services Commission of arrears due to employers under the YTS trainee scheme following the liquidation of Keyboard as a managing agent.

Mr. Lang: Although the Manpower Services Commission has no legal obligation to pay the arrears due to employers who, as work experience providers, paid YTS trainees their allowances on behalf of Keyboard Productivity (Scotland) Limited, in the circumstances of the case, the commission will honour legitimate claims for such arrears.

For expenditure incurred on allowances up to and including 25 April 1986, work experience providers should submit their claims through the liquidator, Arthur Young and Company at George house, George square, Glasgow in the form that the liquidator prescribes. The liquidator will pass the claims to the commission.

For expenditure incurred on allowances on or after 26 April 1986, work experience providers should apply directly to the commission's local training division area office.

Industrial Deaths

Sir David Price asked the Paymaster General how many people were killed in the coal mining industry for each of the last 10 years; and what were the equivalent figures for those killed in the nuclear industry.

Mr. Lang: The available information is given in the table.

Fatal accidents reported in the Health and Safety Executive to employees at work in:

Year	Coal mining industry	Nuclear industry*
1976	50	2

1982	38	2
1983	30	1
‡1985	†25	0

* Includes employees at sites operated by the Central Electricity Generating Board, The South of Scotland Electricity Generating Board, British Nuclear Fuels plc and establishments of the United Kingdom Atomic Energy Authority.
† Figures affected by consequences of the miners strike (began March 1984, ended March 1985).

Job Security Clearance

Mr. A. Cecil Walker asked the Paymaster General what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the use of job security clearance in respect of persons from Northern Ireland applying for certain sensitive posts in Great Britain; to what types of post such clearance applies; and what assessment he has made of the effects on the ability of applicants from Northern Ireland to compete for posts with other candidates who are not subject to such clearance.

Mr. Luce: I have been asked to reply.

I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

DEFENCE

Nimrod AEW Project

Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the progress of the Nimrod AEW project.

Mr. Norman Lamont: There is nothing I can usefully add at this stage to the very full statement I made to the House in the course of the debate on the Royal Air Force on 26 February 1986 at columns 962-964.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence by what method the Government assess the amount of chemical warfare agent in the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics' stockpile.

Mr. Stanley: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given him on 17 May 1985 by my hon. Friend the Under-Secretary of State for Defence Procurement at column 266.

Ulster Defence Regiment

Mr. A. Cecil Walker asked the Secretary of State for Defence what criteria are used in deciding which Irish regiments should be posted to Northern Ireland; and how these criteria apply to the presence and rôle of the Ulster Defence Regiment in the Province.

Mr. Stanley: Irish regiments have not generally been deployed in Northern Ireland for a variety of reasons, not least the additional strain this would place on soldiers and their families.

The Ulster Defence Regiment was formed in 1970 as a result of the Hunt committee's recommendation that a locally recruited, part-time, military defence force be raised to assist the Royal Ulster Constabulary. The regiment was therefore raised under the Reserve Forces Act to serve in Northern Ireland with a specific task in mind. Its members join on the understanding that they will not be asked to serve outside the Province, aside from the possibility of short periods of training; this is particularly significant to the part-time members who make up the majority of the regiment and who have civilian jobs as well.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Trade Union Act 1984

Mr. A. Cecil Walker asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if Her Majesty's Government will seek to extend the Trade Union Act 1984 to Northern Ireland.

Dr. Boyson: The possibility of bringing forward legislative proposals for Northern Ireland similar to the 1984 Act is being considered.

St. Joseph's Primary School, Carryduff

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the enrolment at St. Joseph's primary school, Saintfield road, Carryduff, in each of the past five years.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is as follows:

298	263	275	294	294

*From January.

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if a patrolman has now been appointed to assist pupils to cross the main Belfast/Saintfield roads to attend St. Joseph's primary school, Carryduff; if there was any difficulty in attracting applicants for this position; and if he is in a position to state the sources of salary for the person appointed to carry out the responsibilities of patrolman.

Dr. Mawhinney: A patrolman was appointed in 1981 and remains in post. Any question concerning difficulty in attracting applicants to the post does not, therefore, arise at present. As an employee of the South-Eastern education and library board, his wages are paid by that board.

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether enrolments at St. Joseph's primary school, Carryduff, have increased during the past 10 years; and if he will make a statement about proposals to improve road safety for pupils attending St. Joseph's primary school, Saintfield road, Carryduff.

Dr. Mawhinney: Annual enrolments have fluctuated within a range of 263 to 310 pupils; the current enrolment of 294 (January 1986) is almost identical to that of 10 years ago (296). There are no specific proposals for additional road safety measures in the vicinity of the school.

Belfast-Saintfield Road (Speed Limit)

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland whether the maximum speed limit has been increased on the main Belfast-Saintfield road during the past 10 years.

Dr. Mawhinney: The speed limit on a section of the Belfast to Saintfield road between the outskirts of Belfast and Carryduff was increased from 40 mph to 50 mph in 1981.

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Mr. A. Cecil Walker asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will introduce legislation to give statutory force to the Anglo-Irish agreement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tom King: The Anglo-Irish agreement has been approved by Parliament, and required no amendment to domestic law to come into force. The Government retain responsibility for the decisions and administration of government in Northern Ireland and statutory powers and duties remain as they were before the agreement came into force.

Terrorism

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland why there is a divergence in the figures given by Her Majesty's Government and those given by the Royal Ulster Constabulary in 1985 for explosions and for firearms and weapons incidents.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 6 May 1986, c. 36]: I assume that the hon. Member is referring to figures for 1985 in the answer my right hon. Friend gave him on 27 February, at column 637-8, and to those in table 3 of the appendix to the Chief Constable's 1985 annual report.

The separate figures given in the former for explosions and neutralisations add up to the figure in the latter for the "bombs". A separate figure was given in the answer for "shots heard"; in the Chief Constable's report this is subsumed in the overall "shootings" total.

Finally, the figure that was given for the recovery of firearms includes mortars; the chief constable's does not.

THE ARTS

Business Sponsorship Incentive Scheme

42. Dr. Michael Clark asked the Minister for the Arts what has been the split between the Greater London area and the regions of the business sponsorship incentive scheme participants.

Mr. Luce: Under the business sponsorship incentive scheme, 70 per cent. of award money—£1·3 million—has gone to the regions outside the Greater London area; this represents 77 per cent. of the total number of awards.

Trade Union Sponsorship

43. Sir John Biggs-Davison asked the Minister for the Arts if he will make a statement about trade union sponsorship of the arts.

Mr. Luce: I refer the hon. Member to the reply I gave to a question by the hon. Member for Newham, North-West, (Mr. Banks) earlier today.

South Bank

Sir David Price asked the Minister for the Arts what is the estimated annual administrative cost of running the South Bank following the abolition of the Greater London council.

Mr. Luce: The estimated staff costs for 1986-87 are £2·979 million.

CIVIL SERVICE

Performance Bonus Scheme

48. Mr. Dickens asked the Minister for the Civil Service if he will make a statement on the progress of the three-year experimental performance bonus scheme announced in December 1984.

Mr. Luce: The three-year experimental performance bonus scheme is being carefully monitored, with the help of outside consultants. We expect to have a report from them in the summer on the first year of the scheme's operation.

Equal Opportunities

Sir David Price asked the Minister for the Civil Service what is his policy for promoting equal opportunities in the Civil Service.

Mr. Luce: Equal opportunities in the Civil Service are promoted by removing any form of direct or indirect discrimination on grounds of sex or ethnic origins and by publicising the policy as widely as resources permit.

Chief Information Officer, 10 Downing Street

47. Mr. Tam Dalyell asked the Minister for the Civil Service what representations he has had from the First Division Association about the post of chief information officer at 10 Downing street.

Mr. Luce: None.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Civil Servants (Statistics)

49. Mr. Yeo asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the breakdown between non-industrial and industrial civil servants of the 133,000 net reduction in Civil Service manpower in the period April 1979 to April 1985.

Mr. Brooke: Of the net reduction of 133,000 civil servants between 1 April 1979 and 1 April 1985, 68,000 were non-industrial and 65,000 were industrial civil servants.

Financial Management Initiative

50. Mrs. Virginia Bottomley asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on progress on the financial management initiative launched in May 1982.

Mr. Brooke: The financial management initiative has successfully stimulated better planning and control in the public services. We have begun to see the valuable results.

Objectives are set with clearer targets for what is to be achieved, by when and at what cost. There are many more measures of output and performance and regular evaluations of what has been achieved. Individual managers are much more aware of their costs and responsibilities, and are increasingly managing budgets which give them the initiative to make savings and improve the effectiveness of services. Work continues in each Department to make these approaches more widespread.

Competitive Tendering and Privatisation

51. Mr. Gregory asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on his policy for an extension of competitive tending and privatisation by Government Departments.

Mr. Moore: Our policy is to transfer work out of the public service wherever this is commensurate with sound management and provides good value for money for the taxpayer. As the House knows, Government Departments are now required to test the market in specified areas.

Mortgage Interest

Mr. Maxton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer (1) what is the total number of mortgagors in (a) Greater London and (b) the south-east of England receiving mortgage interest relief; what was the average mortgage interest relief per mortgagor in 1985-86 in (i) Greater London and (ii) the south-east of England; and what was the cost to the Exchequer of mortgage interest relief in 1985-86 in (1) Greater London and (2) the south-east of England;

(2) what is the total number of mortgagors receiving mortgage interest relief in England, Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and the United Kingdom; what was the average mortgage interest relief per mortgagor per annum in England, Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and the United Kingdom in 1985-86; and what was the total cost to the Exchequer of mortgage interest relief in 1985-86 in England, Scotland, Wales, Northern Ireland and the United Kingdom.

Mr. Moore: The information is in the table. The analysis by place of residence is approximate.

Mortgage Interest Tax Relief 1985-86

	Number of mortgagors (thousands)	Direct revenue cost of relief Total cost £ million	Cost per mortgagor £
England	7,170	4,250	590

Of which:
Greater London	830	570	690
SE (including Greater London)	2,920	2,010	690

Mr. Raynsford asked the Chancellor of the Exchquer if he will publish a table showing the total value of mortgage interest relief forgone as tax income by the Inland Revenue, the total number of recipients of this relief and the average amount of relief received per mortgagor, respectively, in the United Kingdom, in England and in Greater London in each tax year for 1978-79 to 1985-86 and give an estimate for 1986-87.

Mr. Moore: The latest estimates are in the table. Estimates for years up to 1982-83 are based on the surveys of personal incomes. From 1983-84 onwards, the figures include mortgages previously under the option mortgage scheme which was subsumed within the arrangements for giving mortgage interest relief at source. Detailed information by region is not available from Inland Revenue records for years from 1983-84 and the estimates for London and England are approximate.

Confidential Information (Compensation)

Mr. Dalyell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent representations he has received regarding Treasury guidelines for compensation for persons disclosing confidential information who have in consequence saved the taxpayer substantial sums of money.

Mr. MacGregor: I have received no representations since I replied to the hon. Member on 9 April.

Knitting Industry

Sir John Farr asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many representations he has received from firms in the knitting industry complaining of the methods used by Inland Revenue staff to secure payment of taxes, including resort to distress proceedings when tax is one day overdue; if he will issue guidance to the Inland Revenue regarding the means used to secure payment of taxes and the criteria to be used in deciding on the point at which any legal proceedings should be instigated; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: I have received representations from the Leicester and District Knitting Industry Association Ltd. about these and other matters of concern to its members, and I shall be replying shortly. Inland Revenue officials have a responsibility to collect tax which is overdue, but they carry out these duties in accordance with departmental instructions. If my hon. Friend has information suggesting that a particular case has been mishandled, I will be pleased to inquire into it.

EC Budget

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what important aspects of the European Economic Community Council's approach to the problem of budget discipline were not endorsed by the Assembly in its recent meeting with the Council.

Mr. Brooke: The delegation from the European Parliament spoke of its concern about the setting of reference framework limits for expenditure and made clear that it could not support the restraints which the Council's budget discipline conclusions implied for non-obligatory expenditure in areas such as the structural funds and new policies.

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer why the European Assembly has refused to discuss with the Council the reference framework for the 1987 European Economic Community budget.

Mr. Brooke: In a declaration issued following its meeting with the Council on 28 April, the European Parliament delegation claimed that a discussion of the 1987 reference framework did not make sense, given that there was no agreement on the general aims of budget discipline between the Council and the Parliament and given that the starting points of the discussion, and in particular the content of the supplementary budget for 1986, were not known.

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if Her Majesty's Government will seek to ensure that when the presidents of the three European Economic Community institutions meet to discuss possible procedures for a budget discipline common to Council, Commission and Assembly, no additional financial power is granted to the Assembly; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The powers of the European Parliament over budgetary matters are laid down in articles 199 to 209 of the EEC treaty. The treaty can be amended only by the unanimous agreement of the member states and their Parliaments.

Foreign Debt

Mr. Terlezki asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what was the foreign debt by Her Majesty's Government for the years 1975 to 1980 and 1980 to 1985; how much is now outstanding; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The information requested is as follows:

Official debt ($ million)

End-period
1975	13,975
1976	19,358
1977	25,532
1978	23,424
1979	20,748
1980	17,390
1981	13,299
1982	12,146
1983	11,958
1984	11,283
1985	14,637

Further details are given in table 10.8 of CSO financial statistics.

Trustee Savings Bank

Mr. Dykes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the development of plans for the public flotation of the Trustee Savings Bank group following the enabling legislation of 1985.

Mr. Ian Stewart: The primary function conferred on the Treasury by the Trustee Savings Banks Act 1985 is the appointment of a vesting day under section 1(4) of that Act. The Treasury is considering the judgment given in the High Court on 28 April. I understand that Mr. Ross, the TSB depositor in whose case the Inner House in Scotland gave judgment on 12 March, has served notice of petition of appeal to the House of Lords.

Single European Act

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer why Her Majesty's Government agreed to the harmonising of EEC turnover taxes and excise duties in the Single European Act; and what steps he is taking to achieve this objective.

Mr. Brooke: The Government have not agreed to the harmonisation of turnover taxes and excise duties in the Single European Act. The relevant article provides that indirect taxes should be harmonised "to the extent that such harmonisation is necessary to ensure the establishment and operation of the internal market".

The question of how far harmonisation of indirect taxes is needed in order to remove barriers to trade is currently being studied by an ad hoc group of senior officials set up by the Council of Economic and Finance Ministers in January. Decisions on what action may be necessary to complete the internal market will be taken in the light of the group's report.

Value Added Tax

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish a table showing the EEC nations which apply value added tax to gas, electricity and food, respectively, and the rates concerned.

Mr. Brooke: The latest information available is as follows:

	Gas per cent.	Electricity per cent.	Food per cent.*
Belgium	17	17	6
Denmark	22	22	22
France	18·6	18·6	†5·5
Germany	14	14	7
Ireland	10	0	‡0
Italy	9	9	‖2·9
Luxembourg	6	6	¶3·6
Netherlands	19	19	5
Portugal●	8(6)	8(6)	■0·8(6)
Spain	12	12	6

* Excluding luxury foods.
† With certain exceptions, e.g. sweets, ice-cream, margarine, which are standard-rated at 18·6 per cent.
‡ With certain exceptions, e.g. ice-cream, confectionery, chocolate, potato products, salted and roasted nuts, which are standard-rated at 25 per cent.
‖ The lower rate applies to essential foodstuffs such as bread, pasta and fish.
¶ The lower rate applies to meat, meat products, bread and butter.
● The rates shown in brackets apply to the autonomous regions of the Madeira and Azores Archipelagos.
■ The zero rate applies to unprepared foodstuffs.

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if any extra Customs and Excise staff have been deployed to investigation work as a result of the implementation of the Keith committee proposals for value added tax; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 2 May 1986, c. 530]: The report of the Keith committee on the enforcement powers of the Revenue departments noted that there was a high resource cost in investigating VAT fraud to a criminal standard and it proposed a civil penalty procedure for the less serious acts of dishonesty. Section 13 of the Finance Act 1985, which allows for the civil treatment of VAT evasion, was enacted for this purpose. A substantial proportion of all evasions will now be investigated under this section and this may result in some reduction in the resources deployed on each such case. The overall staffing effect will not, however, be known until experience is gained of investigating evasions to a civil standard and there is knowledge of the number of appeals to the VAT tribunals.

EEC Rebate

Mr. Marlow asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will set out the text whereby the adjustment to the United Kingdom EEC rebate is dependent on supplementary EEC budgets.

Mr. Brooke: The methodology for the correction of the United Kingdom's EEC abatements is set out in COM(85)36, a copy of which is available in the Library of the House. This document was debated extensively in Committee of the whole House during consideration of the European Communities (Finance) Act 1985 on 1 July 1985, at columns 78-116.

Economic Costs and Changing Prices (Report)

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer why the report to the Treasury by an advisory group, accounting for economic costs and changing prices, completed in March 1986, has not been published.

Mr. MacGregor: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Personal Equity Plans

Mrs. Roe asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a further statement about the scheme for personal equity plans announced in his Budget speech.

Mr. Lawson: In my Budget speech I announced a scheme, known as the personal equity plan, under which investors will be able to invest up to £2,400 a year in shares. They will not pay capital gains tax on disposals nor income tax on reinvested dividends, provided they remain in the scheme for a qualifying period of between 12 and 24 months. Once the qualifying period has ended, investments may be realised without loss of tax relief.

The Inland Revenue has today published a document, as a basis for consultation, called "Personal Equity Plans: A Prospectus for Potential Plan Managers". It sets out the broad shape of the scheme and is designed for people interested in becoming plan managers. A copy of the prospectus has been deposited in the House of Commons Library.

The prospectus sets out the main criteria for the personal equity plan scheme:

—Qualifying investment will be confined to ordinary shares in United Kingdom-incorporated companies quoted on the stock exchange.
—There must be a clear link between the investor and his or her shares — so that investors may attend company AGMs, exercise voting rights, receive company information and benefit from shareholders' privileges.
— Dividends on investment must be ascribed to individual investors.
—Limits on holding assets in liquid form in plans.
—Charges by plan managers must be transparent.

The prospectus explains who can invest in the plans, how investments will be made, and what investments qualify. Special arrangements will be made to allow investment, up to a lower limit, in unit trusts and investment trusts.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

GCHQ

52. Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what action he intends to take against civil servants at Government communications headquarters who have rejoined a trade union.

Mr. Renton: Employees at GCHQ who have informed management that they have rejoined unions have been sent letters informing them that they will be subject to disciplinary proceedings for being in breach of their terms and conditions of service.

The director of GCHQ has advised the Head of the Civil Service that on present information he does not regard dismissal as an appropriate penalty in the proposed proceedings for those who have rejoined a union in the circumstances of the past months unless there are factors of which he is unaware.

Contadora Peace Process

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if the Contadora peace process includes measures to monitor border violations between Nicaragua and its neighbours; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Yes. The aim of the Contadora peace process is to reach a comprehensive negotiated and verifiable settlement of tensions in Central America. The draft Contadora Act includes an undertaking to end cross-border violations and subversion and makes provision for mechanisms to monitor infringements of the agreement once signed.

Guatemala

Mr. Deakins asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what criteria he uses when assessing the acceptability to Her Majesty's Government of elections held in Central American states; how far these criteria were fulfilled in recent elections in Guatemala; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: As my right hon. and learned Friend, the then Minister of State, the Member for Edinburgh, Pentlands (Mr. Rifkind) told the hon. Member on 16 April 1985, we expect voters to be offered a genuine political choice in elections and that the political parties should have equal freedom to campaign. In Guatemala, official Western observers were satisfied that both these criteria were met.

Windscale Fire

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether the full report of the inquiry into the Windscale fire in 1975 was ever made available to the Soviet Union.

Mr. Eggar: No. We have however recently given the Soviet Government information on how that fire was tackled.

Nuclear Reactors (Safety)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether a safety assessment by the Central Electricity Generating Board of a nuclear reactor of a type akin to that at Chernobyl was ever made available to the Soviet Union.

Mr. Eggar: No.

Soviet Union

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs (1) if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's current relations with the Soviet Union;

(2) what representations have been made to the Government of the Soviet Union regarding the lack of progress towards democracy in that country; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: We seek a more productive relationship with the Soviet Union based on dialogue and contact at many levels. To this end, we have promoted a full programme of bilateral exchanges covering many areas. This policy does not imply approval of the Soviet system of government. In discussions with the Russians and in the conference on security and co-operation in Europe we criticise aspects of Soviet practice, including the denial of human rights and of freedoms enjoyed in the West.

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether he will make representations to the Government of the Soviet Union regarding that country's adherence to the Vienna International Atomic Agency agreement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We have made a number of requests for information to the Soviet Government about the Chernobyl accident. As a member of the International Atomic Energy Agency they are expected to provide full information about it. We anticipate that the agency will have a major role in assessing the consequences of the Chernobyl accident and recommending action for member states based on its conclusions.

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what measures are being taken by Her Majesty's Government to seek to encourage more visits by ordinary citizens from the Soviet Union to the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: We wish to promote better contacts between the peoples of the Soviet Union and the United Kingdom, and more visits by Soviet citizens. We are currently pressing for better contacts at the conference on security and co-operation in Europe expert meeting on human contacts in Berne. Soviet abolition of exit visas would be the best means of encouraging more travel by Soviet citizens.

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what part Her Majesty's Government are playing in international efforts to bring about a closer understanding between the 50 million Ukrainians in the Soviet Union and the United Kingdom; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: We play a leading part in efforts within the conference on security and co-operation in Europe to bring about better understanding between the peoples of the Soviet Union, including the Ukrainians, and those of the United Kingdom. A meeting is currently taking place in Berne on human contacts.

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is the latest response by the Soviet Union in the implementation of human rights provision in the Helsinki agreement; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer which I gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Nottingham, East (Mr. Knowles) on 4 March at column 89. There has been no discernible improvement in the human rights situation in the Soviet Union recently. We shall continue to raise with the Soviet authorities on every suitable occasion their shortcomings in implementing the human rights provisions of the Helsinki Final Act.

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many British citizens are at present employed in the Ukraine in the construction industry, education, the medical field, agriculture and technology; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Her Majesty's embassy in Moscow is in touch with the one British subject, an engineer, known to be in western Ukraine. The embassy knows of a party of 25 students who were due to leave Yalta on 10 May for Moscow and of a British teacher in Kharkov. Neither Yalta nor Kharkov have been the subject of advisory warnings of areas not to be visited.

Soviet Nuclear Accident

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will discuss the implications of the nuclear explosion at Chernobyl in the Ukraine with representatives of the Soviet Government; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: We have been in regular touch with the Soviet authorities both in London and Moscow since the explosion at Chernobyl. Most recently I spoke to the minister-counsellor at the Soviet embassy on Friday 9 May.

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what reports have been received from Her Majesty's ambassador in Moscow as to how many people have been seriously affected by the recent nuclear explosion (a) in Chernobyl, (b) in Kiev, (c) in the Ukraine in general, (d) in Minsk and (e) in Biyelorussia; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Her Majesty's ambassador in Moscow is hampered by the absence of official Soviet statistics about the number of people seriously affected in the areas mentioned. It is therefore impossible to make an accurate statement. In view of the uncertainty, we are currently advising British citizens etc not to travel to Kiev and western Ukraine, Minsk and Biyelorussia, Lithuania and north-eastern Poland unless absolutely necessary.

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement on the latest reports received from Her Majesty's ambassador in Moscow about the causes and nature of the Chernobyl nuclear reactor catastrophe.

Mr. Eggar: We are receiving regular reports from Her Majesty's embassy in Moscow about the disaster at Chernobyl. The embassy is however not able to obtain a complete picture, given the absence of an official authoritative and detailed Soviet explanation of the causes and nature of the disaster.

Kiev (British Consul)

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will take immediate steps to facilitate the establishment of a British consul in Kiev; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: No. There are no plans to open a British consulate in Kiev. The interests of British subjects who reside in or visit the Ukraine are covered by the consular services of Her Majesty's embassy, Moscow.

Human Rights

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will seek to establish an international conference to deal exclusively with human rights, and in particular the subject of the re-unification of families; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: Family reunification is currently being discussed at Berne at the conference on security and co-operation in Europe expert meeting on human contacts. There will be a further opportunity to press for progress over divided families, and human rights, at the CSCE follow-up meeting which convenes in Vienna in November. The Government will ensure that due regard is paid at Vienna to the human rights and humanitarian provisions of the Helsinki Final Act and Madrid concluding document.

Luxembourg Compromise

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will provide details of the four occasions on which Her Majesty's Government have invoked the Luxembourg compromise at meetings of EEC Councils of Ministers; if he will further state dates on which the Ministers concerned advised the Presidents of the Councils in question that the Luxembourg compromise was being invoked; and what was the outcome of the use of the procedure in each case.

Mrs. Chalker: There have been two occasions on which the United Kingdom has utilised the machinery of the Luxembourg compromise; and a number of other occasions when the machinery has been used, but not at our instigation:

On 25 July 1978, the United Kingdom asked for a vote to be deferred in the Fisheries Council because Commission proposals for the conclusion of fisheries agreements with Sweden and the Faroes affected our "fundamental national interests". No vote was held.

On 18 May 1982 at the Agriculture Council, the United Kingdom representative asked for a vote on the annual price-fixing to be deferred because the United Kingdom had been unable to secure satisfactory decisions on the overall Community budget. We were not supported on that occasion by enough member states to defer a decision because others took the view that the compromise could only be invoked in support of a national, interest directly related to the subject under discussion.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will list the number of occasions on which the Luxembourg compromise has been formally invoked by each member state of the EEC, respectively, since 1973; and if he will publish a table showing the dates on which the procedure has been formally notified to the President of the respective Council of Ministers by the nations concerned.

Mrs. Chalker: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Inverness, Nairn and Lochaber (Sir Russell Johnston) on 5 February at column 178.

European Union

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs why he agreed on behalf of Her Majesty's Government to a formal commitment to European union in the Single European Act; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: European union is mentioned only in the preamble to the Single European Act. My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister agreed to the text since it recalls the commitment which member states entered into in the Stuttgart declaration of 19 June 1983. The declaration stated:

"European Union is being achieved by deepening and broadening the scope of European activities so that they coherently cover, albeit on a variety of legal bases, a growing proportion of member states' mutual relations and of their external relations".

Golden Temple, Amritsar

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what information he has about the recent disturbances at the Golden Temple in Amritsar; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Eggar: Five Sikhs, who had led an occupation of the Golden Temple since January, declared the "independence" of "Khalistan" on 29 April. Their occupation was terminated by the Punjab police and Indian paramilitary forces on 30 April. Casualties and damage are reported to have been minimal.

Transport Links, Hong Kong

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will seek the extension of the study of new transport links between Tsuen Wan and Tuen Mun, Tsuen Wan and Yuen Long, Tai Po and Yuen Long, and Sheung Shui and Yuen Long to include consideration of those links being built as extensions of the Kowloon-Canton railway system or the mass transit railway system as well as the proposed light rail transit system, and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: The transport study in question, which is being undertaken by the Kowloon-Canton railway corporation, will study only light rail transit extensions. However, if the patronage forecasts indicate that a heavy rail extension may be more suitable, the corporation will not ignore that conclusion. At the same time, the mass transit railway corporation is also studying the alternative of a mass transit railway extension from Tsuen Wan to Yuen Long.

These matters are totally within the competence of the Hong Kong Government, which will in due course evaluate all options before making a decision.

WEU (Terrorism)

Sir Anthony Grant asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what role he envisages for the Western European Union in the fight against terrorism; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Renton: At Venice on 29-30 April, Foreign and Defence Ministers of the Western European Union underlined the need to implement the measures agreed upon by the countries of Western Europe to combat terrorism. This action is being co-ordinated amongst the Twelve. As my right hon. Friend the Prime Minister said in her reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Welwyn Hatfield (Mr. Murphy) on 8 May, this forum includes all WEU member states and ensures the widest possible co-ordination of the European response to terrorism.

Chemical Weapons

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what response the Government have made to the latest Union of Soviet Socialist Republic's proposals with regard to on site inspection of the destruction of chemical weapons plants in the event of a chemical weapons ban.

Mr. Renton: We hope that recent Soviet comments on verification may represent a small though useful step. But the Soviet Union remains silent on the details of other crucial verification issues, such as the non-production of chemical weapons in the civil chemical industry and inspection on challenge. We will be addressing these and other issues with the Soviet Union when the negotiations for a verifiable global ban on chemical weapons at the conference on disarmament resume on 10 June.

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what is Her Majesty's Government's policy on the production of chemical weapons, or chemical weapon components, by British firms.

Mr. Renton: We attach a high priority to the agreement of a global and verifiable ban on all chemical weapons, which we believe will need to include controls on the manufacture of certain chemicals in civil industry. The United Kingdom abandoned its chemical warfare capability in the 1950s. Following the use of chemical weapons in the Gulf conflict, controls have been imposed on the export of certain civil chemicals which could be used in the manufacture of lethal chemical agents.

HOUSE OF COMMONS

Kidnap Insurance

Mr. Campbell-Savours asked the Lord Privy Seal, pursuant to the answer of 1 May, Official Report column 1107, concerning kidnap insurance, if he will now make a statement on his investigation into this matter.

Mr. Biffen: The incident referred to was a matter for the Irish authorities to deal with. I do, however, understand the hon. Member's general concern about kidnap ransom insurance and the possibility that terrorists may gain funds from the payment of extortion demands. These issues are being carefully considered by my right hon. Friend the Home Secretary.

ENVIRONMENT

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the estimated cost of transporting nuclear waste to each of the four proposed nuclear waste sites.

Mr. Waldegrave: The overall cost of land transport of low level radioactive waste to any of the proposed disposal sites would be about £30 million (1985 values) over the period to 2030. Further details are given in "Assessment of Best Practicable Environtal Options for Management of Low and Intermediate Level Solid Radioactive Wastes", HMSO, March 1986.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will introduce legislation to require local authorities within whose areas nuclear dumps may be located, to monitor radiation levels at the site.

Mr. Waldegrave: This is not necessary. Disposal of radioactive waste at a NIREX site will be subject to authorisation under the provisions of the Radioactive Substances Act 1960. The authorisation will provide for adequate environmental monitoring by the site operator. Monitoring will also be carried out by Her Majesty's Radiochemical Inspectorate and inspectors from the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he has any proposals for the improvement of procedures in communication between the Radiochemical Inspectorate and the local authority at which a nuclear dump may be sited; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will introduce legislation to require consultations between the Radiochemical Inspectorate and the technical officer of a local authority where nuclear waste is to be deposited; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: We have no plans to introduce such legislation. Her Majesty's Radiochemical Inspectorate will liaise with local authorities as necessary.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how his Department monitors current safety standards for the disposal of nuclear waste at Drigg.

Mr. Waldegrave: Disposals of radioactive waste at the Drigg site operated by British Nuclear Fuels plc are subject to controls under the Radioactive Substances Act 1960. The certificates of authorisation issued under the Act contain limitations and conditions designed to ensure that the effects of disposal are regulated in accordance with the internationally recommended standards of radiological safety. Officers of the Radiochemical Inspectorate in my Department visit the premises where radioactive waste is produced to check that conditions of authorisation are being complied with. Regular inspections of the Drigg disposal site are also made. Leachate from trenches is collected and monitored during discharge and check samples are taken with particular reference to the levels of activity in the site stream.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how much nuclear low level waste and intermediate level waste is generated in the United Kingdom as a result of reprocessing spent oxide fuel from Japan and West Germany.

Mr. Waldegrave: No Japanese fuel has been reprocessed in the United Kingdom to date. Some German oxide fuel was reprocessed in the early 1970s. This produced 11 cubic metres of intermediate-level waste and 200 cu m of low level waste.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how much spent oxide fuel originally from Japan has been returned to Japan without having been reprocessed in the United Kingdom since 1979.

Mr. Waldegrave: No irradiated oxide fuel has been returned to Japan since 1979.

Mr. Austin Mitchell: asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many tonnes of spent oxide fuel have been reprocessed and returned to West Germany; how much consequent low level waste has been dumped in the United Kingdom from 1979 to date; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: No West German oxide fuel has been reprocessed, or returned to West Germany since 1979 and therefore no low level waste has arisen from this source.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will make it his policy that no imported nuclear waste, whether low level or intermediate, will be dumped in any new disposal sites.

Mr. Waldegrave: There are no plans to import nuclear waste.

Mr. Lyell asked the Secretry of State for the Environment what is the total volume of radioactive nuclear waste, differentiating between low level waste, intermediate level waste, and high level waste arising from different sources, namely: reprocessing, power stations, research, medical and industrial sources up to the year 2030 showing the amount from each of the above sources and the extent to which any of low level waste could be categorised as very low level waste.

Mrs. Rumbold: The numbers of cubic metres of conditioned radioactive waste expected to arise from these sources up to 2030 are as follows:

Source	HLW	ILW	LLW
Reactors (committed and proposed)	—	52,000	116,000 *350,000 to
Reprocessing	8,300	87,000	1,200,000
Research/Medical/ Industrial	—	35,000	75,000

* Depending on the degree of compaction.

Further details are given in research report number DOE/ RW/85-124.

Mr. Lyell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what volume of radioactive waste, either low level waste or intermediate level waste, could be reduced in volume either by compaction or incineration and to what extent, stating how far such compaction or incineration could cause such low level waste to be recategorised as intermediate level waste.

Mrs. Rumbold: I am advised that it is possible to reduce the volume of low level waste by at least a factor of three by compaction or incineration. Possibilities for further reduction are being investigated. It is unlikely that incineration could make it possible to recategorise any low level waste as intermediate level waste. Compaction leads to no change in categorisation.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he will make it his policy to reply to Mrs. J. Bourne of 25 Edge avenue, Grimsby, about the South Killingholme potential nuclear waste disposal site in sufficient time for her to have a reasonable opportunity to reply before the special development order is laid; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will make it his policy to reply to Councillor N. Perkins of Oakhurst, 66 Station road, Great Coates, Great Grimsby, about the South Killingholme potential nuclear waste disposal site in sufficient time for him to have a reasonable opportunity to reply before the special development order is laid; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: I shall answer these questions shortly.

Housing Investment Programme

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list for each application for additional housing investment programme resources in 1986-87, submitted by local authorities to his Department's urban housing renewal unit (a) the name of the local authority submitting the application, (b) the name and location of the proposed scheme, (c) whether changes in housing management involved as an integral part of the scheme include (i) decentralised management, or (ii) delegation of management, or (iii) involvement of tenants in other ways, or (iv) other changes, giving details of how tenants are to be involved in other ways or of other changes proposed, (d) the number of new dwellings to be provided, (e) the cost of work to existing dwellings, (f) the cost of work to the environment, (g) the average cost of work per dwelling, (h) the market value of the improved properties (total of existing plus new), (i) how many private developers have been approached to participate in the proposed scheme and what results have arisen from these approaches, (j) the stage reached and forecast timetable for (i) committee for the outline scheme, (ii) tenant consultation, (iii) committee agreement to invite tenders, (iv) decision on tenders and (v) any other approval needed from his Department and (k) the amount of the estimated total cost of the scheme to be met by (i) housing investment programme resources, (ii) urban programme resources for housing related projects, (iii) urban programme resources for community refurbishment schemes, (iv) urban development grant, (v) other public sector funded programmes, (vi) private developer and (vii) housing association (housing association grant element of scheme).

Sir George Young: In addition to the local authorities and estates listed in my answer to the hon. Member for Leeds, Central (Mr. Fatchett) on 3 March at column 34, the following further applications have now been received:

Local authorities	Housing estate
Bradford	Holmewood
Camden	Regents Park Maiden Lane

Full details of schemes which have already been approved in Bolton, Bradford, Calderdale, Coventry, Gateshead, Greenwich, Hull, Knowsley, Leeds, and Waltham Forest were given when I announced them to the House. Other schemes are currently being discussed and developed with the authorities concerned with consequent changes in many cases to the applications originally submitted. Details of the agreed schemes will be announced when the approvals are given.

Licensed Premises (Rating)

Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for the Environment on what basis licensed premises will be re-rated following the introduction of a national non-domestic rate; whether this review will be based on rental or barrellage; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: From the 1990 revaluation onwards, the basis of value for licensed premises, in common with other commercial property, will be net annual value. As their rental value is influenced by their potential trade, it will be necessary for valuation officers to consider both this and any actual rental evidence when preparing their assessments.

Council Dwellings

Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing the total number of council dwellings coming into management, including newly built, acquired, modernised or converted dwellings, for each of the standard regions and for England in the years 1983-84 and 1984-85, with an estimate for 1985-86 and 1986-87.

Sir George Young: The aggregates of figures supplied by local authorities in their 1984 and 1985 housing investment programme returns are as follows. The authorities are not asked to submit forward estimates, nor are any estimates made by my Department.

Dwellings coming into local authority management

Region	April 1983 to March 1984	April 1984 to March 1985

Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the value of the Exchequer subsidies and rate fund contributions, respectively, to English local authority housing revenue account dwellings in total and on a per dwelling basis for the years 1978-79 to 1985-86 with an estimate for 1986-87.

Sir George Young: The information is in the following table. The figures for 1980-81 and earlier years are affected by minor differences of definition.

Repair and Special Grants

Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will estimate the number of repair and special grants to private landlords in the years 1979 to 1985 which were mandatory grants.

Sir George Young: The available data for England are as follows:

	Special grants	Repairs grants
	Mandatory to private landlords and HAs	To private landlords and HAs	All grants	Mandatory grants
	Number of houses		Number of dwellings

Housing Association Dwellings

Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing the total number of housing association dwellings completed, including newly built and rehabilitated dwellings, for letting on a fair rent for each of the regions and for England as a whole in the years 1976-77 to 1985-86, and giving an estimate for 1986-87.

Sir George Young: The available information covers all dwellings newly built or rehabilitated for housing associations and is as follows. It is not the practice for make forecasts for future years.

*Renovations of dwellings owned by housing associations

Rent Rebates

Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will publish a table showing the total cost of rent rebate and rent allowance payments, the total number of recipients of rent rebates and rent allowance and the average rebate/allowance per recipient, respectively, in the United Kingdom, in England and in Greater London in each year from 1978-79 to 1985-86 and giving an estimate for 1986-87.

Sir George Young: Information on costs and numbers of recipients in Great Britain from 1980-81, including estimates for 1986-87, is contained in the public expenditure White Paper Cmnd. 9702. II tables 3.15 and 3.15.6; similar information for Northern Ireland is also available in tables 3.18.42 and 3.18.43. Corresponding figures for 1978-79 and 1979-80 are in Cmnd. 9143. Estimates of costs, recipients and average payments in England and in London and of average payments in Great Britain are as follows:

Total Expenditure on Rent Rebate and Allowance Schemes London and England

Crown Suppliers (Stores)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the total value of goods held in the Crown Suppliers stores at the India pavilion, Exhibition Ground, Wembley and at Milton, near Abingdon, Oxfordshire.

Sir George Young: At 30 April 1986 items worth approximately £1·55 million were held at Wembley, and at Milton approximately £6·2 million. In addition, the Crown Suppliers hold on an agency basis approximately £4·5 million worth of hearing aid equipment owned by regional health authorities and part of a DHSS stockpile of bedding and domestic items for use in emergencies.

Nuclear-free Zones

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to the councils which have declared themselves to be nuclear-free zones.

Mrs. Rumbold: My Department has no detailed information about local authorities' nuclear-free zone activities. My right hon. Friend has, however, received a number of representations about the way some authorities have used their discretionary spending powers to finance and publicise such activities. This is a matter we drew specifically to the attention of the Widdicombe inquiry.

Structure Plan (Bedfordshire)

Mr. Madel asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to announce his decisions on the inquiry into Bedfordshire county council's structure plan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Tracey: My right hon. Friend has today placed on deposit for public comment modifications he proposes to make to the Bedfordshire structure plan alterations, together with the report of the panel which conducted an examination in public into selected matters raised by the alterations. I have written to my hon. Friend enclosing a copy of the report and the modifications.

Property Services Agency, Glasgow

Dame Judith Hart asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the Government properties at present managed and maintained by the Property Services Agency from its area office in Glasgow.

Sir George Young: Approximately 730 properties are managed and maintained by the PSA's Glasgow area office, whose territory stretches from Dumfriesshire to the Outer Hebrides. I shall write to the right hon. Lady giving a complete list.

Radioactivity

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if, further to his answer of 6 May, Official Report, column 62, he will publish the location of the three additional stations for the measurement of radioactivity in rain-water referred to.

Mrs. Rumbold: Aldergrove, Antrim, Snowdon, Gwynedd and Orfordness, Suffolk.

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will give the measured levels of radiation for the isotopes of plutonium, americium, neptunium and strontium for each monitoring site for the period 25 April to the present time; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Data published by the National Radiological Protection Board indicate that none of these elements has been detected.

Water

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what audit control exists to monitor the efficiency and effectiveness of water authorities.

Mr. John Patten: Water authorities report to me, in their audited annual accounts, performance against three controls set by Government. These are (i) the financial target specified in the annual Water Authorities (Return on Assets) Order; (ii) a target performance aim for operating costs, excluding depreciation; (iii) their external financing limit. In addition, auditors undertake value-for-money studies as a routine part of their work.

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has about the comparative average charges to non-metered consumers in each water authority area.

Mr. John Patten: My officials receive from each regional water authority a detailed return of their charges for water supply, sewerage and environmental services. Returns for 1986-87 indicate that average household bills for water, sewerage and environmental services are as follows:

Anglian	116·69
Northumbrian	84·34
North West	85·19
Severn Trent	83·55
Southern	99·58
South-West	110·90
Thames	83·09
Wessex	107·09
Yorkshire	90·96

Anglian Water Authority

Sir Eldon Griffiths asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Bury St. Edmunds of 24 April, Official Report, column 239, what are the problems about which he is in correspondence with the Anglian water authority on the subject of the Middle Level Transfer Order 1985; how soon he expects to resolve them; and if he will make a statement on the position of those farmers who contributed to the capital cost of providing the irrigation water they now are using under the terms of this order, pending its confirmation or extension.

Mr. John Patten [pursuant to his answer, 6 May 1986, c. 167.]: It has come to light that certain provisions of the order may require negative resolution procedure in that they appear to amend an earlier enactment. My officials are exploring urgently with officers of the authority what options are available for achieving an early decision on the scheme. While the Department will do everything it can to this end, the position of the farmers with an interest in the scheme is a matter between them and the water authority.

Nuclear Dumps

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the answer of 28 April, Official Report, column 321, whether the reprocessing wastes referred to include materials contaminated in the course of reprocessing but which do not originate as waste for reprocessing.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his answer, 9 May 1986, c. 307]: Yes.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment, pursuant to the answer of 28 April, Official Report, column 321, what effect his decision to limit the disposal of nuclear waste at NIREX sites to low level waste will have on the future disposal of reprocessing wastes at NIREX sites.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his answer, 9 May 1986, c. 307]: None, unless the possibility mentioned in my answer of 28 April to the hon. Member arises.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many letters and petition signatures for and against the siting of a nuclear waste dump he has received in the month of April from each of the four areas short-listed by NIREX.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his answer, 9 May 1986, c. 307]: In April my right hon. Friend received the following approximate numbers of letters against the siting of a radioactive waste disposal facility at each of the four areas short-listed by NIREX: South Killingholme, 220; Fulbeck, 185; Bradwell, 25; Elstow, 20. A number of postcards were also received. In addition, some 50 letters were received on the subject of radioactive waste management generally. Only two letters were received in favour of NIREX investigating the suitability of a particular site: one each from South Killingholme and Bradwell. I will write to the hon. Member concerning the number of petition signatures received.

Mr. Austim Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether, in view of the changed plans for dumping of nuclear waste, he will defer the date of laying of the special development order.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his answer, 8 May 1986, c. 237]: No.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) if he is satisfied with the adequacy of the consultation procedures and the levels of information available to the public regarding the disposal of nuclear waste and the creation of new dumping sites; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether, in view of the decision to dispose of only low level nuclear waste at one of the four sites, he now intends to publish new information to local authorities about quantities, transportation, method of dumping, safety, risk and other characteristics of nuclear waste dumps.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his answer, 9 May 1986, c. 237]: In 1983-84 my Department consulted widely over the principles to be used in assessing proposals from NIREX. More recently we have consulted on the terms of the special development order which will enable NIREX to undertake geological investigations. We will continue to ensure that adequate information is made available. I understand that NIREX will be revising its public information in the light of the recent decision.

London Boroughs (Sheltered Dwellings)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many sheltered dwellings are maintained by each of the London boroughs; and what percentage that represents of total local authority stock.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his answer, 9 May 1986, c. 298]: The numbers of sheltered dwellings at 1 April 1985 as recorded in the authorities' housing investment programme returns, which are in the Library, and the proportions of each authority's housing stock are as follows:

Local Authorities' Sheltered Dwellings, London: April 1985

Voluntary Organisations (Funding)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is keeping any information on voluntary organisations which have lost their funding following abolition of the Greater London council; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his answer, 9 May 1986, c. 300]: Funding for individual voluntary groups is a matter for the boroughs, and information is not collected by my Department. My discussion with London boroughs and with bodies representing London voluntary organisations indicate that funding in London is continuing at an adequate level.

London Docklands Development Corporation

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the current acreage of the London Docklands Development Corporation owned land by borough location.

Sir George Young [pursuant to his answer, 9 May 1986, c. 301]: Land in LDDC ownership on 31 March 1986, excluding water areas, was as follows:

London borough of Newham—711 acres
London borough of Southwark —233 acres
London borough of Tower Hamlets—256 acres

Parking Fines (Departmental Funds)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many fixed penalty parking fines were paid out of departmental funds in 1985.

Mr Kenneth Baker [pursuant to his answer, 9 May 1986, c. 300]: During 1985 a total of 429 parking fines were paid on behalf of all Government Departments.

Planning Appeals

Mr. Chapman asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will now publish the results of the efficiency scrutiny carried out by his Department into the planning appeals system, including the action plan setting out the objectives for reducing median times for handling appeals.

Mr. Kenneth Baker [pursuant to the reply, 6 May 1986, c. 64]: I have approved the publication of the report of an efficiency scrutiny into the handling of written representations planning appeals and the Department's action plan setting out detailed proposals to improve processing times. Copies have been placed in the Library of the House and will be sent to each local authority.

The report identifies a potential reduction in median handling times from the present 19 weeks to 11 weeks by the end of 1988.

Time savings will flow from measures:

1. to change the initial procedure so that work on the local authority input can be started up to two weeks earlier; this has already been implemented;
2. to encourage improved communication between councils and appellants with clearer decision and grounds of appeal;
3. to set target timetable early in the appeal process; this will give appellants more certainty;
4. to increase personal responsibility within the inspectorate and substantially reduce checking. This will accelerate the issue of decision letters by up to two weeks. This has already been implemented;
5. to invest in information technology to speed up the production and issue of appeal decision letters.

The report makes clear that maximum acceleration will not be achieved without:

1. co-operation from the parties; the Department accepts the responsibility to ensure the parties are aware of the need to change current attitude and practices; to this end it will provide advice and guidances, but it will also provide necessary statutory provision to discipline the process;
2. adequate manpower, in particular extra inspectors, to cope with the surge of cases in the inspectorate which will result from accelerating the process.

The Government accept all the main recommendations of the report. Full details are in the action plan published with the efficiency scrutiny.

In the near future I will publish proposals to speed up the handling of inquiry appeals. However, it should be noted the measures outlined above will also be effective in reducing inquiry appeal processing times.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

CAP (Surplus Products)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, further to his reply dated 21 April Offical Report, columns 39-40, whether he will give a breakdown by product in each case for the years in question.

Mr. Gummer: The breakdown is as follows:

	1975	1984	1985	1986
Export refunds
Cereals	330	918	1,077	2,230
Sugar	28	1,190	1,353	1,192
Milk and Milk Products	331	1,943	2,028	2,403
Beef	146	1,393	1,338	1,132
Public storage costs
Milk and Milk Products	207	508	444	578
Beef	409	195	326	359

Note:

For sources see the reply of 21 April. The figure given for 1975 storage costs in that reply should have read 680 mecu and the footnote should have referred to the 1975 rather than the 1985 source.

Agricultural Production (Spain and Portugal)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether the European Economic Commission has made an estimate of the amount by which production of the principal agricultural products is likely to increase in Spain and Portugal under the common agricultural prices at the current real price level.

Mr. Gummer: The Commission of the European Communities has not published such an estimate. Most Portuguese prices are above EC levels, as are a few Spanish prices. The 10-year transition period and far-reaching changes in marketing organisation are future factors which make such an estimate almost totally impossible.

Milk Quota

Mr. Baldry asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, in calculating the tenants' fraction of the standard milk quota, the rental value of the barren land, defined as that rent attainable if there were no dairy buildings on site, will be excluded.

Mr. Gummer: No. The rent to be taken into account is the actual rent paid by the tenant in the quota base year. This rent relates to the land itself and any buildings or other facilities provided by the landlord.

EC Food (Exports)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a table showing the amounts of foodstuffs exported by the EEC to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and east Europe in 1985; and if he will provide details of the comparable export totals in each of the previous five years.

Mrs. Fenner: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

North-east Salmon Fishery

Mr. Onslow asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is his present estimate of the total number of people in north-east England who are directly or indirectly employed in the north-east drift net salmon fishery; and if he can express the total in terms of man days per year.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Bees

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the changes in the numbers of Britain's bee population over the past 12 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he is taking to encourage the growth and development of the bee-keeping industry; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner: My Department encourages the development of bee-keeping by ensuring a healthy bee population through strict controls over the import of bees and through systematic inspection of bee colonies for American and European Foul Brood. Free advice and a free diagnosis service are provided by the ADAS national bee-keeping unit.

Mr. Teddy Tayor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what representations he has received from growers of oilseed rape about the impact of the decline in bee numbers; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner: We have not received any representations from growers of oilseed rape about the impact of any decline in bee numbers.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what positive contribution is made by the bee population to British agriculture and horticulture; and what importance he attaches to the preservation of the bee population.

Mrs. Fenner: The bee population makes a positive contribution to British agriculture and horticulture through the pollination of a wide range of crops. I believe this is an important contribution and my Department will continue to help beekeepers by promoting a healthy bee population.

Badgers

Dr. David Clark asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what has been the cost of the tuberculosis eradication scheme for badgers for each of the last 10 years.

Mrs. Fenner: The estimated operational costs of badger control in England and Wales for each of the ten years 1975-76 to 1984-85 are shown in the table. An important contributory factor in the increase in costs since 1981-82 was the change from gassing to trapping as the principal method of control in June 1982.

1975-76	90
1976-77	100
1977-78	110
1978-79	160
1979-80	210
1980-81	250
1981-82	370
1982-83	500
1983-84	650
1984-85	680

EC (Food Imports)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was the total volume of food imports to the EEC from East Germany, Poland, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria, Romania, Hungary and the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, respectively, in the most recent annual period for which figures are available.

Mrs. Fenner: The information requested for 1984 is as follows. Figures for 1985 are not yet available on a comparable basis.

Imports of food to European Community 1984*

	Thousand tonnes
East Germany	52
Poland	573
Czechoslovakia	197
Bulgaria	63
Romania	90

Radioactivity

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement on the take-up of radioactive contamination from rainwater into agricultural and horticultural crops.

Mrs. Fenner: My Department has been monitoring the levels of radioactivity in crops since 4 May. These take account of the uptake of radionuclides through all pathways including surface deposition by rainwater. The maximum levels so far found have only been a small percentage of the level above which any action would need to be considered for crops, but monitoring will continue for as long as necessary.

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will now advise people against the drinking of milk direct from farms in areas where high concentrations of radioactivity have been detected; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner: Levels of radioactivity in milk are well below that at which any action would need to be considered. Latest results of milk sampling show that levels of iodine-131, which was initially the most significant radionuclide, are continuing to fall. Radiocaesium, which is longer-lived, is now becoming relatively more significant. This means that the most significant radionuclide is now radiocaesium but levels of this are also well below the action level and have now stabilised and are showing indications of falling.

Fish (Grading)

Mr. Marland asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what plans he has to improve the grading of fish sold in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Gummer: Under the rules of the European Community fisheries policy, the main species of fish must be graded before they are first offered for sale. My right hon. Friends the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Secretary of State for Scotland propose to use their powers under section 2 of the European Communities Act 1972 to lay before Parliament later this year measures to back up the EC requirements in this field.

The Community has laid down standards of freshness and size to which all the main species of fish should be graded before they are offered for sale. Their aim is to improve the saleability of fish and the livelihoods of those who depend on it. Much of the running has so far been made by the fish producer organisations, although the Government are channelling nearly £8 million through the Sea Fish Industry Authority to improve marketing in general. Ministers have now decided that the time is right to take action to back up the Community rules with penalties for failure to observe them. We shall be laying the necessary regulations before Parliament later this year after consultation with interested parties.

Food Sales

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food (1) what was the total cost to the taxpayer for the half value of the 700 tonnes of beef which was shipped to Libya from Troon in Ayrshire on 19 April; and what further liabilities will be borne by the British taxpayer in planned future dispatches;

(2) why Her Majesty's Government paid half the cost of a shipment of 700 tonnes of beef dispatched from Troon, Scotland, on 19 April consigned to Libya; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 23 April 1986, column 164.]: There is no direct liability to the British taxpayer as export refunds are paid from Community funds, although of course these funds are provided in the end by member states. Export refunds are payable on Community beef exports to Libya at the rates which apply to destinations in North Africa and the near and middle east. These vary according to the cut involved and in mid-April ranged from around 20p per pound to around 75p per pound. It is likely that the refund in this case fell in the middle of that range.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will propose at the next meeting of the Council of Ministers that no further export rebates should be paid by the EEC in respect of exports of food to Libya; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will take steps to cease the shipment of beef and other commodities from Scotland to Libya; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 23 April 1986, c. 164]: Exports of agricultural commodities take place under regulations designed to place Commodity exports in a position to compete with supplies at world prices, not to provide special benefits to the recipient countries. The Commission has in addition assured us that no further special refunds will be made available on exports of dairy products to Libya.

Production Statistics

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing how the United Kingdom production of agricultural products subject to the common agricultural policy price compares with 1970-71 production levels.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 25 April 1986, c. 248]: The first block of figures below shows the 1970-71 and 1985 production of the main items subject to the common agricultural policy.

The second block gives, for comparison, similar data for some other items. (All figures are '000 tonnes except where otherwise specified.)

Milk (Radioactivity)

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what was (i) the maximum level of radioactivity in the United Kingdom measured in milk in the period 30 April to the latest available date and the date and site of this measurement, (ii) the derived emergency reference level for radioactivity in milk used in the United Kingdom and (iii) the emergency reference level of radioactivity in milk recommended by the International Atomic Energy Agency; and if he will make a statement advising on contingency action in the event of radioactivity above safe levels in milk supplies.

Mr. Jopling [pursuant to his reply, 9 May 1986, column 267]: (i) The highest levels found in milk in England and Wales were for iodine-131, which reached a maximum of 371 bq/litre on 4 May in one of the areas affected by the high rainfall on the night of Friday 2 May in the north of England. This was one isolated example. In the last few days, while iodine-131 has started to decay quite substantially, the level of caesium has risen to a maximum of 446 bq/litre; (ii) the derived emergency reference level for iodine-131 in milk is 2,000 bq/litre and 3,600 bq/litre for caesium-137; (iii) we are advised by the NRPB that it is not aware of an emergency reference level published by the International Atomic Energy Agency. NRPB action levels used by this Department have been derived from standards published by the International Committee on Radiological Protection. Powers under part I of the Food and Environment Protection Act 1984 would enable us to take immediately any appropriate action to control the sale of milk or other foodstuffs in the event of radioactivity being found above safe levels.

Mr. Frank Cook asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will compare the normal levels of radioactivity in milk with those measured on Wednesday 30 April, Thursday 1 May, Friday 2 May, Saturday 3 May, Sunday 4 May, Monday 5 May and Tuesday 6 May, respectively; if he will also compare these with the derived emergency reference level for radionuclides in milk; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling [pursuant to his reply, 9 May 1986, column 267]: As soon as we heard of the accident at Chernobyl on Monday 28 April, daily sampling of milk was instituted but no effects were detected until Friday 2 May when traces of the predominant radionuclides iodine-131 and caesium-137 were detected for the first time. These are not normally present in milk in the United Kingdom. This triggered intensification of monitoring to give comprehensive national coverage of milk from creameries and individual farms. The majority of results for iodine-131 across the country have remained at around 10 to 50 bq/l and for caesium the majority have been less than 50. However, following heavy rain on Friday evening while the airstream carrying radioactivity from the Chernobyl power station was still over certain parts of the United Kingdom, the levels of milk taken from cows on open pasture on Saturday 3 May reached 350 bq/l for iodine-131 and 200 bq/l for caesium-137. The most radiologically significant nuclide was initially iodine-131, for which emergency reference level is 2,000 bq/l, but as this element declines quickly, caesium-137 is now being relatively significant.

Because of the uneven incidence throughout the country, it is not possible to give a single figure for the levels of radioactivity in milk on a daily basis from Wednesday 30 May until Tuesday 6 May but the highest level reached on any reading, which was from cows on open pasture, was on 4 May when it reached 371 bq/l for iodine-131.

Frozen Food

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food, pursuant to his answer of 6 May to the hon. Member for Great Grimsby, whether he has any proposals to compensate British frozen food manufacturers for the loss of markets in Spain resulting from the increased tariff on frozen vegetables in the treaty of accession of Spain.

Mrs. Fenner [pursuant to her reply, 9 May 1986, column 267]: As I explained in that answer, it is difficult at this stage to make any precise assessments of the implications for our exporters' access to the Spanish market. We are actively seeking a reduction in the Spanish tariff on frozen peas and have no proposals to compensate British exporters affected by a Community problem.

Spanish Corn and Sorghum

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the current percentage level of variable levy which is applicable to imports of corn and sorghum to Spain in consequence of the accession of Spain to the European Economic Community; and what was the level of levy applied before the treaty of accession was signed.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 8 May 1986, column 243]: Third country imports of maize (corn) and sorghum to Spain are liable to Community import levies, adjusted by the accession compensatory amounts set out in regulation 576/86. Community import levies are specific amounts equivalent to the difference between world prices and EC threshold prices, and are calculated daily by the Commission. The average rate of levy, net of ACA on imports into Spain from 1 March to April were 140·92 ECU/tonne and 134·31 ECU/tonne for maize and sorghum, respectively. Before accession, imports of maize and sorghum to Spain were generally liable to a temporaliy reduced import duty of 0·9 per cent. of the CIF value and a home compensation tax of 8 per cent. levied on the CIF value increased by 1 per cent. In addition regulatory duties also applied; in the period immediately prior to accession these were 10,202 pesetas/tonne and 9,332 pesetas/tonne for maize and sorghum respectively.

SOCIAL SERVICES

North-West Regional Health Authority

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he is satisfied with the scheduling arrangements for capital spending by the North-Western regional health authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: Health authorities are required to produce capital programmes which will best promote their strategic plans and which most effectively manage the considerable capital resources available. I understand that, in consultation with its district health authorities, this is what North-Western regional health authority is attempting to do.

Old Persons' Homes

Mr. Park asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the total annual sum paid each year since 1980 to claimants in respect of residence and maintenance in old persons' homes in Coventry.

Mr. Major: I regret that this information is not readily available and could be obtained only by a special exercise which would be disproportionately expensive.

Benefits (Burnley)

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people are in receipt of (a) supplementary benefit and (b) unemployment benefit in the Burnley constituency; and what have been the comparative figures on an annual basis since 1979.

Mr. Major: The information is not available in the precise form requested. The Burnley constituency is covered by the Department's local office at Burnley for supplementary benefit purposes and by two unemployment benefit offices in Burnley and in Nelson for unemployment benefit purposes. The boundaries of these offices are not conterminous with those of the Burnley constituency.

The following figures show the total number of people claiming supplementary benefit from the Department's Burnley office at 11 February 1986, the latest available, and at comparable dates since 1979.

	Number
1979	10,483
1980	9,972
1981	11,586
1982	13,478
1983	15,561
1984	16,020
1985	16,504
1986	16,463

Source 100 per cent. coupt of live cases in action.

Figures of people receiving unemployment benefit from the unemployment benefit offices in November 1985, the latest available, and at comparable dates since 1979 are as follows:

	Number
November 1979	1,165
November 1980	2,951
February 1982*	4,542
November 1982	3,526
November 1983	2,896
November 1984†	—
November 1985	2,344

* Figures for November 1981 are not available due to industrial action. These figures relate to February 1982.

† Figures for November 1984 are not available due to Industrial action.

Note: People simultaneously in receipt of supplementary benefit and unemployment benefit are included in both sets of figures.

Hearing Therapists

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many persons there are with substantially impaired hearing in England; and how many hearing therapists are employed by each health authority in England.

Mr. Whitney: As at 31 March 1983, the latest date for which figures are available, the numbers of hearing impaired people registered with local authorities in England were 16,113 deaf with speech, 15,722 deaf without speech and 47,179 hard of hearing. It is known, however, that these figures are not representative of the true prevalence of hearing impairment in the population. The profession of hearing therapy has been developed in this country only since 1978-79 and we understand that at present about 51 hearing therapists are in post in England, spread through all 14 regions.

Heart Disease (Asians)

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has to respond to the report on coronary heart disease and Asians in Britain sent to him by the Coronary Prevention Group for the Confederation of Indian Organisations.

Mr. Whitney: This very recent report will be studied carefully before deciding what response is called for.

Wandsworth Health Authority

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the current allocation of funds to the Wandsworth health authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: In 1986-87 Wandsworth health authority will receive a total revenue cash limit of £90,657,000 and a total capital allocation of £997,000 (includes joint finance).

The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of South-West Thames regional health authority, which is responsible for allocating funds to its district health authorities, for any additional information.

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the present number of nurses' homes or flats within the Wandsworth health authority area.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that this information is not held centrally. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of the Wandsworth health authority for this information.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what savings in expenditure on housing benefit he expects to make in 1986-87 and 1987-88 as a result of his proposal to increase the main housing benefit needs allowance in July 1986 by the same cash amounts as the retirement pension rather than according to the normal uprating formula.

Mr. Major: No comparison is available since the traditional uprating formula, which has sometimes produced reductions in entitlement in the past, could not be used on this occasion because the measurement period for the transitional July uprating covered only May 1985 to January 1986.

Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will estimate (a) the number of awards of the supplementary benefit non-householder housing addition to those aged 21 to 24 years, (b) the number of households receiving housing benefit containing non-dependents between the ages of 21 and 24 years, in respect of whom deductions from housing benefit are made and (c) the net annual saving in benefit expenditure he expects to make as a result of the proposed changes to the rules governing non-householders and non-dependants aged between 21 and 24 years in July 1986;

(2) what is his latest estimate of the proportion of (a) pensioner households, (b) households with dependent children and (c) other households who are taking up their entitlement to standard rent rebates, rent allowances and rate rebates under the housing benefit scheme.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have replies as soon as possible.

Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the cost of total expenditure on housing benefit payments for each financial year beginning in 1982-83 to the present, showing (a) the division between standard and certificated housing benefit, (b) the division between rate rebates, rent rebates and rent allowances and (c) the cost of housing benefit supplement.

Mr. Major: The information is given in the tables.

Notes:

1. Figures for 1985-86 are estimates and are subject to revision, as are earlier years in cases where individual authorities' claims have still to be finalised.
2. All figures are rounded to the nearest £10 million; consequently some totals may not be equal to the sum of their component parts.
3. Figures for 1982-83 reflect that housing benefit was only introduced for some from November 1982. Housing benefit for all was introduced from April 1983.

Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the increase in expenditure if the housing benefit rent and rate tapers, mentioned in the social security White Paper (Cmnd. 9691), were instead set at (a) 37 per cent. on rent and 20 per cent. on rates and (b) 28 per cent. on rent and 10 per cent. on rates.

Mr. Newton: We estimate that the increase in expenditure would be of the order of (a) £300 million and (b) £725 million.

Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what will be the housing benefit paid to (a) a single pensioner under 79 years, (b) a single pensioner over 80 years, (c) a pensioner couple under 79 years, (d) a pensioner couple over 80 years, (e) a single parent, working, with one child under 16 years, (f) a couple, one working, with one child under 16 years, (g) a single parent, working, with two children under 16 years and (h) a couple, one working, with two children under 16 years where the rent and rates are (i) 25 per cent. below average, (ii) average and (iii) 25 per cent. above average and gross weekly income is (x) at the level of unemployment benefit and (y) earnings of £45, £55, £65, £75, £85, £95, £110 and £125 a week, under the current provisions and under the assumptions set out in the technical annex to Cmnd. 9691, including the 20 per cent. contribution to rates; and in each case at what level of income the entitlement to housing benefit would disappear.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mrs. Beckett asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report the latest estimates of the number of households receiving housing benefit in Great Britain, showing (a) the division between standard and certificated cases, (b) the division between home owners, council tenants and others, (c) the division between pensioner households, families with children and others, (d) the number receiving rent rebates or allowances only, (e) the number receiving both a rent rebate or allowance and a rate rebate and (f) the number receiving a rate rebate only.

Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report the latest estimates of the number of households receiving housing benefit in Great Britain, showing (a) the division between standard and certificated cases, (b) the division between home owners, council tenants and others, (c) the division between pensioner households, families with children and others, (d) the number receiving rent and rebates or allowances only, (e) the number receiving both a rent rebate or allowance and a rate rebate and (f) the number receiving a rate rebate only.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 12 March 1986, c. 528-29]: I regret that there were a number of minor errors in the table in my reply to the hon. Member for Derby, South (Mrs. Beckett). The corrected information is as follows.

The latest available estimates, based on inquiry information which relates to the autumn of 1984, are given in the following table. Estimates for later dates are currently available only on the basis of a computer simulation model using family expenditure survey data.

Housing Benefit: Autumn 1984

Great Britain, thousands.

	*Standard Housing Benefit	Certificated Housing Benefit†	All Housing Benefit
All Households	3,990	3,210	7,200
Home owners	1,580	690	2,270
Council tenants	1,850	1,970	3,820
Others	560	550	1,110
Pensioners	2,680	1,460	4,140
Families with children	760	920	1,680
Others	540	830	1,370
Rent rebate/allowance and rate rebate	1,900	2,400	4,300
Rent rebate/allowance only	300	100	400
Rate rebate only	1,800	700	2,500

* Estimates of standard housing benefit recipients are mainly derived from the DHSS September 1984 standard inquiry of local authorities supplemented by estimates at the same date made by a computer simulation model of housing benefit entitlement.

† Estimates of certificated housing benefit recipients are derived from the August 1984 supplementary benefit quarterly inquiry. These estimates relate to those certificated to receive housing benefit. A very small proportion may not actually receive housing benefit because of the effect of deductions for non-dependent members of the household but reliable information is not available to quantify this.

Notes:

Estimates of the numbers receiving rent and rate help, rent help only and rate help only are subject to a greater degree of error and are therefore rounded to the nearest 100,000. The remaining estimates are rounded to the nearest 10,000.

The individual figures given may not sum to the total as a result of rounding.

Rate Rebates

Mr. Raynsford asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the local authorities in Great Britain in which (a) more than half and (b) more than a quarter of ratepayers receive 100 per cent. rate rebates.

Mr. Major: I regret that this information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

General Managers

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will give for all general manager appointments at unit level known to his Department (a) the name of the general manager, (b) whether that person was previously employed within the same district or elsewhere in the National Health Service or outside the National Health Service, (c) whether that person was previously employed as an administrator, a treasurer, a nurse, a doctor or in some other capacity and (d) that person's salary as general manager;

(2) if he will give for each health district (a) the name of the general manager, (b) whether that person was previously employed within the same district or elsewhere in the National Health Service or outside the National Health Service, (c) whether that person was previously employed as an administrator, treasurer, nurse, doctor or in some other capacity and (d) that person's salary as general manager.

Mr. Hayhoe: General managers are employees of their health authorities and therefore the hon. Member may wish to approach regional health authority chairmen for some of the information he has requested. Salaries currently in payment are on the basis set out in paragraph 12 of annex C of HC(84)13, a copy of which is in the Library. The latest information held centrally about the previous employment of managers is as follows:

	District General Managers	Unit General Managers
Previous employer
(a) Same National Health Service district	122	294
(b) Other National Health Service district	27	165
(c) Outside the National Health Service	39	50

(a) Administrator	112	297
(b) Treasurer	18	5
(c) Nurse	4	52
(d) Doctor	15	71
(e) Other	—	34

Accident and Emergency Departments

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the National Health Service hospitals which had accident and emergency departments in 1978; and if he will list the hospitals with accident and emergency departments in 1984.

Mr. Whitney: I shall let the hon. Member have the information requested as soon as possible.

Claimants (Camden)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give for the latest available year (a) the number of disqualifactions for unemployment benefit and (b) the number of deductions from supplementary benefit experienced by claimants in Camden on the ground of voluntary unemployment.

Mr. Major: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Amniocentesis

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he is satisfied with the present provision of amniocentesis; and if he will make a statement about the prospects for the extension of this service.

Mr. Whitney: Facilities for amniocentesis are available through all consultant obstetric departments. Extension of the service is a matter for individual health authorities.

Cytotoxic Tests

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement about the cytotoxic test for allergy and its provision on the National Health Service.

Mr. Whitney: The tests done for a particular patient are a matter for the clinical judgment of the responsible medical practitioner. However, we are advised that the results of cytotoxic food tests are likely to be so variable that most allergologists would not regard them as reliable or of value.

NHS (Pay Claims)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what action he will take to ensure that in future pay claims from National Health Service staff reach settlement in a significantly shorter period of time than in the past.

Mr. Hayhoe: If the hon. Member has in mind staff covered by National Health Service Whitley councils, the conduct of pay negotiations is a matter for the two sides to determine.

Coronary Heart Disease

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement about the policy implications for the United Kingdom of the World Health Organisation's study of coronary heart disease published in April.

Mr. Whitney: We are studying the report and will be assessing its implications in developing our policies on combating the present level of coronary heart disease.

Health Authorities

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his answer of Monday 14 April, Official Report, columns 287-90, why it is not his Department's policy to collect details of allocations made by regional to district health authorities.

Mr. Hayhoe: The detail of cash allocations to district health authorities is a matter for regional health authorities. The Department monitors the effect of cash allocations on districts' distance from their resource allocation targets, through regions' annual short term programmes, and receives information on expenditure through districts' annual accounts. Monitoring of cash allocations by the Department in addition would be unnecessary and wasteful.

Research Management

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the report on his Department's research management written by Mr. T. Nodder.

Mr. Whitney: The report by Mr. T. E. Nodder was an internal document. The new chief scientist, when appointed, will be asked to consider Mr. Nodder's report. We hope to announce conclusions on the future of research management arrangements in DHSS in the light of advice from the chief scientist.

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what steps his Department has taken to reappraise its research management structure, as stated in paragraph 97 of the Government response to the second report from the Social Services Committee, 1984-85 Session, Cmnd. 9674.

Mr. Whitney: The process of reappraising the Department's research management structure is continuing. The final outcome will be decided after a new chief scientist has been appointed.

Computers (Procurement Policy)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is Her Majesty's Government's procurement policy on computers for statutory organisations such as regional health authorities.

Mr. Whitney: Comprehensive guidance on the purchasing of computer hardware and software has been issued to all health authorities. This guidance reflects the Government's policy for computer procurement in the public sector generally.

Doctors

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the latest figures of doctor shortages reported by the regional health authorities with the comparative figures for one year ago and five years ago.

Mr. Hayhoe: Statistics on medical posts without permanent holders are collected centrally only for the consultant and senior registrar grades. The latest available figures are given in the following table.

Consultant and Senior Registrar posts not occupied by permanent holders (England, 30 September)

	1980	1984	1985
Consultant posts not occupied by permanent holders	1,106	932	632
of which
wholly or partly occupied by locums	247·8	170·6	209·3
not occupied by locums	673·6	682·8	363·8
Senior registrar posts without permanent holders	227	213	148
of which
wholly or partly occupied by locums	47·1	65·1	51·9
not occupied by locums	175·1	143·9	92·8

Notes:

1. Posts are given in numbers and locum occupancy in whole-time equivalent.

2. Figures for 1980 and 1984 include planning approvals for new posts not advertised by 30 September. Figures for 1985 exclude such approvals.

In 1984-85, the numbers of consultants in post increased by 283 or 2 per cent. from 13,919 to 14,202.

I am considering carefully reports of difficulties of recruiting for junior medical posts in particular areas and in particular specialties, but the total numbers of doctors in hospitals in England increased from 31,515 in 1978 to 35,859 in 1985, or by 13·8 per cent. The comparable 1984-85 increase was 521 or 1·5 per cent.

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many doctors from European Economic Community countries are now in general practice or in hospitals in the United Kingdom compared to one year ago and five years ago.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that information in the form requested is not available. Centrally collected data about hospital doctors classify place of birth (not nationality or country of qualification) by the categories of (i) Great Britain, (ii) Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic and (iii) elsewhere. The latest available figures for the latter two categories are given in the table following.

Table 1: Hospital doctors by place of birth

	Northern Ireland and Irish Republic	Elsewhere
1980	791	10,760
1984	835	10,095
1985	851	10,027

It is generally accepted that doctors born elsewhere are mainly from the New Commonwealth.

Centrally collected information about general medical practitioners does classify place of birth by European Community countries.

Table 2: Unrestricted principals in general practice in England Doctors born in European Community countries other than the UK or the Irish Republic *excludes doctors born in Greece which joined the Community on 1 January 1981.

Published General Medical Council (GMC) figures give numbers of doctors qualified in other European Community countries granted full registration in the United Kingdom but do not show how many so registered exercised the right to practice in the United Kingdom. These figures are as follows.

Central Birmingham Health Authority

Mr. Roger King asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will institute an inquiry into the financial management of Central Birmingham health authority.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Hospital Service, Northamptonshire

Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will set out for each of the last eight years and predictions for the current year, both in cost and real terms and before and after making adjustments for Milton Keynes, the moneys spent both as revenue and capital within the hospital service in Northamptonshire and so far as is possible within the area of the Northampton district health authority.

Mr. Hayhoe: I regret that the information requested is not available centrally. My hon. Friend may wish to consult the chairman of the Oxford regional health authority.

Nurses (Teaching Staff)

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take steps to ensure that the re-grading of nurse educators has the same criteria in applying grade indication factors for each regional health authority.

Mr. Hayhoe: Under the terms of the flexible grading structure for senior educational staff, agreed by the nursing and midwifery staffs negotiating council, employing authorities have discretion to grade individual posts according to the weight of the particular responsibilities attaching to them by applying the nationally agreed "grading indication factors". The agreement also requires regional health authorities to exercise surveillance in order to ensure that grading levels proposed by employing authorities are appropriate to defined responsibilities and in line with existing grading standards.

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the number of nurse teachers now in post in England and Wales; what is the percentage shortfall of the total number of established posts; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: The total number* of all grades of teaching staff funded by the English and Welsh National Boards for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting in March 1985 (the latest date for which figures are available) expressed as whole-time equivalents was 3,557·6 and 213·65 respectively—a total of 3,771·25 for England and Wales.

Detailed information about vacancies is not collected centrally in England, but I am aware that a recent sample survey of English health authorities for the review body for nursing staff, midwives and health visitors showed that at 31 March 1985 6 per cent. of all whole-time equivalent funded posts in education, which includes non-tutorial staff, remained vacant for over three months.

In Wales, the funded establishment and the number in post are matters for the Welsh national board to determine in liaison with individual schools of nursing and details are in the board's annual report for 1984-85, a copy of which is in the Library.

* Source: Annual reports of the English and Welsh national boards for 1984-85.

Drug Trials

Mr. Allan Rogers asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will initiate an immediate investigation into the conduct of those drug field trials in south Wales where participating medical practitioners are receiving payments of £150 per patient, patients are not informed that they are participating in a trial and doctors are, without permission signing consent forms in the names of patients.

Mr. Hayhoe: The hon. Member's question does not supply sufficient information to enable me to identify the particular trials to which he refers. If the hon. Member is able to let me have more information about the trials, either I or my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales will be glad to consider it.

Generics (UK) Ltd.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether Generics (UK) Ltd. has a United Kingdom manufacturer's licence to manufacture medicinal dosage forms or to package by limited assembly only.

Mr. Hayhoe: Generics (UK) Limited has a licence under the Medicines Acts of 1968 and 1971 to manufacture and assemble medicinal products of the description or general classification specified in the licence.

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the overseas sources of the manufacture of medicines in respect of which product licences have been granted to Generics (UK) Ltd.; and whether all these sources have been inspected by the British Medicines Inspectorate in the last 12 months.

Mr. Hayhoe: All information provided to the licensing authority in support of applications made under the Medicine Act 1968 is treated as confidential under that Act.

Following the grant of a product licence, brief details, not including sources of manufacture, are published in the official gazettes.

Not all the manufacturing sites listed as sources for Generics (UK) Ltd. have been inspected within the last 12 months. Inspection of United Kingdom and overseas sites are not necessarily performed on an annual basis.

The frequency of inspections is a matter for the discretion of the licensing authority taking into account all relevant factors.

Community Psychiatric Nurses

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many whole-time equivalent community psychiatric nurses have been employed by each district health authority in each year from 1974 to the latest available date, broken down by (a) registered MNs, (b) RMNS, (c) SEN-M, (d) SEN-MH, (e) others and (f) total in England and Wales.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let the hon. Member have such information as is available as soon as possible.

Immigration Control Procedures

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what assistance his Department provided to the Commission for Racial Equality with regard to its formal investigation into immigration control procedures s810.3 on liaison with other Departments.

Mr. Major: None. I understand that the Home Office wrote in September 1983 to the commission providing information on liaison between itself and the Department.

Insulation Projects

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has for the future funding of local insulation projects run by volunteer groups following the proposed abolition of single payments.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

National Insurance Contributions

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will set out in a table the national insurance contributions liability at its weekly equivalent of (a) contracted-in employees through class 1, (b) contracted-out employees through class 1 and (c) self-employed people through class 2 contributions and class 4 contributions net of tax relief, in 1986-87, assuming their income is at the following constant levels throughout the year: (i) £38, £60, £95, £285, and £1,000 per week, (ii) £2,075 and £4,450 per year and (iii) 0·5, 1·0 and 2·0 times average female earnings and 0·5, 0·75 and 1·5 times average male earnings, respectively, and at the minimum level of income to benefit in full from the tax relief on class 4 contributions at 40 per cent., 45 per cent., 50 per cent., 55 per cent., and 60 per cent. as a single person with no other tax allowances.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 6 May 1986, c. 78]: The information is as follows:

* Figures for class 1 are from national insurance contribution tables and are not exact percentage calculations. Figures for class 4 and associated tax relief are rounded on a weekly basis instead of the normal annual calculation.

† These figures represent the weekly value of the tax relief on class 4 contributions at the proposed 1986-87 tax levels.

‡ A self-employed person with earnings of £38·00 per week will have annual earnings below the 1986-87 small earnings exception limit of £2,075 and may claim exception from payment of class 2 contributions.

‖ Provisional figures for all occupations for February 1986. The average is extrapolated from the April 1985 new earnings survey using the average earnings index. The latter is adjusted for seasonal factors and for the effect of major industrial disputes.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what would be the current level of class 2 national insurance contributions if they had not been reduced in October 1985 and if they had been increased in April 1986 in line with the usual formula; and at that level what would be the extra income to the national insurance fund or the Exchequer.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 6 May 1986, c. 78]: On the assumptions in the hon. Member's question, the 1986-87 class 2 national insurance contribution rate would be £5·10 per week (net of the 30p abatement in force in October 1985). The full year effect on the national insurance fund, including Treasury supplement and interest, is estimated to be £135 million. All figures are calculated on the same basis as the report by the Government Actuary on the draft of the Social Security (Contributions, Re-rating) Order 1985 (Cmnd. 9672).

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what level of class 2 and class 4 contributions would be necessary to ensure that the self-employed paid the full actuarial cost of the benefits which they receive.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 6 May 1986, c. 78]: Self-employed national insurance contribution (NIC) rates were last reviewed in detail when setting NIC rates for 1983-84 (paragraph 5, report by the Government Actuary on the draft of the Social Security (Contributions, Re-rating) Order 1982: Cmnd. 8742). The NIC rates were calculated in accordance with the methods adopted by the Government in 1977, as set out in the report by the Government Actuary on the draft of the Social Security (Contributions, Re-rating) (No. 2) Order 1977 (Cmnd. 7036). Since the last review of self-employed rates for 1983-84, the effective class 1 NIC rates against which comparison is made have remained unchanged. For administrative reasons the self-employed are charged a combination of flat rate (class 2) and profits-related (class 4) NICs. To remain in line with the 1977 method the class 4 rate should remain at its 1983-84 level and has done so: in addition, the class 2 rate would have to be revalued in line with the lower profits limit, (which is itself uprated by the same factor as the basic pension) to produce a class 2 rate in 1986-87 of £5·40 per week.

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what would be the gain to the national insurance fund or the Exchequer of removing the upper earnings limit for class 1 national insurance contributions; and what reduction could be made in the standard rate of contribution using that gain.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 6 May 1986, c. 78]: If the upper earnings limit (UEL) for class 1 national insurance contributions (NICs) were removed from 6 April 1986, but with no change in the UEL for the contracting-out rebate, the full year effect on the national insurance fund, including Treasury supplement and interest, is estimated to be a gain of £780 million.

If that were used to alter NICs in the present employer-employee ratio of 10·45:9 then reductions in the standard rate of 0·30 per cent. and 0·25 per cent., respectively, could be made. These figures assume no change in the reduced rate NICs.

All figures are calculated on the same basis as the report by the Government Actuary on the draft of the Social Security (Contributions, Re-rating) Order 1985 (Cmnd. 9672).

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what would be the gain to the national insurance fund or the Exchequer of removing the reduced rates of national insurance for very low earners, in such a way that the full rate of contribution were payable down to the lower earnings limit.

Mr. Major [pursuant to his reply, 6 May 1986, c. 78]: If from 6 April 1986 national insurance contribution (NIC) rates returned to the pre-October 1985 structure but without an upper earnings limit for employers' NICs, then the full year effect on the national insurance fund, including Treasury supplement and interest, is estimated to be a gain of £1,450 million.

This figure is calculated on the same basis as the report by the Government Actuary on the draft of the Social Security (Contributions, Re-rating) Order 1985 (Cmnd. 9672).

Dentistry (Statistics)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what was the proportion of five-year-olds with dental decay in each year since 1974.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 6 May 1986, c. 87]: This information is not collected annually. Surveys of children's dental health show that the estimated proportion of five-year-olds in England and Wales who had experienced dental decay dropped from 72 per cent. in 1973 to 49 per cent. in 1983.

Primary Health Care

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will place in the Library the data on which paragraph 7 of chapter 6 of the Green Paper on primary health care is based.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 6 May 1986, c. 87]: I have done so.

Family Practitioner Committees

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the performance indicators established for family practitioner committees.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 6 May 1986, c. 87]: I have arranged for a copy of the 1984-85 performance indicators to be placed in the Library together with the 1986 requirements which have recently been issued.

Medicines (Costs)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what was the cost in each year since 1979 of medicines prescribed by doctors and dentists;

(2) what was the cost in each year since 1979 of dispensing medicines prescribed by doctors and dentists.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 6 May 1986, c. 87]: The information available is in the table.

Dental Patients

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the number of persons per general dental practitioner by health district.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 6 May 1986, c. 87]: The information requested is available only in relation to regional health authority and family practitioner committee areas. The position, as at 30 September 1984, was as follows:

Nurses

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what percentage of nurses failed to complete their training in the latest year for which statistics are available.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 9 May 1986, c.291]: Provisional information from the English National Board for Nursing, Midwifery and Health Visiting shows that 5·6 per cent. of the total number of student and pupil nurses at various stages of training discontinued during the year ending March 1986.

Advertising Agencies

Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for Social Services which advertising agencies have been engaged by his Department for each of the past five years; and what sums each have been paid.

Mr. Fowler [pursuant to his reply, 6 May 1986, c*74*]: The information requested is as follows:

PRIME MINISTER

Libya

27. Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister whether, prior to her decision to approve the use of bases in the United Kingdom for the air attack on Libya, President Reagan provided her with any estimate of the scale and type of the additional casualties which he judged would result from the non-use of United Kingdom-based F1-11 aircraft in the operation; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I have nothing further to add to my statement to the House on 15 April.

Lifeboatmen (Taxation)

Sir Peter Emery asked the Prime Minister whether she will take action to ensure that no part of the call-out payments made to the men who man the lifeboats around Britain's shores should rank for tax, but at all times be treated for taxation purposes as a proper and legitimate payment of expenses.

The Prime Minister: As my right hon. Friend the Financial Secretary made clear in his written reply on 15 April, at column 354, the Inland Revenue has not proposed any change in the tax treatment of these payments to voluntary lifeboatmen, which can continue to be made without deduction of tax under PAYE.

Scotch Whisky

Mr. Sims asked the Prime Minister if, in the course of her visit to Korea, she was able to press the Government to liberalise the market for Scotch whisky bottled in Scotland; and what was the response.

The Prime Minister: I pressed the Korean Government to open their market in general, and they have undertaken to consider a timetable for the liberalisation of bottled Scotch whisky. They have already agreed not to implement the threatened ban on the import of bulk whisky.

Nuclear Weapons Programme

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Prime Minister if she will list the responsibilities discharged by the Department of Energy in support of the United Kingdom's nuclear weapons programme.

The Prime Minister: The Department of Energy has no direct responsibilities in support of the United Kingdom weapons programme. It does, however, sponsor British Nuclear Fuels plc., which is a defence contractor.

Foreign Vegetables (Duties)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement on co-ordination between the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food and the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the increase in duties on foreign vegetables arising out of Spain's accession to the European Economic Community.

The Prime Minister: Throughout the Spanish accession negotiations there was continuous close co-ordination between the Government Departments concerned, including the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. This level of co-operation has continued since the application of the common agricultural policy to Spain on 1 March. We have pressed vigorously for a reduction in the present Spanish tariff on frozen peas imported from the Ten.

Engagements

Mr. Flannery asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 13 May.

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 13 May.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 13 May.

Mr. Pike asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagements for Tuesday 13 May.

The Prime Minister: This morning I had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today. This evening I hope to have an audience of Her Majesty the Queen.

EC (Agricultural Expenditure)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she will raise at the next meeting of the European Council the failure of the Common Market Commission to provide to the Council monthly reports on the trend of agricultural spending as provided by the Council agreement of 4 December 1984; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: I would not expect this issue to be discussed at the European Council. The Commission regularly informs the member states on the trend in agricultural spending, but we will continue to press the Commission to provide information in the appropriate forum in accordance with its undertakings in the budget discipline agreement.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prison Officers

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he is yet able to publish the report of the study of prison officers' complementing and shift systems, to which he referred in his speech to the House on 6 May, Official Report, columns 44-45; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hurd: A study of complementing and shift systems undertaken by a joint team of Prison Department officials and management consultants was set in hand by my predecessor, my right hon. and learned Friend the Member for Richmond, Yorks (Mr. Brittan) last September. I have now had an opportunity to study the report and have decided that it should be published. I shall be placing copies of the report in the Library. I shall be making the report available to the prison service generally and to the Prison Officers' Association.

The report presents a telling indictment of the present shift and complementing systems in the prison service and the working practices which surround them. It is critical of the systems, not of those who operate them. It makes recommendations for new systems which would release large amounts of now unproductive capacity which ought to be used for other purposes: the report suggests that wasted capacity amounts to 15 to 20 per cent. The professional advice which I have had suggests that the recommended new systems are soundly based and practical and I have asked that proposals for change based on them be worked up as quickly as possible by Prison Department management. As part of this process, account will be taken of the findings of a scrutiny led by the central efficiency unit of the escorting to court of prisoners held in prison service establishments as well as of an internal review of the management structure of prisons.

Taken together, the recommendations of these studies represent a major programme of reform for the prison service and as such they will obviously need to be discussed with those who represent the staff of the service; including the Prison Officers' Association. One of prison officers' principal concerns will clearly be the effect which these prospective changes will have on how prison officers are paid. As part of the overall package for reform which we shall be developing, therefore, we shall also be looking at what needs to be done to modernise pay systems. The package which we shall be proposing will seek to provide the changes which are necessary to enable the service to be organised more effectively and pay systems which will give staff and management a fair deal.

The prison service has to be reshaped in relation to the way it organises itself to do the work required of it. Recent events have amply proved that. The work of modernisation needs to be carried forward urgently. I think it would be reasonable, given the circumstances, to set a target date of April 1987 for the new systems. I trust that all those who will be involved in examining and discussing the scope for change will recognise the importance of the task which faces them and will approach it with good sense and understanding.

Aircraft Hijacking (Extradition)

Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what steps have been taken to give effect to the conventions of Chicago, Tokyo, The Hague and Montreal to permit the extradition of terrorists involved in the hijacking of aircraft; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The Tokyo Convention Act 1967 gave effect to that convention in United Kingdom law. The Hague and Montreal conventions were implemented respectively through the Hijacking Act 1971 and the Protection of Aircraft act 1973, both of which have since been repealed and their provisions consolidated into the Aviation Security Act 1982. Orders have been made under these Acts and under the Extradition Act 1870 making the offences referred to in the conventions extraditable in respect of the contracting parties to the conventions. The Chicago convention, which the United Kingdom ratified in 1947, contains no provision for extradition.

Crime Rate (South Glamorgan)

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will call for a report from the chief constable of South Glamorgan about the action he is taking to combat the increase in the crime rate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the chief constable that the crime rate in the South Wales force area rose by 1·28 per cent. during 1985 and that reported crime in the Cardiff, West area fell by 10·3 per cent. The chief constable is taking a number of steps to encourage public participation in crime prevention measures and beleives that these figure, which compare favourably with a national average increase of 3 per cent. in reported crime, are an indication of the success which is being achieved.

Civil Defence

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) in view of the nuclear disaster in the Ukraine, if he is satisfied that civil defence in the United Kingdom is sufficiently staffed and is able to respond to emergencies, in cases of nuclear fallout; and if he will make a statement;

(2) in view of the nuclear disaster at Chernobyl in the Ukraine, if he will consider increasing the grants for civil defence purposes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Civil defence resources in this country can often be used to advantage against peacetime emergencies, but there has been no significant role for them in the response to the effects of the explosion at Chernobyl. We are separately examining the resources available to local authorities as a part of the assessment of their civil defence preparedness.

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total capital grant given to South Glamorgan county council for civil defence purposes; how the money is being used, from the latest available information; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: In the financial year 1984-85, the most recent year for which final figures are available, South Glamorgan county council received £61,518·86 civil defence grant on net audited expenditure of £79,863·56. The main elements were the county emergency planning team, the provision and equipping of emergency centres, staff training in civil defence, and the rental of emergency communications equipment.

In common with all other county level authorities in England and Wales South Glamorgan county council was asked on 21 January 1985 to complete its plans under the Civil Defence (General Local Authority Functions) Regulations 1983 and to send copies to us by 15 January 1986. In the absence of any response from South Glamorgan, officials wrote to the council on 25 February to say that my right hon. Friend required copies of the plans and to draw attention to regulation 6*(f)* of the Civil Defence (Grant) Regulations 1953 under which grant may be withheld if a document that has been required is not provided. The council responded by sending copies of plans which dealt only with peacetime emergencies. The council was informed on 3 April that, subject to considering any representations it might wish to make, my right hon. Friend proposed to withhold £45,518 from the grant that would otherwise be payable for 1985-86, until such time as the plans required were received. We are now awaiting the council's representations.

Violent Crime

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the change in Cardiff in the number of crimes involving the use of objects with intent to harm since 1983; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Numbers of recorded offences of violence against the person by police force area are published annually in chapter 2 of the Command Paper on "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales", and most recently in a Home Office "Statistical Bulletin" (table 6 of Issue Number 4/86). The only information which is collected centrally on the use of weapons relates to notifiable offences in which firearms were reported to have been used. In 1984 there were 205 such offences recorded by the South Wales police, which was 7 per cent. less than the number recorded in 1983. These figures are published annually in "Criminal Statistics, Supplementary Tables", volume 3 (table S.3.1(A) of the issue for 1984). Figures for 1985 are not yet available.

Prison Officers

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what has been the change in the number of prison officers employed at each of the London prisons during the last 12 months.

Mr. Mellor: The number of staff of the prison officer class in post at each of the London prisons on 1 April 1986 and on the corresponding date last year is as follows:

	1 April 1986	1 April 1985
Brixton	661	625

Merseyside Police

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department on how many occasions over the past five years the Merseyside police authority has requested an increase in its force establishment; how many additional posts have been agreed to; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: There has been one such application. The new Merseyside police authority, which took over responsibility on 1 April 1986, included a proposal for an increase in the police establishment of the force in its manpower plans for the financial year 1986-87. My right hon. Friend approved 72 additional police posts for the force on 26 March 1986.

Data Protection Act

Mr. Normanton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether, in view of the developments in the last two years of the mini-computer and word-processing equipment market, he will reconsider the relevance of the Data Protection Act and provision for greater exemptions from its provisions.

Mr. Waddington: The Act is not yet fully in force and it is too soon to consider whether any changes are required.

Mr. Normanton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will provide an estimate of the cost of litigation and the services of the courts for which his Department is making contingency plans as a result of the implementation and enforcement of the Data Protection Act;

(2) if he will estimate how many additional lawyers are going to be needed, within the relevant Government Departments, as a result of and the enforcement of the Data Protection Act.

Mr. Waddington: No. We do not believe that it is possible to make estimates of the type the hon. Gentleman suggests with enough precision to be of any value.

Mr. Normanton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many civil servants have been appointed to staff the office of the Registrar of Data Protection; what increase is anticipated over the next three years; and what will be the gross cost per annum to the Exchequer arising from all aspects of the implementation of the Data Protection Act.

Mr. Waddington: The registrar has at present 44 permanent and 36 temporary staff, of which only one is a civil servant. The Registrar is currently reviewing his long-term staffing requirements and it is not possible to provide a reliable estimate of the eventual complement he will require.

It is intended that the cost of the registrar's operations under the Act will be covered by registration fees received from data users. Some Government Departments are likely to incur costs in meeting the subject access provisions of the Act and in other compliance costs, some estimates of which were included in the explanatory and financial memorandum to the Data Protection Bill in 1983.

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will be able to publish the total of those who have registered under the Data Protection Act 1984 and to estimate the number of users who have not done so.

Mr. Waddington: The Data Protection Registrar estimates that by 10 May he had received approximately 110,000 applications for registration. Applications are continuing to be received in considerable numbers and it will be some time before he will be able to make any estimate of the number of data users who may not have registered.

Armley and Wakefield Prisons

Mr. Lofthouse asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many prisoners were detained in the Armley (Leeds) and Wakefield prisons on 30 March; and how many prisoners these prisons are meant to hold.

Mr. Mellor: Figures for 30 March are not recorded centrally. On 31 March the population and certified normal accommodation of Her Majesty's prison Leeds and Her Majesty's prison Wakefield were as follows:

	Population	Certified normal accommodation
Leeds	1,159	630
Wakefield	734	742

Liverpool (Ministerial Visit)

Mr. Parry asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on his recent visit to Liverpool.

Mr. Hurd: I have not visited Liverpool recently, although I shall do so on 16 May. My hon. Friend the Minister of State visited Merseyside on 22 April. He had discussions about policing matters with the chief constable and other police officers, with members of the police authority, and with members of the Police Superintendents' Association and the Police Federation. He then visited the Albert dock and opened Granada Television's news centre there.

Mr. and Mrs. Stapleton

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department, further to his answer of 6 May, Official Report, columns 21-22, if he will call for a further report from the chief constable of Lincolnshire as to the whereabouts of diaries, a birth certificate, and papers relating to Her Majesty's Customs and Excise which were seized from Mr. and Mrs. Stapleton and have neither been returned to them nor produced as evidence following disclosure for the committal proceedings.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand that all five birth certificates and some Customs and Excise documents seized by the police were returned to Mrs. Stapleton either direct on 26 February or through her solicitor on 19 and 21 March. The remainder of the Customs and Excise documents are being held by the police at the request of the liquidator. The diaries are being retained by the police as evidence in forthcoming criminal proceedings; representatives for the defence have been informed as to their availability for examination.

Prisoners (Statistics)

Mr. Alex Carlile asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give details of the name, date of death, circumstances of death, and inquest verdict in respect of each prisoner of 20 years old or less who has died in penal institutions since 1 January 1980; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: The readily available information about the date and circumstances of death and the inquest verdicts in respect of prisoners aged under 21 who have died in Prison Department custody (including outside hospitals) in England and Wales since 1 January 1980 is as follows.

It is not the practice to publish the names of such prisoners.

ENERGY

Petrol Prices

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether he has any evidence of arrangements between any oil companies designed to maintain high petrol prices in different parts of the United Kingdom.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: I have no evidence of any such arrangements.

Sellafield

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Energy, pursuant to his answer of 27 March, Official Report, column 556, how many departmental civil servants are currently employed in negotiations with the European Commission on safeguards arrangements; and how many meetings, and on what dates, have been held between the United Kingdom and the European Commission on the safeguarding of the joint civil-military material balance area at Sellafield.

Mr. Goodlad: The Department of Energy safeguards office includes four scientific civil servants who carry out the detailed negotiations with the European Commission on safeguards matters, in consultation with others as appropriate. The number of meetings held has been numerous, but over the period April 1985 to April 1986 20 meetings took place in London, Sellafield and Luxembourg on the subject of the civil-military interface at BNF Sellafield.

Private Property (Rights of Entry)

Mr. Freeson asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will review the powers of entry to private property by gas boards; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The gas industry's rights of entry for disconnection purposes have been thoroughly reviewed and will be carried forward into the Gas Bill. They maintain the safeguards contained in the Rights of Entry (Gas and Electricity) Boards Act 1954.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Japan (Leather Industry)

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry by how much Japanese leather imports into the United Kingdom have increased in the past four years; and whether he attributes this rise to any particular factor.

Mr. Alan Clark: Over the past four years Japanese leather imports have increased by £2·7 million a value of £5·6 million in 1985. Over the same period import penetration of leather and leather goods into the United Kingdom has remained around 45 per cent.: the Japanese share of this amounts to 0·5 per cent. This indicates that although Japan's imports have increased in value terms, its share of the United Kingdom market has remained stable. The rise can largely be attributed to the increase in the world price of leather.

North-West (Development Agency)

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has any plans to set up a development agency for the north-west; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: No. I have no such plans.

South-Western Electricity Council

Mr. Harris asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when the appointment to the South-Western Electricity Council for a vacant seat, following the resignation of a member from the Isles of Scilly, will be made.

Mr. Howard: An appointment will be made very shortly.

Castleford

Mr. Lofthouse asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will grant intermediate status to the Castleford travel-to-work area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: No. While I am always willing to consider representations on assisted area coverage, it would require a very strong case indeed to convince me of the need to alter the assisted area map so soon after the last change.

Australian Wool

Mr. Crowther asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what quantity of wool is imported annually from Australia; and what percentage of the wool used in the United Kingdom is represented by these imports.

Mr. Alan Clark: Imports of wool from Australia between 1981 and 1984 averaged approximately 10,000 tonnes per annum, but rose to 24,000 tonnes in 1985. However, these figures are not directly comparable with those of United Kingdom consumption, owing to differences of defination. It is estimated that imports of Australian wool accounted for approximately 20 per cent. of the United Kingdom industry consumption in 1985.

China

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the take-up of cheap credit facilities for trade with China and give details of its allocation to date.

Mr. Alan Clark: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

European Community

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the deficit in all trade and trade in manufactures, respectively, with the current membership of the EEC in the first quarters of (a) 1983, (b) 1984, (c) 1985 and (d) 1986, respectively.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information is in the following table:

United Kingdom balance of trade with the European Community (£ billion BOP basis not seasonally adjusted)*

	Total Goods	Manufactures†
1983 Q1	−0·1	−1·7
1984 Q1	−0·6	−2·2
1985 Q1	—	−2·3
1986 Q1	−1·5	−2·8

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the percentage of the United Kingdom's exports of all goods and manufactured goods, respectively, which went to the current membership of the EEC in (a) 1983, (b) 1984, (c) 1985 and (d) the first quarter of 1986, respectively.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information is in the following table:

*Proportion of United Kingdom Exports going to the European Community
BOP Basis not seasonally adjusted

	Total Goods Per cent.	Manufactures† Per cent.
1983	46	40
1984	47	40
1985	49	42
1986 Q1	49	43

Source: Department of Trade and Industry
* Present membership throughout
† Standard International Trade Classification sections 5 to 8

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what were the reasons for the decline in exports to the EEC and the increase in imports from the EEC in the first quarter of 1986.

Mr. Alan Clark: There were falls in the value of exports of oil, machinery and transport equipment to France, Netherlands, FR Germany and Italy. Imports from the Community countries were little changed.

Massey-Ferguson Holdings

Mr. Gould asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when, in March 1983, the Export Credits Guarantee Department converted bank guarantees into convertible preference shares in Massey-Ferguson Holdings, what proportion of those guarantees related to open account dealings; and when the financing banks received payment from Massey-Ferguson debtors in respect of those guarantees.

Mr. Alan Clark: ECGD bank guarantees were not converted into shareholdings in Massey-Ferguson Holdings. In March 1983, ECGD agreed to acquire shares in the company as part of an international financial support arrangement, designed to enable the company to continue meeting its obligations to lending banks, some of which were guaranteed by ECGD.

None of the ECGD bank guarantees concerned related to open account dealings. Subsequent payments due from Massey-Ferguson debtors have all been received without significant delay.

Soviet Union (Tourism)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what representations he has received from people with package tours booked to the Soviet Union about the terms of cancellation of tours and the eligibility for refunds, in the light of the Government's advice to avoid travelling to certain areas of the Soviet Union; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether he will initiate urgent discussions with tour companies with a view to ensuring that they observe a common practice in repayment of deposits to travellers cancelling visits to the Soviet Union on the basis of Her Majesty's Government's advice in the light of the recent nuclear accident at Chernobyl; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

DEFENCE

Gruinard Island

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the outcome of the studies into the possibility of decontaminating Gruinard Island; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: In the last few years the Ministry of Defence has been investigating the possibility of developing a technique for decontaminating Gruinard Island, which is situated off the north-west coast of Scotland, and which was contaminated with anthrax in field trials in 1942 and 1943. The island has remained closed to the public since that time.

A technique has now been devised which involves treating the infected area with a solution of formaldehyde in seawater. This method has been scrutinised by an independent advisory group of eminent specialists and has been confirmed to be satisfactory. We have therefore decided that work aimed at decontamination should proceed forthwith and a contractor has been selected for the task. It is hoped that work will begin early this summer.

The success of the operation will be assessed by the Ministry of Defence, with further advice from the independent advisory group, before any decision is taken about returning the island to civil ownership.

Low-flying Aircraft

7. Mr. Stephen Ross asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many complaints were received concerning low-flying military aircraft during the first four months of 1986.

Mr. Lee: The total number of inquiries and complaints received between 1 January and 30 April about low flying was 935.

26. Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many low-flying exercises in United Kingdom airspace in 1985 involved United States Air Force F111 aircraft.

Mr. Stanley: United States Air Force F111 aircraft were involved in seven low-flying exercises in the United Kingdom during 1985.

Strategic Defence Initiative

14. Mr. Bruce asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the number of orders to date won by United Kingdom firms to participate in the strategic defence initiative.

Mr. Norman Lamont: Seven.

Defence Planning Committee

18. Mr. Boyes asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he will make a statement on the meeting of the Defence Planning Committee on 28 April.

Mr. Younger: There was no such meeting. There was, however a meeting of the Defence Review Committee, a subordinate committee, which considered a package of NATO force goals addressed to the United States.

Circular NDHD 11-82

19. Mr. Nicholls asked the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received in the last year critical of circular NDHD 11-82; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Lee: The Ministry of Defence Staff Association has made a number of representations requesting the withdrawal or substantial revision of the MOD circular notice to directors and heads of divisions (NDHD 11-82). This NDHD was issued as guidance to MOD managers in dealing with correspondence and representations from MODSA. It is shortly to be revised to reflect the MODSA recognition in respect of Royal Observer Corps and mooring, salvage and boom officer grades.

Armed Forces Pay

20. Mr. Livsey asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a statement on the report submitted to him by the Armed Forces pay review board.

Mr. Stanley: My right hon. Friend the Prime Minister has received the report of the Review Body on Armed Forces Pay and hopes to announce shortly the Government's decisions.

RAF Facilities (Security)

21. Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether the Government are satisfied with security around Royal Air Force facilities being used by the United States of America.

Mr. Stanley: Security at these bases and facilities is kept under constant review in the light of the assessed threat.

Type 23 Frigates

22. Mr. Douglas asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a further statement on the tendering arrangements for type 23 frigates.

Mr. Lee: I have nothing to add to the letter I sent to the hon. Member for Dunfermline, West (Mr. Douglas) on 7 May 1986.

32. Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to announce the placing of orders for type 23 frigates; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: I have nothing to add to the statement I made to the House at column 529 during the Navy debate on 6 February.

United States Bases

23. Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will seek to negotiate with the United States Secretary of Defence separate arrangements for the approval of the use of United States bases in the United Kingdom for conventional and for nuclear purposes.

Mr. Stanley: No. Appropriate arrangements already exist to cover both conventional and nuclear forces.

Manned Aircraft (Armaments)

24. Mr. Duffy asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether the assessment of conventionally armed long-range stand-off missiles or complementary systems to manned aircraft are complete; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Norman Lamont: A collaborative study into the feasibility of conventionally armed long-range stand-off missiles is continuing.

Battlefield Nuclear Weapons

25. Mr. Geraint Howells asked the Secretary of State for Defence when he expects to make an announcement concerning the upgrading of battlefield nuclear weapons.

Mr. Stanley: I cannot add to the answer I gave to the hon. Member for Sheffield, Central (Mr. Caborn) on 20 January, at columns 90-91, and to the communiqué issued at the NATO nuclear planning group's meeting in March, a copy of which has been placed in the Library.

Eurofighter

2. Mr. Robert Atkins asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he is satisfied that the Eurofighter will meet the in-service date requirement of the Royal Air Force.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The European fighter aircraft programme is expected to meet the in-service date requirement of the Royal Air Force. The current project definition activities will lead to a detailed timetable for the programme.

NATO

27. Mr. Hickmet asked the Secretary of State for Defence what representations he has received about United Kingdom membership of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation.

Mr. Stanley: My Department receives a considerable number of inquiries each year on many aspects of the United Kingdom's membership of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation. We have not been able to identify any recent representations specifically on whether or not the United Kingdom should remain a member of NATO, but I feel sure that the overwhelming majority of British people would want the United Kingdom's membership to continue.

Libya

28. Mr. Simon Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Defence what role in the recent United States attack on Libya was undertaken by Nimrod Royal Air Force reconnaissance planes.

Mr. Stanley: None.

Exercise Lean Look

29. Mr. Evennett asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will make a further statement on exercise Lean Look.

Mr. Stanley: We are on course towards achieving the service manpower savings planned in the support areas in Lean Look.

Crown Proceedings Act 1947

30. Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Defence what conclusions he has arrived at regarding section 10 of the Crown Proceedings Act 1947 in the light of the representations made to him by the deputation of hon. Members, ex-service personnel and their relatives.

Mr. Lee: The Secretary of State has taken careful note of all the representations he has received concerning section 10 of the Crown Proceedings Act 1947 and will take them fully into account when considering what, if any changes need to be made to existing legislation.

Sea Eagle Missile

31. Mr. Speed asked the Secretary of State for Defence what consideration is being given to fitting the anti-ship Sea Eagle missile to the EH 101 helicopter.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The primary role planned for the EH 101 is as an anti-submarine warfare helicopter for the Royal Navy. As such it is not currently designed to carry anti-ship missiles. However, studies are being undertaken into possibilities for extending the EH 101's capability to include the carriage of missiles such as Sea Eagle, although no decision has yet been taken.

Tyres (Contracts)

Mr. Edwards asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the contracts given by his Ministry in the years 1980 to 1985 in relation to tyres for defence equipment; whether these tyres were for road vehicles, aircraft or for other purposes; and if he will specify the country of manufacture of the tyres purchased and outline the criteria for tender which may give advantage to British tyre production.

Mr. Lee: The companies awarded contracts by my Ministry in relation to tyres for defence equipment are listed below. Records are not readily available for 1980 but the 1986 contracts have already been placed and these are therefore included.

Companies awarded MOD contracts for on- and off-road vehicle tyres and inner tubes

In fact however about 75 per cent. by value of MOD's vehicle tyre offtake over the six-year period has been of United Kingdom manufacture, with other EEC countries supplying 20 per cent. and Scandinavia, United States of America, Morocco, Austria, Canada and the Far East, in descending order, sharing the remaining 5 per cent. In the period up to an including 1985 all the aircraft tyres purchased were manufactured in United Kingdom but Goodyear have advised that, for commercial considerations, requirements for 1986 and beyond will be met mainly from their plants in Europe.

NATO Ambassadors

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence when the next meeting of North Atlantic Treaty Organisation ambassadors is due to take place.

Mr. Stanley: There are regular meetings of both the North Atlantic Council and Defence Planning Committee in permanent session planned for later this week.

Trident D5 Weapon System

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Defence what is the total value to date of the subcontracts placed with British firms for the United States Trident D5 weapon system.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The latest figure available shows the total value of awards on United Kingdom companies for the United States Trident D5 weapon system as around $43 million. This figure represents some 185 contracts let to over 50 companies.

Departmental Housing (Shoeburyness)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Defence how many houses owned by his Department are now vacant in the neighbourhood of the Ministry's establishement in Shoeburyness; and what plans he has for these properties.

Mr. Lee: There are 48 married quarters currently vacant at Shoeburyness which are held pending the outcome of studies of the future of Horseshoe barracks. We would welcome any formal approach regarding leasing by Southend council.

Experimental Aircraft Projects

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will list the potential benefits of the experimental aircraft projects programme.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The experimental aircraft programme is a technology demonstrator programme which will give practical experience in the integration of the wide range of new technolog ies required for new, sophisticated combat aircraft, including manufacture of large structural components in composite material, fly-by-wire technology and advanced avionics. The lessons learned from the programme will have application to many aspects of modern combat aircraft, including the European fighter aircraft.

Water Tank, Walker Drive, South Queensferry

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for Defence what assessment he has made of the state of repair of the water tank, the property of his Department, at Walker drive, South Queensferry; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 25 April 1986, column 262]: The water tank in question was sold by my Department along with other land in 1978 to the Lothian regional council. Its current condition is therefore a matter for that council or its successors.

WALES

Rates (Cardiff)

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Wales what information he has as to the losses in revenue from commercial rates suffered by councils covering the Cardiff, West constituency in 1975, 1980 and 1985.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: I shall write to my hon. Friend.

Derelict Land

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Wales how much derelict land has been reclaimed by county area in Wales for each year from 1975 to 1985; how much funding was available for each year; and if in any year the sum was underspent.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Land reclamation schemes often involve works in more than one year. The following information is therefore provided on the basis of schemes approved to start in the years in question.

Since the Welsh Development Agency was given responsibility for the administration of land reclamation work on 1 January 1976, the agency has approved schemes to reclaim the following amounts of derelict land:

Acres

County	1976	1977	1978	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985	Total

The WDA's initial budget and outturn expenditure on land reclamation in each financial year is given below:

	£ million
	Budget	Outturn Expenditure
1976-77	2·5	1·7
1977-78	9·0	6·0
1978-79	6·8	7·8
1979-80	8·8	7·5
1980-81	7·4	8·7
1981-82	9·2	10·5

1983-84	13·0	11·2
1984-85	6·5	8·4
1985-86	9·0	10·4

In a number of years it has been necessary to switch funds to or from the agency's land reclamation budget during the course of the year. In each year all funds actually available for land reclamation have been spent.

Renovation Grants

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what action is being taken by his Department to encourage district councils to make greater use of building society funds to supplement renovation grants.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: We are actively considering ways of encouraging agency services to assist and advise homeowners as to the repair and maintenance of their homes, making full use of funds from building societies where appropriate. In particular we are financing a feasibility study for an agency project in the Cynon Valley which would be a collaborative venture between the local authority and a number of building societies. We shall also publish shortly a leaflet on block repair which encourages both homeowners and district councils to liaise with individual building societies or banks as potential sources of funding to supplement renovation grants.

Household Projections

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales (1) what are the latest projections by age for the numbers of heads of households in Wales in (a) 1986, (b) 1991, (c) 1996 and (d) 2001; and what is the estimate for 1983 in the age groups (i) 15 to 29 years, (ii) 30 to 44 years, (iii) 45 to 64 years and (iv) 65 years and over;

(2) what are the latest household projections for Wales by type for 1991, and 2001; and what were the estimates for 1983.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The information is published in the "1983 Based Household Projections for Counties of Wales", a copy of which is available in the Library.

Homeless Persons

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many homeless persons there are in each local authority area in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Information on the number currently homeless is not held centrally. However, the number of persons accepted as homeless in each local authority during 1985 is given in the following table:

Housing Statistics

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many people are on waiting lists for council accommodation in each of the local authority areas in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: This information is not held centrally.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many council-owned houses have been sold by each local authority in Wales in each year since 1980.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The number of council-owned houses sold by each local authority in Wales in each year since 1980 is shown in the following table:

NORTHERN IRELAND

Breast Cancer

Mr. Hume asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what figures are available to indicate by age group (a) the number of women diagnosed as having breast cancer in Northern Ireland in each of the past three years, (b) the number of those who have been, or are being successfully treated and (c) the number of those who have died due to the cancer.

Mr. Needham: This information is not available in the precise form requested. Table A shows the number of new cases of malignant neoplasm of the female breast registered with the Northern Ireland cancer registration scheme for 1982, 1983 and 1984. Table B shows the number of deaths registered in these years with the general register office, where this disease was the principal cause of death. In view of known deficiencies in the data from the Northern Ireland cancer registration scheme and the variation in time between a case being registered and a death occurring, statistics on deaths in a year should not be directly associated with new cases registered for that year.

It is not possible to provide information concerning the number of those who have been, or are being, successfully treated for this disease.

Mr. Hume asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if the Government have any plans (a) to increase the availability or use of mammography in Northern Ireland or (b) to introduce a comprehensive breast screening programme with appropriate resources for diagnosis, further investigation, treatment and support; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Needham: The Government will decide their policy on the provision of a comprehensive breast cancer screening programme when they receive the final report of an expert working group chaired by Sir Patrick Forrest, which is examining the options available for the introduction of screening by mammography and the benefits and costs associated with them. The working group report is expected later this year.

Mr. Hume asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement outlining the current provision in Northern Ireland of breast cancer screening; and how this compares with such provision in Great Britain.

Mr. Needham: In Northern Ireland and Great Britain women are encouraged through health education to examine their own breasts and report any abnormalities to their doctors. A Health Education Council leaflet giving guidance on how breast self-examination should be carried out is widely available.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the general trend in the levels of numbers of serving members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary about whom recruitment inquiries have been made by police forces in Great Britain in the past three years.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Armagh Prison

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland why workmen are working overtime during weekends at the former Armagh prison; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 9 May 1986, c. 249]: As part of the contingency plans for dealing with possible disruption of the prison system as a result of industrial action, work was required at Armagh prison to make it ready to hold prisoners again if necessary. In the very limited time available week-end working was necessary on 26-27 April.

Maze Prison

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland why there has been a recent change in policy to combine the compound and cellular sections of Her Majesty's prison, the Maze; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, of 9 May 1986, c. 250]: In 1985 the prospective opening of the new prisons at Maghaberry led to a wide-ranging review of the prison system in Northern Ireland. One of the conclusions reached was that the significantly reduced number of special category prisoners in the Maze compound prison made its administration as a separate entity increasingly unviable. It was therefore decided that the residue of the compound prison should be managed as an annexe of the main cellular prison and the two were formally amalgamated under the control of one governor with effect from 1 April 1986. Progress is being made toward the integration of common functions, and this process is expected to continue for some time.

ENVIRONMENT

Rates

Sir John Farr asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what evidence he has of the impact of increased rates on businesses both nationally and in Leicester;

(2) what assessment he has made of the impact of the increase in rates in Leicester on the profitability and viability of knitting manufacturers in the Leicester area; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: I have no doubt that the excessive rates imposed by some councils, including the 35 per cent. rise in the general rate in Leicester this year, can have serious consequences for the local economy and for employment opportunities. This will apply to knitting manufacturers as to any other business. We have published proposals for a national non-domestic rate in the Green Paper "Paying for Local Government" which will remove such economically damaging variations in business rates.

Radiation

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps his Department is taking, following the Chernobyl nuclear disaster in the Ukraine, to check that the seas, forests and rivers of the United Kingdom are not polluted and that wildlife and fish life are not affected; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Preliminary assessments suggest that the doses of radiation likely to be sustained by wildlife and fish are well below the levels that would be likely to cause harm to them or the seas, forests and rivers of the United Kingdom.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Lyell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether it is proposed that any rdioactive waste arising from Sellafield should be disposed of at sites other than Drigg up to year 2030.

Mrs. Rumbold: Provided UK NIREX Ltd develops a new disposal site in the mid-1990s there will be adequate capacity at Drigg for all low-level wastes from Sellafield until after 2030. NIREX has been asked to look at possible sites for deep disposal of intermediate-level wastes, much of which could come from Sellafield. Government policy is to store high-level waste for 50 years.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his decision that NIREX nuclear dumps will contain only low-level nuclear waste precludes their use for storage of nuclear materials from nuclear submarines.

Mrs. Rumbold: A NIREX site will be used primarily for disposal, not storage, although some short-term storage may take place as a prelude to disposal. A site may receive some wastes from decommissioned nuclear submarines.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions he held with NIREX before announcing that NIREX nuclear dumps would take only low-level waste; what proposals he now has for dealing with intermediate level waste; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: The decision to restrict what goes into a near-surface site was discussed with NIREX in one of the regular meetings my Department and NIREX have to discuss issues that are within our respective responsibilities. NIREX is exploring the options of disposing of intermediate level waste in a deep cavity underground or under the sea bed, or in a mine tunnelled out under the sea bed from the shore.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many delegations he has received to date, and from which areas, local authorities and organisations, on the proposal for nuclear dumping and the related special development orders.

Mrs. Rumbold: Since the announcement of potential disposal sites on 25 February, my right hon. Friends and I, together or separately, have met representatives of the following bodies: county and district councils from Bedfordshire, Humberside and Lincolnshire; Essex county council; and Lincolnshire and Nottinghamshire Against Nuclear Dumping. We have also met representatives of parish councils. I am today holding separate meetings with deputations from Bedfordshire Against Nuclear Dumping and Humberside Against Nuclear Dumping. My hon. Friend the Minister for Environment, Countryside and Local Government will be meeting representatives of Maldon district council, Maldon Against Nuclear Dumping and parish councils around Bradwell on 15 May.

Women's Aid

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the Government have plans to increase funding to Women's Aid refuges; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: The funding of Women's Aid refuges is primarily a matter for local authorities or other sponsors. There are no plans to increase support for Women's Aid refuges through Government programmes.

Gipsies

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many representations he has received in response to his review of gipsy site policy.

Mr. Tracey: Some 65 separate responses to consultation have been received, including responses from the local authority associations and other organisations consulted by the Department last December. The responses are being examined.

Housing Expenditure

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what was the total public expenditure on housing in the United Kingdom as a proportion of the gross domestic product in each year from 1976 to the latest year for which figures are available;

(2) what was the total private expenditure on housing in the United Kingdom as a proportion of the gross domestic product in each year from 1976 to the latest year for which figures are available.

Sir George Young: I shall answer these questions shortly.

Kenwood House

Sir Geoffrey Finsberg asked the Secretary of State for the Environment on what date English Heritage first sought information from the Greater London council about staffing levels, salaries and details as to whether staff at Kenwood House wished to transfer their employment from the Greater London council to English Heritage; and on what date the full information was supplied.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The Historic Buildings and Monuments Commission formally requested details of GLC staff on 29 April 1985. A reply in respect of staff working at, or in connection, with the historic house museums, including Kenwood house, was not received until 4 March 1986.

Nuclear Accidents (Evacuation)

Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what plans have been made for the evacuation of local inhabitants in the event of a nuclear accident in Britain.

Mr. Goodlad: I have been asked to reply.

I refer the hon. Gentleman to my reply of 9 May at column 269 to the hon. Member for Gordon (Mr. Bruce).

TRANSPORT

Space Saver Spare Wheels

Mr. Roger King asked the Secretary of State for Transport what inquiries he is currently making into the safety aspects of the space saver spare wheel.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Transport and Road Research Laboratory has carried out tests. We are satisfied that temporary use spare tyres now available are safe if used in accordance with manufacturers' instructions and at a speed not in excess of 50 mph. The Department has invited comments on draft regulations to clarify the legal use of the these tyres, and to require new vehicles equipped with them to meet the requirements of EEC regulation 64.

Bus Services

Mr. Roger King asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) if he will compile and make available to interested parties a list of the procedures to be adopted, including the requirements on bus stops, timetabling, fare structures and concessionary passes, vehicle maintenance, any financial incentives available and the names and addresses of all relevant authorities for a new entrant wishing to provide an innovatory bus service; if he will include in the list any difference in procedure as between areas formerly covered by the metropolitan county counties, shire councils and city-based transport systems; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what plans he has to promote the opportunities available for new entrants who wish to provide a bus service; if he will include in such plans advertising, a step by step guide including funds available and the procedures to be adopted in registering a service and the availability of promotional literature and booklets from Government bookshops, libraries and town halls; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: The Department has already published a guide for bus operators on the new procedures introduced by the Transport Act 1985, and in particular the arrangements for registering services, which are the same for all areas outside London. It has also published a series of explanatory leaflets on different aspects of the 1985 Act, and it will shortly be making available a further leaflet on the opportunities for new bus operators, together with a booklet with more detailed information. I am sending my hon. Friend copies and all these publications can be obtained free from traffic area offices, or from the Department at 2 Marsham Street, London SW1. I believe that they provide most of the information mentioned by my hon. Friend, but I welcome suggestions as to what further steps we might take.

London Regional Transport

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Transport what was the total number of people using London Regional Trasport (a) buses, and (b) Underground for each year from 1976; and what are the projected figures for each year from 1986 to 1990.

Mr. David Mitchell: Figures for past years are published in annual reports of London Regional Transport (formerly the London Transport Executive) and are as follows:

Passenger journeys millions

	1976	1977	1978	1979	1980	1981	1982	1983	*1984	1984-85†	1985-86‡

Projected figures for future years are not available.

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether there are any plans to introduce onto London Underground trains an intercom system for passengers to alert London Regional Transport staff if in danger.

Mr. David Mitchell: An intercom system of this kind will be one of the features of the new prototype trains currently under construction and due to be tested in passenger service.

The need for such measures is also one of the questions being examined in the study of crime on the Underground.

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) how many jobs have been lost both directly and indirectly as a result of London Buses Ltd. converting their bus operations to one person operations for (a) women and (b) men for each year since 1976; and what are the projected figures for each year from 1986 to 1990;

(2) what was the total number of Underground staff, excluding guards and drivers, employed by London Transport and London Regional Transport for each year from 1976; and what are the projected figures for each year from 1986 to 1990;

(3) what was the total number of guards employed by London Transport and London Regional Transport on the Underground for each year from 1976; and what are the project figures for each year from 1986 to 1990;

(4) what were the total numbers of (a) female and (b) male conductors employed by London Transport or London Buses Ltd. for each year from 1976; and what are the projected figures for each year from 1986 to 1990;

(5) how many (a) female and (b) male former conductors have (i) successfully retrained and (ii) failed their retraining as London bus drivers on one person operated buses each year since the scheme's inception.

Mr. David Mitchell: These are matters for London Regional Transport and its operating subsidiaries.

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many stations on London's Underground have had closed circuit television for each of the past five years; and how many will have it by 1990.

Mr. David Mitchell: I refer the hon. Member to my replies given on Friday 9 May 1986 to the hon. Member for Newham, North-West (Mr. Banks), at column 287, on the subject of closed circuit television.

The Department does not hold any further information. The future extension of closed circuit television is being considered as part of the study of crime on the Underground.

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Transport what was the incidence of assaults on London Transport or London Regional Transport staff on (a) the Underground and (b) buses for each year since 1976.

Mr. David Mitchell: The total number of assaults reported by London Regional Transport operating staff for each year since 1976 is as follows:

	Underground	Buses
1976	209	1,062
1977	273	1,248
1978	238	1,118
1979	291	1,039
1980	297	1,123
1981	258	1,007
1982	317	1,228
1983	300	1,157
1984	286	1,250
1985	364	1,358

These statistics do not distinguish between minor assaults and more violent attacks.

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Transport what was the total of security police employed by London Transport or London Regional Transport on the Underground for each year since 1976; and what are the projected figures for each year from 1986 to 1990.

Mr. David Mitchell: The average number of British Transport police officers deployed on the Underground since 1975 is as follows:

	Number
1976	130
1977	121
1978	141
1979	139
1980	161
1981	270
1982	284
1983	284
1984	248
1985	267

It is intended that the number of officers will rise to 350 by March 1987.

Policing levels is one of the issues currently being examined in the study of crime on the Underground. It is not possible at present to predict future policing levels beyond 1987, nor would I wish to pre-empt the findings of the study by attempting to do so.

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Transport what plans Her Majesty's Government have to improve the safety of passengers using the London Underground.

Mr. David Mitchell: The safety of passengers using the London Underground is the responsibility of London Regional Transport. However, as the hon. Member is aware, the Department is currently conducting a study of crime on the Underground in conjunction with LRT, the Home Office, the British Transport police and the Metropolitan police. I would not wish to pre-empt the findings of the study by making any further comment at present.

I understand that London Regional Transport is also in the process of conducting separate researches in passenger safety and security.

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Transport what was the incidence of attacks on passengers on the London Underground for (a) women and (b) men for each year since 1976; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: Information from LRT shows that the incidence of attacks (including cases of robbery, sexual assault and other criminal assault) during the period 1976 to 1984 was as follows:

	Number
1976	277
1977	392
1978	470
1979	530
1980	689
1981	806
1982	811
1983	797
1984	1,176

An analysisis by sex is not available for these years. The data for 1985 are still being assembled and a special analysis to establish the sex of the victim will be undertaken. I shall write to the Home Member when the figures become available.

Motorways (Service Areas)

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for Transport what criteria his Department uses for determining whether service areas should be provided on motorways.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The general policy is to provide motorway service areas at approximately 30-mile intervals so that travellers may remain on the motorway.

Hazardous Substances

Mr. Sims asked the Secretary of State for Transport what progress is being made in reaching agreement within the European Economic Community on a harmonised marking scheme for the carriage and storage of hazardous substances.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: Harmonisation of the requirements for labelling hazardous substances for international carriage by road, rail, sea and air is being accomplished on the basis of recommendations by the United Nations

Committee of Experts on the transport of dangerous goods. The European Economic Community recognises these recommendations.

Fishing Vessels (Distress Beacons)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Transport how long a traditional period he proposes to allow fishing vessels which have installed 121 MHz distress beacons to obtain full use of them before being required to fit 406 MHz equipment.

Mr. Ridley: No decision has yet been taken. There will be consultation with the fishing industry before any regulations are made requiring the use of 406 MHZ equipment. The consultations will cover the question of transitional use of 121½ MHZ equipment.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Expenditure

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are the most recent figures for spending per school pupil in schools in the United Kingdom; and what information he has about the equivalent figures for France, Japan and the United States of America.

Mr. Dunn: The available information is shown in the following table. For international comparisons non-advanced further education is included with secondary education at the 2nd level.

Expenditure per pupil at 1983 values (£) [1]

	Pre 1st level [2]	1st level [3]	2nd level [4]	Average cost up to and including 2nd level
France [5]	433	523	932	676
Japan [6]	156	854	938	824
United States of America [7]	*	*	*	1,465
United Kingdom [8]	842 (647)	814	1,209	1,025 (1,010)

* Not available.

[1] Expenditure per pupil in foreign currencies were converted to £ sterling at 1983 values by applying Purchasing Power Parity factors. These allow for exchange rates and differences in the cost of living between countries.

[2] Equates broadly with nursery education.

[3] Equates broadly with primary (compulsory) education.

[4] Equates broadly with secondary school education and non-advanced further education.

[5] 1980 data at 1983 values. Based on head counts. Approximately 86 per cent. of 3-5 year olds attend part-time.

[6] 1982 data at 1983 values. Excludes public subsidies to private sector. Based on head counts.

[7] 1981 data at 1983 values. Includes capital expenditure and special education. Based on head counts. Approximately 84 per cent. of 3-5 year olds attend part-time.

[8] Rates based on full-time equivalent pupil/student numbers. Figures in brackets are based on pre-school pupil head counts. Excludes private sector schools and colleges.

Universities and Public Sector Institutions

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proportion of total recurrent income of (a) universities and (b) public sector institutions was covered by private sources of finance from 1970 and in each year to the latest available date.

Mr. Walden: The proportion of universities' general income covered by private sources of finance for the academic years 1970-71 to 1983-84 was as follows:

Year	Percentage
1970-71	8·1
1971-72	7·6
1972-73	7·2
1973-74	7·2
1974-75	7·8
1975-76	7·9
1976-77	8·2
1977-78	10·1
1978-79	10·6
1979-80	10·5
1980-81	11·0
1981-82	12·4
1982-83	13·3
1983-84	15·0

The increase between 1980-81 and 1981-82 and subsequent years is in part the result of accounting changes.

This information is not available for public sector institutions.

Higher Education

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set out in tabular form for each year from 1970 to the latest available date the number of students and the proportion of the total in higher education represented by (a) those in universities, (b) those in public sector institutions, (c) those studying science or technology, (d) those studying the humanities, (e) those studying full time, (f) those studying part time and (g) students from abroad.

Mr. Walden: Detailed information on student numbers in higher education in Great Britain was published in July 1985, in statistical bulletin 9/85, a copy of which is in the Library. It is proposed to issue an updated bulletin later this year.

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set out in tabular form the number of female students in higher education in each year from 1970 to the latest available date and list these figures as a percentage of the total number of students in each year.

Mr. Walden: The information is shown in the following table:

Full-time and sandwich students in higher education in Great Britain*

	Women (000s)	Percentage of all students
1970	163·3	36·6
1971	184·9	39·9
1972	191·0	40·4
1973	182·7	38·0
1974	201·8	41·5
1975	208·2	41·3
1976	208·4	40·6
1977	202·4	39·8
1978	198·5	39·2
1979	202·5	39·7
1980	210·1	40·3
1981	222·0	40·9
1982	231·4	41·8
1983	239·0	42·3
1984	246·3	43·0

* Including students from abroad.

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set out in tabular form the number of mature students in higher education in each year from 1970 to the latest available date and list these figures as a percentage of the total number of students in each year.

Mr. Walden: I refer my hon. Friend to my reply given on 23 April at column 150. Information on earlier years for Great Britain universities, including that on students from abroad, are shown in the following table; similar information for public sector higher education is not readily available.

	Students aged 21 or over (000s)	Mature students as a percentage of all students
1970	108·2	47·5
1971	110·9	47·2
1972	99·4	41·5
1973	101·8	41·7
1974	105·6	42·2
1975	110·9	42·4
1976	115·0	42·3
1977	116·2	41·4
1978	118·3	41·0
1979	118·0	40·3

1. Postgraduate ages are at 31 December.
2. Undergraduate ages for 1970 and 1971 are as at 31 December, all other years are as at 31 August.

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set out in tabular form the number of students in higher education from families in social groups C2 and DE in each year from 1970 to the latest available date and list these figures as a percentage of the total number of students in each year.

Mr. Walden: The proportions of home university students accepted through the Universities Central Council on Admissions (UCCA) from social groups III M (Skilled Occupations—Manual), IV (Partly Skilled Occupations), and V (Unskilled Occupations) since 1977 were as follows. Similar figures are neither available for earlier years, nor for students in public sector higher education.

Year	III M (000s)	*Per cent.	IV and V (000s)	*Per cent.
1977	10·7	16·6	4·1	6·4
1978	10·6	16·1	4·2	6·4
1979	11·3	16·3	4·1	6·0
1980	10·1	14·0	3·9	5·4
1981	8·2	12·3	3·4	5·2
1982	8·0	12·2	3·8	5·8
1983	7·8	12·4	4·4	7·1
1984	8·1	12·4	4·8	7·3

* Percentage of those of known social class only.

Computers

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what discussions he has had with suppliers of super computers other than from the United States of America about he possible supply of such computers to United Kingdom educational and research institutions; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: A working party under the chairmanship by Professor A. J. Forty of the University of Warwick considered the technical solutions offered by Japanese as well as by United States suppliers for providing the academic community with facilities for advanced research computing. The Department, through the Computer Board for Universities and Research Councils, is also in contact with United Kingdom and overseas suppliers who may be able to offer computing equipment that will form the basis of the next generation of supercomputers or provide alternative systems for meeting the advanced computing requirements of educational and research institutions. In particular a group under the chairmanship of Professor E. B. Spratt of the University of Kent is examining the technical options for providing distributed high performance systems. Two specific developments are already in hand. First, Edinburgh University has been chosen as the first United Kingdom site to receive a British-built "Meiko Computing Surface", a machine providing advanced graphics capability based on chips designed and manufactured by the British company Inmos. Second, a distributed array processor supplied by the United Kingdom company International Computers Limited has been installed at Queen Mary College, London, and discussions are taking place with the company about other advanced developments.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Trial Nuclear Test Ban

33. Mr. Alton asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he has any plans to introduce a trial test ban in consultation with other nuclear powers.

Mr. Renton: We have no plans to do so. We do not believe that a trial test ban would contribute towards the balanced and verifiable arms control agreements which are essential for our security.

Prisoners of Conscience

Mr. Wilkinson asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs how many representations he has received since the beginning of March seeking information about four Ukrainian women prisoners of conscience, Iryna Ratushynska, Sophia Bilyak, Olena Hermaniuk, and Olha Matusevych, from (a) Members of Parliament and (b) members of the public; and whether those who have made representations to him in writing have yet received replies.

Mr. Renton: Since the beginning of March my right hon. and learned Friend has received 16 representations from right hon. and hon. Members referring to these four cases, to which replies have been sent. He has also received more than 1,000 printed circulars listing the four cases, sent by members of the public on behalf of the Association of Ukrainian Women, and has acknowledged these in a reply to the president of the association. In addition, and within the same time scale, my right hon. and learned Friend has received some 160 representations from right hon. and hon. Members and some 60 representations from members of the public which refer solely to the case of Irina Ratushinskaya. Most of these have already received replies, and the remainder will receive them shortly.

Soviet Nuclear Accident

Mr. Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs, pursuant to the answer of 7 May, Official Report, column 194, what is Her Majesty's Government's advice about precautions to be taken by British citizens for whom it is absolutely necessary to travel to those areas of the Soviet Union which travellers are currently being advised to avoid.

Mr. Eggar: The following precautions are advisable:

Avoid fresh milk and free-range eggs.

Surface-grown vegetables should preferably be avoided and in any event washing-peeled.

Fruit should be peeled.

It is safe to drink tap water and eat meat and poultry and other foods.

Anything tinned, frozen or preserved before the 26 April is safe.

Sinai Multinational Force

Mr. Nicholls asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs whether Her Majesty's Government decided to renew their commitment to the Sinai multinational force and observers when it expired on 20 April.

Mr. Renton: The multinational force and observers has been informed by means of an exchange of notes, which will be published in due course in the treaty series, that the United Kingdom's participation in the MFO will be continued for an additional period of one year beginning on 21 April 1986. Our participation will continue for a further period of one year thereafter unless Her Majesty's Government decide to inform the MFO at least 90 days prior to the expiry of the initial one year term of the United Kingdom's intention to terminate its participation.

EMPLOYMENT

Enterprise Agencies

Mr. Freeman asked the Paymaster General if he will give the latest number of enterprise agencies in active existence.

Mr. Trippier: There are currently 336 local enterprise agencies in active existence in the United Kingdom, of which 246 meet the requirements of the Finance Act 1982, which allows business sector sponsors tax relief on their contributions to such bodies.

Industrial Language Training Centre

Mr. Thurnham asked the Paymaster General how many people in the Bolton area have been trained through the Industrial Language Training Centre (a) since 1978 and (b) during 1984-85.

Mr. Trippier: Since 1978, 1,797 people in the Bolton area have been trained by the Industrial Language Training Centre. This figure includes people trained up to March 1986. In 1984-85, 735 people were trained in the centre.

Community Programme

Mr. Nicholas Brown asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement about capital funding for the community programme.

Mr. Lang: In addition to wages, the running costs of community programme projects are reimbursed, up to a maximum of £440 per annum for each place provided. This sum is intended to cover any necessary purchases of capital equipment. In many cases, community programme agents and sponsors provide additional funds for the purchase of capital equipment, either from their own resources or in appropriate cases through grants available under the urban programme or project grants from the Department of Energy.

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Paymaster General, when he will next meet the chairman of the Manpower Services Commission to discuss the development of the community programme.

Mr. Lang: I and ministerial colleagues regularly meet the chairman of the Manpower Services Commission to discuss the commission's work, including the community programme. The next meeting will be held on 19 May.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Greenway asked the Paymaster General what were the numbers of people in work in 1970, 1975, 1980 and in each year since 1983; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The information is as follows:

Employed Labour Force in Great Britain

December of each year	Numbers
1970	24,183,000
1975	24,342,000
1980	24,204,000
1983	23,339,000
1984	23,730,000
1985*	24,006,000

* The latest date for which an estimate is available.

The employed labour force is the sum of employees in employment, the self-employed and Her Majesty's forces. The figures are adjusted for seasonal variation.

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Paymaster General what is the present number of (a) men and (b) women who are unemployed and under the age of 21 years.

Mr. Lang: The following information is in the Library. On 9 January 1986, the latest date for which an analysis of unemployment by age is available, the numbers of unemployed male and female claimants in the United Kingdom aged under 20 years were 307,901 and 220,906 respectively. Information is not separately available for those under the age of 21 years.

Greater London (Manufacturing Jobs)

Mr. Dubs asked the Paymaster General how many manufacturing jobs there are in Greater London; and what was the comparable number in 1979.

Mr. Lang: The Department's employment statistics are analysed according to the 1980 Standard Industrial Classification, and estimates on this basis for Greater London are not separately available for dates prior to September 1981. Comparable estimates for Greater London based on the 1968 SIC are available from censuses of employment held in June 1978 and September 1981. These, together with those for December 1985, the latest date for which figures are available, are given in the following table. As there are slight differences in the definition of manufacturing industries under the 1968 and 1980 versions of the SIC, the figures for September 1981 are given on both bases for comparison.

Employees in Employment in Manufacturing Industries in Greater London

	*1968	*1980
June 1978	769,000	—
September 1981	681,000	686,000
December 1985	—	573,000

* Standard Industrial Classification.

Tourism

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory asked the Paymaster General what recent representations he has received about obstacles to the development of tourism.

Mr. Trippier: I receive frequent representations about obstacles to the development of tourism covering a wide range of issues. The report "Pleasure, Leisure and Jobs: The Business of Tourism" published last July focused on obstacles the Government could remove and recommended improved co-ordination between Government Departments. My right hon. and noble Friend now chairs regular meetings of colleagues with tourism-related responsibilities and arrangements to improve coordination of policies at regional level are also in place.

Mr. Coombs asked the Paymaster General what information he has on tourist travel to the United Kingdom since the United States attack on Libya; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I am aware of reports that there have been cancellations of both leisure and business trips from North America due to fears of terrorism and fully appreciate the concern this has caused to the tourist industry. I can assure my hon. Friend that we are doing all we can to reassure potential American visitors that Britain is a safe destination.

The United States ambassador to this country has recently advised his fellow countrymen to come here and enjoy themselves, confident that they will be safe and appreciated. I very much welcome these remarks and hope that they will be widely heeded in the United States.

Redundancy Fund

Mr. Frank Field asked the Paymaster General what was the total number of payments made and the total amount paid from the redundancy fund in Great Britain for each year since 1979.

Mr. Trippier: The total number of payments made from the redundancy fund in each of the financial years 1979-80 to 1985-86, and the amount of money relating to those payments, are set out below:

Financial year	Number of payments made	Amount paid from redundancy fund £ million
1979-80	316,083	125·3
1980-81	675,906	305·2
1981-82	862,605	453·6
1982-83	747,768	428·4
1983-84	658,383	427·3
1984-85	492,354	333·0
1985-86	517,953	351·9

These payments include rebates to employers of part of the statutory redundancy payments they have made to their employees, redundancy payments made by the Department to employees when their employer has defaulted on the payment and payments made by the Department to employees to settle certain debts such as arrears of pay owed to them by insolvent employers.

Disabled Persons (Employment Initiatives)

Mr. Watts asked the Paymaster General how many schemes have been approved under the Manpower Services Commission scheme for pilot employment initiatives for disabled people; what funds have been allocated; and how many jobs are estimated to be provided.

Mr. Lang: A contract for one project has been placed, and so far four other projects have been approved in principle. The cost of the five projects to the Manpower Services Commission is estimated to be £180,000 over three years.

The scheme is designed to encourage and enable voluntary organisations to place disabled people into jobs elsewhere. The two projects which have specified the number of placings they aim to achieve expect to place some 65 people over the first three years. And the five projects so far approved will employ directly nine people.

Power Stations (Asbestos)

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Paymaster General what health checks take place on people who have worked with asbestos in power stations during their working life; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: Power station workers generally are not significantly exposed to asbestos, but exposure can occur during large-scale operations such as demolition. All employees, including those in power stations, who work with asbestos insulation and coating are subject to the Asbestos (Licensing) Regulations and have two-yearly statutory medical examinations for so long as they are employed on asbestos work.

Mines and Quarries Inspectorate

Mr. Lofthouse asked the Paymaster General (1) if he is satisfied with the frequency of visits to coal mines by the Mines and Quarries Inspectorate; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he is satisfied with the current staffing levels of the Mines and Quarries Inspectorate; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: I am satisfied both with the current staffing levels of the Mines and Quarries Inspectorate and with the frequency of visits to coal mines by Mines and Quarries Inspectors.

Six inspectors have recently joined the inspectorate or will do so shortly. Inspectors visit mines in accordance with work plans drawn up by inspectors in charge of local districts taking account of local circumstances and knowledge.

Coal and Glass Industries

Mr. Lofthouse asked the Paymaster General what numbers were employed in the coal and glass industries, respectively, in the Castleford travel-to-work area (a) in 1969 and (b) in 1985.

Mr. Lang: The precise information requested is not available.

The following table gives the latest available figures from the 1981 census of employment and the earliest on a consistent basis which are for 1971. More up-to-date employment estimates for travel-to-work areas will become available following publication of the 1984 census of employment later this year.

Figures for the glass industry alone cannot be given without indirectly disclosing confidential information relating to individual firms. Figures are therefore given for a broader group of industries comprising the manufacture of glass, bricks, fireclay and refractory goods, pottery, abrasives and certain building materials.

Employees in employment in the Castleford travel-to-work area (thousands)
Industry and Order or Minimum List Heading (MLH) of the Standard Industrial Classification 1968

	June 1971	September 1981
Coal mining (MLH 101)	13·7	12·4
Bricks, pottery, glass, etc. (Order XVI)	3·8	3·1

As results of the 1971 census are not available for the new travel-to-work areas (as announced in 1984) figures are given for the travel-to-work area as defined before the 1984 review.

Coal Industry

Mr. Lofthouse asked the Paymaster General if he will list the number of fatalities and injuries at work in the mining industry since 1970; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The available information is shown in the following table:

Accidents in mines in Great Britain reported to Her Majesty's Mines and Quarries Inspectorate

Microwave Radiation

Sir Bernard Braine asked the Paymaster General when he expects the new guidelines on standards of protection for the public against microwave radiation to be published by the National Radiological Protection Board.

Mr. Trippier: I shall reply to my right hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Leicester (Ministerial Visit)

Mr. Spencer asked the Paymaster General if he will make a statement about his recent official visit to Leicester.

Mr. Kenneth Clarke: I paid a short visit to Leicester on Friday 25 April. My first engagement was with the Leicester and county chamber of commerce and industry to discuss the inner cities initiative in Highfields. I met a number of local employers and we explored the role the private sector might play. Afterwards I met some representatives from the local community and invited them to put forward specific ideas and proposals for the task force to consider.

During my visit I emphasised that the task force aims to work in close co-operation with all sections of the community in drawing up plans for action to tackle Highfields' problems.

Job Security Clearance

Mr. A. Cecil Walker asked the Paymaster General what is Her Majesty's Government's policy towards the use of job security clearance in respect of persons from Northern Ireland applying for certain sensitive posts in Great Britain; to what types of post such clearance applies; and what assessment he has made of the effects on the ability of applicants from Northern Ireland to compete for posts with other candidates who are not subject to such clearance.

Mr. Luce [pursuant to his reply, 12 May 1986]: I have been asked to reply.

It is not clear to which posts the hon. Member refers.

Applicants for employment in Government service in Great Britain are subject to such pre-employment inquiries as the nature of the post requires, irrespective of whether they are from Northern Ireland or from England, Scotland or Wales.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

European Community Food Exports

Mr. Terlezki asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how many tonnes of European Economic Community beef, butter, grain and litres of wine have been sold to the Soviet Union, during the years 1975 to 1980 and 1980 to 1985; what has been the cost paid by the British taxpayer; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner: The information requested on European Community exports to the Soviet Union for 1985 is contained in my later reply today to my hon. Friend. Similar information for the periods 1976 to 1983 and 1984 have been provided in replies of 25 March 1975, at columns 1-2, and 20 February 1986, at columns 331-34. Information on a similar basis for 1975 is not readily available. Details are not available of the costs of refunds on exports to individual destinations.

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will publish a table showing the amounts of foodstuffs exported by the EEC to the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics and east Europe in 1985; and if he will provide details of the comparable export totals in each of the previous five years.

Mrs. Fenner [pursuant to her reply, 12 May 1986, c. 372]: The information requested for 1985 is contained in the table. Comparable information for the periods 1976 to 1983 and 1984 was contained in replies of 21 October 1985, at columns 1-2, and 20 February 1986, at columns 331-34, respectively.

Frozen Food

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food why Her Majesty's Government decided no to consult the British frozen food industry on the provision in the Spanish treaty of accession to the European Economic Community increasing duties on frozen food imports to Spain from 4·1 per cent. to 15·7 per cent.; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner: I refer the hon. Member to my reply of 8 April, at column 36.

SCOTLAND

Housing Improvement, Maryhill

Mr. Craigen asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if, pursuant to the reply of 27 March, Official Report, columns 590-91, to the hon. Member for Glasgow, Maryhill he can indicate when Glasgow district council will be advised of a decision on the Woodlands (Maryhill Road No. 1) housing action area for improvement.

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. and learned Friend hopes to inform Glasgow district council of his decision on the draft Woodlands (Maryhill Road No. 1) housing action area for improvement within the next few weeks.

Regional Councils (Expenditure)

Mr. Henderson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will seek powers to intervene when there is prima facie evidence that a regional council is undertaking expenditure on matters which are properly the responsibility of district councils and which could have the effect of making ratepayers in one district pay for facilities provided for another district.

Mr. Ancram: The powers of regional and district councils were recently reviewed by the committee chaired by Lord Stodart of Leaston. The Government implemented their response to the committee's recommendations in the Local Government and Planning (Scotland) Act 1982. It is up to authorities to satisfy themselves that they have the necessary power to incur expenditure on particular services. If an authority incurs expenditure beyond its powers, that is a matter for the auditor under the arrangements set out in the Local Government (Scotland) Act 1973.

Mental Health Officers

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many and what proportion of mental health officers appointed before 1 April have so far fulfilled the requirements regarding training and so on of the Mental Health (Scotland) Act 1984; and what arrangements are being made for training and so on for those who have not yet fulfilled these requirements.

Mr. John MacKay: The rate of progress is a matter for local authorities, but I understand that some 200 persons have completed extensive courses and that some 200 have undertaken introductory training. Most were appointed as mental health officers before 1 April 1986. Directions made by my right hon. and learned Friend on 29 March 1985 require local authorities to satisfy themselves as to the qualifications, experience and competence of the officers concerned for the purpose of such appointments. Training and assessment for this purpose are subject to arrangement by the Central Council for Education and Training in Social Work. Officers appointed before 1 April 1986 are required to have met these requirements not later than 31 March 1987.

Child Abuse

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if, in the light of the draft circular on child abuse issued by the Secretary of State for Social Services he has any plans to issue a circular in Scotland on the same subject; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: I have no plans to issue a similar draft in Scotland. Scottish local authorities have developed procedures for handling cases of child abuse in the light of earlier guidance. They are conscious of the need to maintain and improve standards and to ensure effective co-operation with health and other services, and I am not persuaded that further guidance from central Government is needed. The Scottish Education Department recently issued a report on social work issues in child abuse which has been widely welcomed, and officials will be discussing with local authorities whether any specific aspects need to be followed up and reviewed.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Bed and Breakfast Establishments

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) what survey his Department is taking as to the number of bed and breakfast establishments in each of the 32 London boroughs; and if he will make a list of them;

(2) what survey is taken by his Department of the general conditions of the bed and breakfast accommodation which are now available under the bed and breakfast regulations;

(3) what survey his Department has taken of the number of people who have been forced to move from the London borough of Wandsworth as a result of the bed and breakfast accommodation regulations;

(4) what survey his Department has made in the London borough of Wandsworth of the number of bedspaces now available to unemployed homeless people;

(5) what survey his Department has taken as to the number of bed and breakfast establishments which charge within his Department's limits; and if he will make a statement;

(6) what is the present number of bed and breakfast units available for homeless people within the London Borough of Wandsworth.

Mr. Newton: I regret that comprehensive information is not available centrally on the number of hotels and other board and lodging establishments, their charges and available bedspaces in Wandsworth, London or Great Britain. This information could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Accommodation standards in houses in multiple occupation—which include board and lodging establishments — are a matter for individual local authorities who have a wide range of powers. As part of the current review of board and lodging limits, information has been collected about the charges in a sample of different types of boarder accommodation throughout the country and findings will be made available in due course. The results of recent surveys of boader claimants, which will also be made available, indicate that most claimants seen thought their lodging provided good value for money, and that very few moved to a different board and lodging area following the introduction of new rules in April and November 1985.

Family Practitioner Committees

Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take steps to standardise the charges made by family practitioner committees for the provision of age-sex registers and computer printouts of patient lists to general practitioners; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Hayhoe: The costs to family practitioner committees of producing age-sex registers and patient lists for general medical practitioners vary according to local circumstances, including the presence or absence of computers. I have no plans to introduce standard charges.

Disablement Benefit

Mr. Lilley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will estimate the number of disabled persons who would be entitled to disablement benefit but for the current therapeutic earnings limit.

Mr. Newton: Information on sickness benefit, invalidity benefit and severe disablement allowance claims disallowed because of the limit on earnings from work done for therapeutic purposes is not available centrally. An estimate could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Pontefract Health Authority

Mr. Lofthouse asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many staff are employed within the Pontefract district health authority; and what proportion are (a) doctors, (b) nurses and midwives and (c) administrators.

Mr. Hayhoe: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member all the information he seeks. Senior medical and dental staff (that is, the consultants and senior registrars) have their contracts with regional health authorities or teaching districts only, and are not allocated to individual districts in centrally held statistics. It is not therefore possible to provide an overall total number of staff employed within a specific district. Those staffing figures which are available, are shown in the table:

Mr. Lofthouse asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many National Health Service beds and private beds were available in the Pontefract district health authority at the latest date for which figures are available.

Mr. Whitney: The information requested is given in the table.

Child Abuse

Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has to discuss his Department's draft circular child abuse with local authorities with social services responsibilities; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: The draft circular and guide to arrangements for inter-agency co-operation for the protection of children were issued on 6 May to a wide range of interested organisations including the local authority associations and each local authority with social services responsibilities. Written comments which could if necessary be supplemented by discussion are being sought by 30 September.

Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration

Sir Antony Buck asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he will make a statement on his Department's performance in responding to requests for information from the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration and on the time taken by his Department to respond to such requests.

Mr. Fowler: Many of these cases require detailed and scrupulous inquiry into complicated circumstances but nevertheless, we accept that delays have been too long. We propose to take steps to speed up the handling of cases in local and regional offices and to utilise additional staff time on the headquarters function of examining replies to the Parliamentary Commissioner.

Board for Disablement Services

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish the names of the members of the board for disablement services and their present occupations; if he will state to whom it is responsible; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: There is no Board for Disablement Services. For the time being the general manager of disablement services is accountable to the National Health Service management board. We expect to reach decisions about future arrangements after current consultations are completed and when we have received advice from the management board.

Reye's Syndrome

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services when the report of the British Reye's syndrome surveillance scheme was completed; what consultations are taking place on it; if he will place a copy of the report in the Library; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: The report of the British Reye's syndrome surveillance scheme has not yet been completed. The data is being assessed, and the Committee on Safety of Medicines is considering a preliminary communication from the authors.

Neurosurgery

Ms. Harman asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the hospitals in (a) London and (b) the rest of the United Kingdom where neurosurgery can be performed on children.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 18 April 1986, c. 534]: The available information is given in the table.

Family Credit

Mr. Gordon Brown asked the Secretary of State for Social Services at what level of gross income entitlement to housing benefit will cease, assuming that family credit is claimed where appropriate under his proposals in Cmnd. 9691 on the same basis as his reply of 24 January to the hon. Member for Dunfermline, East; Official Report, columns 345-6.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 25 April 1986, c. 264-65]: The gross income levels at which entitlement to housing benefit will cease on the illustrative assumptions used in the technical annex to Cmnd. 9691, and assuming family credit is claimed where appropriate, are set out as follows. Entitlement ceases at a lower gross income where family credit is in payment than where it is not because family credit will not be subject to income tax or national insurance contributions.

Household Type	Gross Income (£ weekly)
(i) Single person	71.52
(ii) Childless couple	98.76
(iii) Couple with one child	114.99
(iv) Couple with two children	117.80
(v) Couple with three children	134.04
(vi) Couple with four children	145.39
(vii) Lone parent with one child	96.81
(viii) Lone parent with two children	106.79
(ix) Lone parent with three children	123.70
(x) Lone parent with four children	138.68

Notes

1. The following rent and domestic rate levels respectively have been assumed for the various household types: £13.80 and £5.20 for (i) and (ii), £15.40 and £6.20 for (iii) and (vii); £16.50 and £6.30 for (iv), (v), (vi), (viii), (ix) and (x).
2. The current minimum benefit level of 50 pence has been used throughout.
3. The November 1985 tax allowances, national insurance rates, and levels of child benefit and one-parent benefit, have been used throughout.
4. The single person has been assumed to be aged over 25.
5. The ages of the children have been assumed to be as follows: under 11 years where only 1 or 2 children; 1 over 11 and 2 under 11 years where 3 children; 2 over 11 an 2 under 11 years where 4 children.
6. It has been assumed in each case that the head of the household only is in work.
7. Other assumptions are based on the illustrative figures used in the Technical Annex to Cmnd. 9691; income support rates as in paragraph 2.4 of the Annex; a taper of 60 per cent. for housing benefit in relation to rent and 20 per cent. in relation to rates; and all householders make a minimum contribution of 20 per cent. towards their rates.

Asbestos

Mr. McKelvey asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what action has been taken on the Standing Medical Advisory Committee report, "Control of the cancer hazard due to asbestos to the general population".

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to the reply, 2 May 1986, c. 514]: There was no such report issued by the Standing Medical Advisory Committee. However in 1968 a sub-committee of SMAC, under the chairmanship of the then Dr. W. R. S. Doll, made various recommendations in a committee working paper — entitled "Control of the cancer hazard due to asbestos to the general population", and SMAC accepted the sub-committee's recommendations.

The recommendations relating to the use of crocidolite and the labelling of asbestos were implemented voluntarily by industry. With the setting up of the Advisory Committee on Asbestos by the Health and Safety Commission in 1976 a more comprehensive control programme for the use, substitution and disposal of asbestos was put into effect. I shall write to the hon. Member to explain the controls that now exist.

General Practice (Premises)

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give a breakdown of the total spent in each year since 1979 by the Government on premises for general practice in both cash and constant prices.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 6 May 1986, c. 88]: The amounts directly reimbursed to general medical practitioners for rent (including notional rent for surgeries owned by the occupying practitioners and cost rents where appropriate), rates (including water rates) and improvement grants for each financial year since 1979 are as follows:

£ million

	Cash			At 1984-85 prices

Central Birmingham Health Authority

Mr. Roger King asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will institute an inquiry into the financial management of central Birmingham health authority.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 12 May 1986]: No. Some time ago departmental auditors discovered certain shortcomings in this authority's financial management, and a plan of corrective action, agreed with my officials and the West Midlands regional health authority, is now taking effect. I therefore see no purpose in instituting an inquiry. The NHS management board pays particular attention to financial management as part of its annual review of regional health authorities' performance.

Insulation Projects

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what plans he has for the future funding of local insulation projects run by volunteer groups following the proposed abolition of single payments.

Mr. Newton [pursuant to his reply, 12 May 1986]: The Government fully recognise the value of draughtproofing work carried out by voluntary groups, and we are considering future arrangements for help with these in the context of assistance with energy conservation measures as a whole. In particular, we shall wish to ensure that there is an effective alternative to the current arrangements under which single payments of supplementary benefit can be made to cover the cost of draughtproofing materials.

NATIONAL FINANCE

European Monetary System

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what reasons the EEC Commission gave for declining the Council's request to provide details of the overall budgetary effects of the European monetary system realignment for items other than common agricultural policy expenditure; if the Council will now require the Commission to provide this information; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The Commission did not explain why it would not give estimates of the overall budgetary effects of the EMS realignment, though the calculations are not straightforward, and there are particular difficulties in distinguishing the effects of the realignment itself from conjunctural factors. The Commission has said that it expects further discussion of this question when the 1986 preliminary draft supplementary and amending budget is put forward. The Council is not in a position to require the Commission to produce estimates.

Inland Revenue

Sir Antony Buck asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he is satisfied with the performance of the Inland Revenue in responding to requests for information from the Parliamentary Commissioner for Administration; and whether he will make a statement about the time taken by the Inland Revenue to respond to such requests.

Mr. Moore: Yes. The Inland Revenue gives a very high priority to Parliamentary Commissioner cases. Officials are required to give them immediate attention at all stages. Average response time is just over two months. Given the need to obtain papers and reports from a wide network of local offices and for close scrutiny by senior officers it is difficult to produce responses in a significantly shorter time.

Capital Gains Tax

Mr. Wigley asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimate of revenue forgone in 1985 from exempting gains in the value of sole or main residences from the provisions of capital gains tax in (a) the United Kingdom and (b) Wales.

Mr. Moore: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Agriculture (Self-employed Persons)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will bring up to date the information on self-employed agricultural incomes and tax given in his answers in the Official Report of 14 March 1985, at columns 246-52, and of 26 March 1985, at columns 156-58.

Mr. Moore [pursuant to his reply, 6 May 1986, c. 100]: The latest available information is for 1983-84 and is given in tables 1 to 4.

Table 1

Notes to table 1: The number ot tax units is the number of married couples and single people whose "main source" of income, usually but not always the largest source, was from self employment in agriculture and horticulture. Total income includes investment income and is before personal allowances. Non-taxable social security benefits are excluded. Profits from self-employment are included in total income net of allowable expenses and after deducting losses, capital allowances and stock relief. "All ranges" include a small number with total income that was nil or (after deducting losses) negative.

Notes to Tables 3 and 4.

The number of cases is the number of married men and single people whose "main source" — usually but not always the largest source—of earned income is from self-employment in agriculture and horticulture; plus the number of married women whose largest source of self employment income is from agriculture and horticulture. Gross profit and taxable profit includes any non-agricultural/horticultural profits of the individual concerned but excludes agricultural-horticultural profits of married men and single people whose "main source" of earned income is not from self-employment in agriculture and horticulture and of married women whose largest source of self-employment income is not from agriculture and horticulture.

Agriculture (Expenditure Limits)

Mr. Foulkes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what limit on (a) overall and (b) agricultural spending has been set by the European Economic Community Council of Ministers for 1987; and how this compares with the equivalent figures for 1986.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 6 May 1986, c. 98]: The figures are as follows:

Reference Framework

Million ecu

	1986	1987
Agricultural Guideline	20,619·4	21,648·8
Ad Hoc Addition for Spain and Portugal	567·0	1,312·0
Total Agricultural Guarantee Spending	21,186·4	22,960·8
Non Compulsory Expenditure	6,536·7	7,950·1
Other Compulsory Expenditure	2,535·7	4,393·3
TOTAL AMOUNT	30,258·8	35,304·2

The figures for non-compulsory expenditure and other compulsory expenditure (and hence the totals) are not strictly comparable, since the 1986 figures were calculated on an EC10 basis, and those for 1987 on an EC12 basis.

WALES

Cancer Treatment Facilities

Mr. Best asked the Secretary of State for Wales if, further to his answer to the hon. Member for Ynys Môn of 28 April, Official Report, column 287, he will publish the reports of the departmental working party on regional services to north Wales and of the Welsh medical committee advisory group on cancer services.

Mr. Mark Robinson: A consultation paper incorporating the findings and recommendations of the departmental working party on regional services to north Wales is in preparation and expected to be issued shortly. The report of the Welsh Medical Committee Advisory Group on cancer services was only recently received and is presently being studied.

Soviet-Nuclear Accident

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Wales if there has been nuclear radiation from the Chernobyl catastrophe in the Ukraine, registered in South Glamorgan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: In South Glamorgan levels of radioactivity detected were low, and even at their peak remained well below that which could prove a threat to public health. We are continuing to monitor the situation.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Fraud

Mr. Best asked the Attorney-General, what are his latest figures for fraud prosecution under the fraud investigation group procedures; and if he will make a statement.

The Attorney-General: The latest information available from the Director of Public Prosecutions relates to the first quarter of 1986. During that period 26 trials on indictment (involving 66 defendants) handled by the fraud divisions of his Department were completed. Pleas of guilty or convictions were obtained in 24 cases. The outcome of those cases when analysed in terms of defendants was as follows:

	Number
Pleaded guilty	35
Convicted	21
Acquitted	9
Nolle prosequi entered	1

Of the 26 cases, six were formerly designated as FIG cases, but FIG methods are increasing employed even when a case is not formally so designated. The total sum at risk exceeded £44 million. The average length of the trial in contested cases was 12 days.

OVERSEAS DEVELOPMENT

ASIAN Development Bank

Mr. Watts asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs what plans Her Majesty's Government have to provide additional resources to the ASIAN Development Bank.

Mr. Raison: Negotiations were concluded in Manila on 28-29 April for a fourth replenishment of the Bank's concessional Asian Development Fund. The replenishment will total United States $3·6 billion, for commitment during the four years 1987 to 1990. Subject to parliamentary approval in due course, Britain's share of the total will be £95·08 million.

Crown Agents (Exhibition)

Mr. Sackville asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will arrange for an exhibition to be mounted in the Upper Waiting Hall by Crown Agents stamps.

Mr. Raison: I understand that arrangements have already been made for such an exhibition to be mounted on 3 to 6 June.

TRANSPORT

MV Derbyshire

Mr. Ron Brown asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will place a copy of his Department's draft report, entitled "A Report into the Circumstances attending the loss of MV 'Derbyshire'" which foundered about 9 September 1980 in position approximately 25° 30' north, 130° 30' east with the loss of 44 lives, dated July 1985, in the Library.

Mr. Ridley: The document to which the hon. Member refers was an early draft of the Department's report into the loss of MV Derbyshire, which was circulated only to interested parties for their comments. The draft was subsequently revised in the light of comments received and of further information which became available. A copy of the final report was placed in the Library on 21 March. It would not be appropriate to place the earlier version in the Library as well.

Roadworks (London)

Mr. Higgins asked the Secretary of State for Transport what was the cost of the recent road works at (a) Aldwych and (b) the south end of Westminster bridge.

Mr. Ridley: Since these schemes are the responsibility of respectively the City of Westminster and the London borough of Lambeth, I regret I cannot give my right hon. Friend the answers.

Bus Shelters

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Transport what grants he makes available for the construction of bus shelters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: No grants are available from central Government specifically for this purpose. The provision of bus shelters is a matter for local authorities and the bus operators concerned.

Tyres (Tread Depth)

Mr. Iain Mills asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he has decided to amend the regulations governing tyre tread depth; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: On 25 February I held a meeting with the organisations most concerned to discuss the information set out in the Department's consultation paper about the enforcement and road safety implications of the 1983 regulations on tyre tread depth. In the light of this information and the opinions expressed at the meeting I have concluded that the present regulations can be enforced without undue difficulty and that the changes proposed by the tyre industry and others would impose a substantial cost to road users without any significant benefit to road safety. I therefore see no reason to amend the regulations.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Teacher Training

Mr. Key asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what proposals he has for intakes to courses at initial teacher training in the public sector of higher education in England; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Keith Joseph: My Department is today writing to the institutions concerned, and to their governing and validating bodies, to inform them of my provisional decisions about the allocation to institutions of the overall target numbers of students to be admitted to courses of initial teacher training in the public sector beginning in 1987-89. I shall make final decisions after considering any representations that I may receive.

The overall target numbers are closely in line with those which my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales and I announced on 26 March 1985 following advice from the Advisory Committee on the Supply and Education of Teachers. These targets take account of forecast demand for teachers into the 1990s, the acknowledged need for some further modest improvement in the pupil-teacher ratio and the gradual increase in total pupil numbers which is expected to feed through from primary into secondary schools by the end of the decade. They allow for a substantial expansion of intakes to primary training — targets for England increase from 7,020 in 1985 to 8,615 in 1989. For secondary training the targets are raised from 3,930 to 4,545; these numbers exceed the likely short-term needs of schools will maintain the capacity of training institutions to expand to meet future increase in demand for secondary teachers. The total numbers provisionally allocated to each institution for 1987-89 are set out in the table.

My basic aim has been to allocate the overall numbers to institutions in the way most likely to foster the further development of a high-quality, cost-effective and resilient system of initial teacher training capable of responding flexibly to changing demands into the 1990s. For the training of primary teachers I have sought to ensure that all teacher training establishments offering Bachelor of Education courses should be able to provide a minimum of two years' subject study at a level appropriate to higher education across a range of curricular specialisms. I have given particular attention to the need to provide for an increase in training for teaching pupils in the early years of primary education and to the need for more attention to mathematics and science as subject specialisms within primary BEd courses. For training for secondary teaching I have concluded that the system would be strengthened by ensuring that all subject intakes should be of 15 or more. I have also sought to ensure the reinforcement of subject strength by grouping intakes to related secondary subjects together within the same institutions. I have had particular regard to institutions' capacity to recruit to those secondary subjects such as mathematics, science, and CDT for which recruitment has always been difficult, to new courses in these subjects intended to widen the pool of recruitment and to proposals for courses which utilise skills in ethnic minority languages.

The result is some shift in the balance of provision between institutions and courses in the interests of strengthening the system of training as a whole, taking account of the capabilities of individual institutions in the light of the planning criteria notified to them. As a result intakes to courses of initial teacher training will remain steady or increase at 50 out of 54 institutions as set out in the table. The allocations also provide for the ending of intakes to courses of initial teacher training from 1987 at two institutions, Humberside CHE and Portsmouth polytechnic, and for an expansion of secondary and cessation of primary intakes at one, the College of St. Mark and St. John.

I have been particularly concerned to foster the academic strength of institutions so that future teachers will be fitted to meet the increasing demands for more rigorous and effective teaching in schools. I have invited all institutions in the public sector to look particularly carefully at the further development of their existing strengths through closer academic integration with other advanced further education, within their own institution or outside. Where these associations involve universities they present valuable scope for extending and strengthening transbinary academic cooperation between the university and public sectors. Progress to this end will be reviewed in two to three years' time. I have invited five small institutions (Bishop Grosseteste college, Charlotte Mason college, North Riding college, Rolle college and Westminster college) to enter into closer academic association with more broadly based higher education institutions; their 1988 and 1989 intakes will be reviewed in the light of progress with those associations. I have also asked two other small institutions, Bretton Hall and La Sainte Union college, to examine the scope for closer academic association with another institution. In the case of Hertfordshire CHE, I will review its 1988 and 1989 intakes in the light of progress towards academic integration as part of their intended merger with Hatfield polytechnic.

I believe that this allocation of target numbers will help to develop a stronger, more robust and effective system of initial teacher training, with greater academic strength and more resilience to meet the challenges facing education in the 1990s.

Nursery Education

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the proportion of under-fives in nursery education in the United Kingdom; and what information he has about the equivalent figures for France, Japan and the United States of America.

Mr. Dunn: There is no standard definition of "nursery education". The forms of pre-school provision vary between and within countries, as does practice in the age and times of year at which children are admitted to compulsory education. The table shows the latest available comparative information on all forms of grouped provision for young children. Rates for both three and four, and three to five-year-olds are shown, as in the other countries compulsory schooling starts at age six.

Universities and Public Sector Institutions

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the cost per student on full-time first degree courses in universities and public sector institutions, respectively, of those studying (a) medicine, (b) physics, (c) mathematics, (d) engineering, (e) English, (f) modern languages and (g) social studies at the latest available date.

Mr. Walden: The available information including research costs funded through the institutions is as follows:

Great Britain universities: student unit costs 1983-84 academic year

Subject	Net institutional recurrent unit cost £
Clinical medicine	8,080
Physical sciences	6,410
Mathematics	4,150
Engineering	5,630
Arts (including English and modern languages)	3,750
Social studies	3,630

England public sector higher education: student unit cost 1983-84 financial year

	Net institutional recurrent unit cost £
Practical subjects	3,590
Classroom-based subjects	2,460

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set out in real terms the movement of salaries for (a) professors, (b) readers, (c) senior lecturers and (d) lecturers at British universities and at public sector institutions, respectively, over the period 1970, 1974, 1979, and at the latest available date.

Mr. Walden: Information in the precise form requested is not available. Movements of the maximum points of the relevant salary scales, (and of the average salaries of university professors) are as follows:

Higher Education

Mr. Forman asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will set out in tabular form the percentage of total public expenditure and the percentage of gross domestic product spent on higher education in the United Kingdom in every year from 1970 to the latest available date and provide comparable figures for France, West Germany, Italy, Japan, Canada and the United States of America.

Mr. Walden: The following table shows such data that are available and can be provided without disproportionate cost.

Schools (Parental Choice)

Mr. Michael Cocks asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what arrangements he makes for appeals against changes to areas of prime responsibility under the terms of section 12(1)(d) of the Education Act 1980; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Dunn: I refer the right hon. Gentleman to the answer I gave on 12 May, at column 319. Parents may express a preference for any school with which the local education authority must comply unless certain specified reliefs apply. If any parent is unhappy with the authority's decision he may appeal to a local independent appeals committee set up under section 7 of and in accordance with schedule 2 to the 1980 Act. The decision of such an appeal committee is binding on the LEA.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Carryduff Primary School

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many pupils attended Carryduff primary school in each of the past 10 years.

Dr. Mawhinney: The information is as follows:

1977	362
1978	365
1979	340
1980	316
1981	316

District Councils

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will list the names of those district councils which are (a) now holding regular business meetings and (b) still not performing their normal business duties.

Mr. Needham: The councils for Derry, Down, Fermanagh, Magherafelt, Moyle, Newry and Mourne, Omagh and Strabane are holding regular meetings; Belfast city council has voted to resume normal meetings.

The remaining councils which are continuing either to suspend or adjourn council meetings are:

Antrim, Ards, Armagh, Ballymena, Ballymoney, Banbridge, Carrickfergus, Castlereagh, Coleraine, Cookstown, Craigavon, Dungannon, Larne, Limavady, Lisburn, Newtownabbey and North Down.

Terrorism

Mr. McNamara asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what was the total number of persons charged under the Northern Ireland (Emergency Provisions) Act and the Prevention of Terrorism Act in 1984 and 1985 in Northern Ireland; and what was the total number of persons charged under other Acts with terrorist-type offences in Northern Ireland for 1984 and 1985.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prison Officers (Dispute)

Mr. Wheeler asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement on the latest position in the dispute with the Prison Officers Association.

Mr. Douglas Hurd: Following my statement to the House on 1 May, a series of exploratory talks have been held between Home Office officials and representatives of the Prison Officers Association with the object of securing a simultaneous calling-off of the POA's industrial action and the start of substantive discussions on the agenda for the future set out in my letter of 22 April to the POA general secretary. The talks have now been concluded by a letter from the permanent under-secretary of State at the Home Office to the association's general secretary, which records the clarification offered during the talks in response to a number of questions about my letter raised by the POA.

The letter includes clarification of the process through which POA branches will be consulted about changes to existing agreements, in amplification of the formula set out in my letter of 22 April, that is:

"Management accepts the Trade Union Side's unfettered right to meet with management to present its concerns in relation to manning levels by means of discussion and consultation leading where possible to agreement. Where agreement is not reached by this process, management will determine manning levels."

The clarification provides that where governors wish to alter existing agreements they will give 14 days notice of their intention to do so in order to allow for discussion of the proposed change. The aim of both sides will be to settle local disputes locally, but in the event of disagreement there is provision for possible reference to a higher level. This reflects current best practice as well as previous agreements with the POA.

The letter from the permanent under-secretary of state maintains the Department's stance (which has been accepted by the POA in the course of the dispute) that where agreement is not possible, management will determine manning levels.

Other issues touched on in the letter include the future handling of this year's pay claim from the association, of tax compensation on housing allowance and of proposals for change in working practices. I am appending the full text to this answer. I welcome the decision of the NEC of the POA, following receipt of the letter, to ballot the association's members, recommending the calling-off of the industrial action.

Dear Mr. Evans

Following the Home Secretary's statement in Parliament on 1 May, NEC representatives and Home Office officials have held a series of discussions designed to achieve the objective of a simultaneous calling off of industrial action (which you have said would require a ballot of your members) and the start of substantive discussions between us about the issues for the future set out in the Home Secretary's letter of 22 April.

In the course of discussions you indicated that it would be helpful if we could clarify a number of points arising from the Home Secretary's letter. We completed those discussions yesterday. This letter records the clarifications we have made so that the NEC can start the process of calling off the industrial action. I look forward to hearing as soon as possible the NEC's response. It remains our wish to start discussions of the issues in the letter of 22 April as soon as the industrial action is called off.

Consultation about manning levels

You asked, on page 1 of the Home Secretary's letter, how the assurance would work about consultation on manning issues. We agreed in discussion that it would be premature to invoke the draft disputes procedure, which has yet to be considered by your Conference, and which we should anyway want to discuss further with you following that.

We agreed that page 1 of the Home Secretary's letter could usefully be clarified in the following way:

> "Pending the possible introduction of a national disputes procedure, where Governors or Local Branches seek to alter existing agreements they should first give 14 days notice of their intention to do so to the other party(ies) to the agreement in order to allow for discussion of the proposed change. Where such notice is given, due regard should be paid to the provisions of NTS 3/1984.
> In the event of disagreement about the proposed change it will be open to either side, if it thinks fit, to seek the intervention of a higher level (Regional Office or the appropriate NEC members). But the aim of both sides will be for local disputes to be settled locally."

I understand that this procedural clarification is acceptable to the NEC and we shall be commending it to Governors on that basis. As the Home Secretary said in his letter, while reserving the final determination of these issues to ourselves, in the event of disagreement we have no intention of riding roughshod over prison officers or the POA on these matters.

This year's pay claim

You also sought clarification on a number of points on page 2 of the Home Secretary's letter, the first of which concerned a resumption of negotiations on this year's pay claim. I can confirm that these would be resumed as soon as industrial action was called off. The Treasury should be able to send a written reply to your claim, as previously envisaged, within a few days of the ending of the action. It would be the aim of the Official Side thereafter to conduct negotiations in such a way as to seek a settlement of this year's pay claim as quickly as might reasonably be done.

The 39 hour week

I am ready to confirm that the Home Secretary's letter of 7 April still stands. He then said that in the light of the progress made in 1985/86, the Government would follow through Mr. Brittan's offer on the 39 hour week. He said that he hoped that the POA would conduct itself in a way which would enable him to convince other Ministers that the Association remained interested in the responsible conduct of business between us. If industrial action were formally called off, the Home Secretary would be ready to consult his Ministerial colleagues about moving to a 39 hour week.

Without prejudice to the result of that consultation, what a 39 hour week would mean in practice would need to be worked out in detail following the withdrawal of industrial action. As I have indicated to you, our assumption is that it would not mean that everybody would continue to work the same number of hours as they do now and receive an additional hour's overtime. The reduction in the working week would have to be effected at nil cost and would require some adjustments to the existing shift arrangements. The precise form of these would be determined at establishment level, on the basis of centrally laid down guidelines. We should be ready to discuss these guidelines with you if the industrial action were called off.

Tax compensation on housing allowance

I can still confirm that tax compensation for 1985-86 will be paid as soon as the industrial action is called off. For the future, we envisage that the pay arrangements, consequent on a new shift and complementing system, would consolidate housing allowance. If this consolidation was agreed for introduction from April next year, we would be ready to make a further payment of tax compensation for 1986-87. If this consolidation were not then agreed, there would need to be separate discussions on phasing out tax compensation.

Phasing out would be our starting point in those discussions because we believe that the dropping of the general obligation to live in has altered the whole basis of housing allowance and we see no future for tax compensation under the present arrangements. You made clear that you would wish to challenge this view. As we have previously made plain, we should be ready to consider any arguments you might advance as to why tax compensation should continue. That would be something to be considered in the substantive discussions which would follow the calling off of industrial action.

New working practices

In his letter of 22 April the Home Secretary said that he would ask the Prison Department to put to you within one month, ie. in time for consideration at your Association's Annual Conference, the outcome of studies on working practices which his predecessor proposed at your Conference last year. The Home Secretary said in the debate in the House of Commons on 6 May that the report of the studies would be published. Following those undertakings, the Report of the Shift and Complementing Study is published today. Copies of the Report are being sent to you, along with the text of the Home Secretary's statement covering publication.

The Home Secretary's statement says that the Government will now work up, on the basis of the report, a package of proposals and as part of that process will be looking at what needs to be done to modernise pay systems to provide fair levels of pay for prison officers. We intend to put these proposals to you as soon as we can following the ending of industrial action.

You asked whether the starting date we envisaged would be 1 April 1987 or, say, 31 March 1987. Our target for the new systems is April 1987. We understand the inwardness of your point and accept that the precise timing of any changes would be for discussion between us.

NEPOs and uniform

In the course of our last meeting, you mentioned that you would want early substantive discussions with the Department, following the calling off of industrial action, on NEPOs and uniform. We shall arrange a meeting as soon as industrial action is over.

Heathrow Airport

Sir Dudley Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what criteria were used in deciding to provide five channels for other passport holders and two for combined United Kingdom and European Community passport holders at terminal 4 arrivals at Heathrow airport;

(2) if he will arrange to install a separate channel for United Kingdom residents at terminal 4 arrivals at Heathrow airport; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: The clearance of British and Community passengers takes less time than the examination of those of other nationalities. The immigration arrivals control at terminal 4 has 28 desks, of which a maximum of 22 are used for the examination of passengers of other nationalities. There are four gates in front of these 22 desks from which passengers are presented to immigration officers.

This ratio of desks was decided on the information available to the Department on the probable proportion of passengers of different nationalities. The control is staffed flexibly and immigration officers can and do switch desks at the discretion of the chief immigration officer on duty with the objective of clearing all passengers in the quickest possible time.

The necessary signs for a separate channel for British passengers will be introduced at terminal 4, Heathrow. It would not be practical to allocate a separate channel to passengers of other nationalities who are resident in the United Kingdom.

Sir Dudley Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what procedures are followed at Heathrow airport when, due to serious flight delays, aircraft arrive at Heathrow airport late at night with large numbers of people seeking re-entry into Britain.

Mr. Waddington: The normal deployment of staff at Heathrow is based on the scheduled times of arrival and departure of flights so that passengers can pass through the controls as rapidly as possible, and resources can be used to the best advantage. When flights are delayed late at night passengers are examined by staff allocated for night duty, augmented by staff on late shift remaining on duty and—or night duty staff from other terminals.

Sir Dudley Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department why, on 30 April at 10.30 pm, there were only two officers on duty at the passport desks for United Kingdom and European Community passport holders arriving at terminal 4 at Heathrow airport, with a crowd of over 500 people queueing to be admitted.

Mr. Waddington: The late arrival of a flight from Paris at 9.50 pm on 30 April coincided with another flight from Paris, followed shortly after by a flight from New York. The number of officers available for the control was six. When the passengers arrived in the control hall one immigration officer was stationed at the British — European Community channel. The chief immigration officer on duty allocated a second and then a third officer to that channel when it was clear that the majority of passengers were British, or were Community nationals.

Population Statistics

Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will give an indication of the number by which the population of the United Kingdom has increased since 1956 in consequence of the arrival of new British citizens.

Mr. Waddington: The available information, derived from the labour force survey, suggests that in 1984 about 3 to 3½ million persons resident in Great Britain had been born abroad, about half of whom had British nationality. The number of United Kingdom residents born abroad who were in Great Britain on the night of the decennial census was 1·6 million in 1951, 2·2 million in 1961, 3·0 million in 1971 and 3·4 million in 1981.

Police (Establishment)

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make it his policy to increase police forces in England and Wales, by at least 10,000, over the next two years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Total manpower, police and civilian, in England and Wales has increased by about 14,000 since May 1979, to 160,627 on 28 February 1986, including a increase of more than 9,000 police officers.

In October 1985 my right hon. Friend set work in hand to assess where there are further needs for increases in manpower. These reviews have been completed, and he is now urgently considering their outcome.

Police Duties

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) if he will estimate the proportion of a police officer's time spent on administrative duties; what measures are being taken to reduce this; and if he will make a statement;

(2) if he will undertake a review of form filling required by the police service with a view to its reduction.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Administrative work in police forces is kept under review by both chief officers and Her Majesty's inspectors of constabulary. Chief officers of police are encouraged to release police officers wherever possible from duties which can be more properly and economically carried out by civilians. We are concerned to reduce the administrative load of police officers wherever possible.

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many forms members of the Metropolitan police are required to fill in to order a new police car; what measures he proposes to take to reduce this number; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the ordering of a new car by the Metropolitan police requires the completion of only a single order form — often covering a number of vehicles — by a member of the chief engineer's department. No police officer is involved where an existing vehicle is being replaced. When an additional car is considered to be needed, two further forms have to be completed: an application by the officer making the request, supported by the detailed justification of the case for an increase. I do not consider that this documentation is excessive.

EC (Broadcasting Directive)

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the outcome of his discussions with the EEC Commission on the proposed broadcasting directive; and from what article of the Treaty of Rome the proposed directive stems.

Mr. Giles Shaw: We had a broad exchange of views with the commissioner responsible, Lord Cockfield, on the likely content of the draft directive and the purposes behind it. In presenting its proposal, the European Commission has referred in particular to articles 57(2) and 66 of the Treaty of Rome, but the precise powers under which any directive might be made would be a matter for decision by the Council at the time.

Community Radio

Mr. Sedgemore asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he expects to make an announcement on the application for a licence for a community radio station in Hackney; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I would refer the hon. Member to the reply given to questions from my hon. Friend the Member for Rutland and Melton (Mr. Latham) and the hon. Member for Sunderland, North (Mr. Clay) on 6 May 1986, at columns 19.

Terrorism (Remanded Persons)

Mr McNamara asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what was the number of days spent on remand by those remanded in custody for terrorist-type offences in 1985 with regard to cases now completed in England and Wales, the number of bail applications and the number that were refused, respectively;

(2) what was the average number of days spent on remand by those remanded in custody for terrorist-type offences in England and Wales in 1984 with regard to cases now completed; how many applications for bail were received; and how many were refused.

Mr. Mellor: The only information which is readily available relates to prisoners who are now in prison custody in category A. It does not cover prisoners who have been released or downgraded.

The average number of days spent on remand by prisoners first received in custody in 1984 was 303. Eight applications for bail are recorded; all were refused.

Of those prisoners first received in custody in 1985 the cases of two have been completed, both spent a total of 399 days on remand; our records show that one made two unsuccessful applications for bail.

ENERGY

Petrol Prices

Mr. Bruce asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will investigate regional variations in the reduction in petrol prices following the general fall in oil prices.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith My Department keeps in close touch with developments in oil product prices. Regional variations in petrol prices are now narrowing. Competition matters are the responsibility of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry.

Sellafield (Radiation)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will list every leak or accident and discharge of radiation from Sellafield since the plant began to operate.

Mr. Goodlad: I have asked the chairman of British Nuclear Fuels plc to write to the hon. Member on this matter.

Nuclear Power

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Energy, what is the cost of British Nuclear Fuels proposed advertising compaign to inform the public about the safety and benefit of nuclear power.

Mr. Peter Walker: BNFL has always held exhibitions and distributed educational material to inform the public about the nuclear power industry and its role in it. I understand that it intends to increase this programme over the coming year in order that the full facts about its operations are explained to the public.

EMPLOYMENT

Basildon Local Enterprise Agency

61. Mr. Amess asked the Paymaster General how many new businesses Basildon local enterprise agency has helped start up since its inception.

Mr. Trippier: Local enterprise agencies, such as Basildon local enterprise agency, are clearly making a significant contribution to encouraging small firm formation at the local level. However, the information currently held by my Department on Basildon local enterprise agency does not include details of how many new small businesses the agency has claimed to have helped set up since its inception.

Small Businesses

62. Mr. Colvin asked the Paymaster General what was the number of small businesses established in the last 12-month period for which figures are available; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: There were around 180,000 business start-ups in 1984, based on the number of VAT registrations. Estimates for 1985 are not yet available, but early indications are that there was a broadly similar number of start-ups in 1985.

The starting of over 1 million new businesses in the six years to the end of 1985 is encouraging, but there are no grounds for complacency, since the numbers which cease to trade are also high.

New Workers Scheme

Mr. Wainwright asked the Paymaster General if he will consider amending the regulations for the new workers scheme to prevent an employer from substituting a subsidised worker by another at the end of 52 weeks.

Mr. Lang: We recognise that under any scheme where we have many thousands of employers participating there is the possibility of some employers not retaining an employee beyond the support period of the scheme. However, our experience of the young workers scheme has been that the majority of young people remain with their employer once support under the scheme has ended. We have no reason to think tha the number of young people kept on after a period of new workers scheme support will be significantly different.

Mr. Wainwright asked the Paymaster General what consideration he has given to the proposed amendment to rule (e) of the new workers scheme put forward to him by the Institute of Careers Officers.

Mr. Lang: A condition of the new workers scheme is that on the day the young person starts employment with the employer making the application for new workers scheme support, he or she must be unable to find a suitable YTS continuation place.

As I have advised the Institute of Careers Officers, the new workers scheme is primarily aimed at 18 to 20-year-olds who are no longer eligible for YTS. However, those young people still eligible but who are not able to find a suitable YTS continuation place may be eligible for new workers scheme, because they are no longer able to take advantage of YTS. The careers service has been issued with the rules of the scheme and general guidance. It is for the careers service and jobcentres to determine, dependent on local circumstances, what is or is not suitable for a particular individual.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Forman asked the Paymaster General if he will pubish information available to him from surveys of the total work force which show graduate unemployment rates as compared with the average for the population as a whole in each of the years from 1970 to the latest available date.

Mr. Lang: The available information derived from censuses of population and labour force surveys is as follows:

Unemployment rates in Great Britain

per cent.

	Census of population		Labour Force Survey
	*Rate among economically active		Rate among economically active†
	population	graduates‡	population	graduates‡
1971	4·9	2·0	—	—
1981	9·4	3·4	9·7	4·0
1983	—	—	11·7	4·9
1984	—	—	11·2	4·4
1985	—	—	10·7	4·2

* 1971: those aged 18-69. 1981: those aged 18 and over.

† 1981: those aged 16-59. 1983: those aged 16 and over 1984 and 1985: men aged 16-64; women aged 16-59.

‡ those with university degrees or equivalent qualifications.

Unemployment Benefit

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Paymaster General what is the maximum amount of earnings a person who works for 15 hours in three working days can earn and still be able to claim unemployment benefit for the other three working days in the week.

Mr. Lang: Entitlement to unemployment benefit is determined on a daily basis. Benefit is not payable if earnings exceed £2. Earnings on days worked do not affect entitlement on other days in the week unless, in the opinion of the independent adjudicating authorities, they are derived from employment which can be regarded as continuous and from which the earnings exceed £2 on the daily average.

Community Programme

Mr. McQuarrie asked the Paymaster General if he will consider extending the community programme for two years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lang: The period of employment for participants on the community programme is normally limited to one year and I have no present plans to change this arrangement. However, managers, supervisors and other key workers may be retained for over 12 months where there are no suitable replacements from amongst eligible long-term unemployed people.

SCOTLAND

Radiation

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what steps he intends to take to increase the supply of information to the public concerning radiation levels and future trends in those levels.

Mr. Ancram: As my right hon. and learned Friend said in reply to the hon. Member for Carrick, Cumnock and Doon Valley (Mr. Foulkes) on 8 May, at columns 217-19, the Scottish Office took early and positive steps to provide information to the public on radioactivity levels in Scotland since the Chernobyl incident. The coverage of the monitoring includes a range of radionuclides, and areas of sampling include radioactivity on grass and in free-range eggs. Information is being made available to the public daily. Monitoring and the publication of results will continue for as long as necessary.

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will give the names of the experts dealing with radiation problems in his Department, indicating their expertise in each case.

Mr. Ancram: The following professional officers in the Scottish Office deal with matters relating to radiation. Their expertise is derived from professional training, from working in the Department and from other relevant experience, which includes work in industry or in other Government Departments.

H. M. Industrial Pollution Inspectorate

I. W. W. Wright, BSc, DRCST, CEng, MIChemE, CChem, MRSC, Chief Inspector
J. A. Hetherington, BSc, MInst P, Deputy Chief Inspector
D. A. Dickson, BSc, CEng, MIChemE, Senior Inspector
Dr. D. N. S. Dixon, BSc, PhD, Senior Inspector
M. Curtis, BSc, DMS, CEng, MIChemE, Inspector
Dr. F. Forbes, BSc, PhD, Inspector
Dr. I. R. Hall, BSc, PhD, AFFIWPC, Inspector
G. H. Hunter, BSc, PhD, CChem, MRSC, Inspector
I. M. Liddle, BSc, LRSC, Inspector
Dr. G. W. Lodge, BSc, ARCS, DIC, PhD, MIIM, MBIM, Inspector
Dr. D. G. Thackrah, MA, PhD, Inspector
J. Wilson, BSc, CChem, MRSC, Inspector

Medical Services

Dr. A. D. McIntyre, MB, ChB, DPH, FFCM, DTM & H, DIH, MRCP (Ed), Principal Medical Officer
Dr. D. C. Morrison, BA, MA, PhD, Principal Scientific Officer
Dr. G. Gilray, MB, ChB, DPH, FFCM, Senior Medical Officer
Dr. S. I. Forbes, FRALMA, FACOM, MFCM, LRCS & P, DPH, DIH, DTM & H, DMSA

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland what has been the highest level of radioactivity expressed in becquerels per litre, found in rainwater in Scotland since the Chernobyl incident; and how this compares with the internationally agreed safety limit.

Mr. Ancram: The highest levels of radioactivity in a sample of collected rainwater in Scotland since the Chernobyl incident were detected on 4 May. They are set out in the table.

Radionuclide	Activity becquerels per litre
Barium 140	1,050
Caesium 134	1,650
Caesium 137	2,650
Iodine 131	9,400
Iodine 132	7,600
Technetium 99	400
Tellurium 132	10,000

The most significant of these readings in radiological terms is that for Iodine-131. An individual drinking only undiluted rainwater at the level of 9,400 becquerels per litre would have reached the internationally recommended lower emergency level, at which authorities should consider the need for action, of 50 millisieverts per year for the thyroid gland in just over 48 hours. The upper emergency level, at which it is recommended internationally that authorities should be banning the drinking of such water, is ten times as high, at 500 millisieverts. The Government issued advice to the public on 5 May that it would be desirable for the next week to avoid drinking fresh rainwater continuously. This advice was withdrawn on 10 May, because activity in rainwater fell very quickly and was by that date at very low levels.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Research and Development

16. Mr. Tom Clarke asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the current situation for research and development funding from his Department.

Mr. Pattie: My Department plans to spend £415 million in 1986-87 on support for research and development.

22. Mr. Soames asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how much of his Department's spending is allocated to research and development.

Mr. Pattie: My Department plans to spend £415 million in 1986-87 on support for research and development. This accounts for 32 per cent. of the total budget of £1,302 million.

Motor Vehicle Registrations

17. Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received regarding the proposed change in the anniversary of the motor vehicle registration prefix; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I have received representations from individual manufacturers, including BL, and from the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders generally supporting an October changeover; and from the Motor Agents Association and individual motor traders calling for July to be the month of change.

Manufactures

18. Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the total deficit in trade in manufactures with the EEC and the rest of the world, respectively, over the most recent 12 months for which figures are available.

Mr. Alan Clark: In the 12 months ending March 1986 there was a deficit with the European Community of £9·2 billion and a surplus with the rest of the world of £5·9 billion.

Fleet Support King Vessel

19. Mr. Bagier asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he has had any discussion with British Shipbuilders about the construction of a fleet support King vessel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: British Shipbuilders has kept my right hon. Friend fully informed of the development of the fleet support King design, and of its market potential. While the Royal Navy has no requirement at present for a vessel of this kind, British Shipbuilders is actively seeking overseas possibilities for this design. We will give it every support in its efforts.

British Steel Corporation

20. Mr. Strang asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met the chairman of the British Steel Corporation to discuss the board's investment programme; and if he will make a statement.

23. Mr. James Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when next he will meet the chairman-elect of the British Steel Corporation to discuss the prospects for the steel industry in Scotland.

Mr. Butcher: My right hon. Friend met Mr. Scholey for a general discussion on 17 March 1986. A further meeting has not been fixed.

Conference Trade

21. Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what information he has on subsidies offered to the conference trade by Governments in other EC member states.

Mr. Alan Clark: We have received representations about a subsidy offered by the Dutch Government to their conference industry. We are raising this matter formally with the European Commission. No evidence has been put to us of similar subsidies in other EC member states.

EC Exports (American Sanctions)

24. Mr. Pollock asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what talks he has had recently with the United States Administration on possible United States sanctions against European Economic Community exports, including Scotch whisky; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Alan Clark: I refer to the reply which I gave on 8 May to my hon. Friend the Member for Southend, East (Mr. Taylor). During his visit to Washington on 27-29 April my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State sought to dissuade the Administration from taking action against Community exports, and made clear that the Community would have to respond to any such action.

A330 and A340 Airbus

25. Mr. Sackville asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has had concerning the A330 and A340 Airbus project.

Mr. Pattie: My right hon. Friend and I have received representations from various quarters, including Airbus Industrie and British Aerospace, that the Government should support the Airbus A330-A340 projects. AI and its industrial partners, including BAe, will be reviewing progress on the projects at a number of meetings over the next few weeks. My Department will be maintaining close contact with them, and our Airbus partner Governments, as the proposals evolve. However, until Airbus Industrie and the industrial partners have completed their detailed studies of the A330-A340 projects and reached their own conclusions, it is premature to expect Governments to reach a view on the projects.

South Korea

26. Mr. Dykes asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the development of United Kingdom trade with South Korea.

Mr. Alan Clark: United Kingdom trade with the Republic of Korea is already significant, but I would like to see our exports grow still faster. We are encouraging easier market access and United Kingdom companies must exploit the opportunities.

United Kingdom Exports (America)

27. Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what estimate he has made of the cost to United Kingdom exporters of the recent United States of America requirement that certain package consignments to the United States have now to go through a United States customs broker.

Mr. Alan Clark: It is not possible to quantify the likely cost to the United Kingdom textiles industry of the measures recently introduced by United States Customs which revise United States informal entry procedures for textile imports.

Domestic Motor Market

28. Mr. Favell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will make a statement on import penetration of the domestic motor market.

Mr. Butcher: In the first four months of 1986 figures released by the Society of Motor Manufacturers and Traders show that import penetration in the domestic car market had fallen to 55·1 per cent. This is the lowest level recorded in a corresponding period for four years and compares with an overall figure of 58·1 per cent. for 1985. The fall in the share of the United Kingdom car market taken by imports this year is due to a more favourable pattern of sourcing adopted by the multinational car companies, a situation which I trust will persist.

BSC (Industry) Ltd.

29. Mr. Hirst asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement about the role of BSC (Industry) Ltd. in generating employment in areas affected by steel plant closures.

Mr. Butcher: Yes. BSC (Industry) Ltd. has a commendable record of job creation in steel closure areas; and I applaud the efforts of all concerned. The main function of the company now is to support business opportunity teams, operating in 18 designated areas. The company also converts old industrial buildings into smaller starter workshops. BSC (Industry) Ltd. reports having received over 20,000 inquiries since 1978. Two thousand businesses have been assisted; and these are committed to creating some 50,000 jobs by March 1987.

British Leyland and General Motors

30. Mr. Marlow asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he has any plans to allow further negotiations between BL and GM.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The position remains as outlined in my right hon. Friend's statement to the House on 25 March.

Polycad Scheme

31. Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the aims and objectives of the Polycad scheme.

Mr. Pattie: The aim of the Polycad scheme has been, at a cost to my Department of £3 million, to enable all students on electrical and electronic engineering degree courses at polytechnics and other colleges to gain hands-on experience in the use of computer aided design (CAD) techniques for the design of silicon integrated circuits. The scheme complements and builds on arrangements made by the University Grants Committee for the provision of equivalent facilities in universities. In helping to equip graduates with the skills needed to promote the application of information technology in United Kingdom industry the scheme represents a significant contribution by my Department in Industry Year to furthering collaboration between education and industry.

British Shipbuilders

32. Mr. Clay asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when next he plans to meet the chairman of British Shipbuilders.

Mr. Peter Morrison: My right hon. Friend often meets the chairman of British Shipbuilders. He last met Phillip Hares on Thursday 1 May.

40. Dr. Godman asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the current state of orders for British Shipbuilders.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I refer the hon. Member to the answer given to the hon. Member for Dumfermline, East (Mr. Brown) on Tuesday 6 May 1986, which listed current orders won since January 1985.

Bankruptcies

33. Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many bankruptcies there have been in the last 12 months.

Mr. Butcher: The information asked for was published on page 138 of British Business dated 18 April 1986, which is available in the Library.

Domestic Power Plant Industry

34. Mr. Nicholas Brown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the financial assistance available to the domestic power plant industry in seeking overseas orders.

Mr. Alan Clark: All Government schemes of financial assistance for exporters are available to the power plant industry and it has made considerable use of them. More than a third of the aid and trade provision has been used to support projects in the power sector and my Department is in regular discussion with individual manufacturers about the scope for ATP grant or soft loan assistance for their sales efforts in increasingly competitive overseas markets.

USA (Ministerial Visit)

35. Mr. John Browne asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his recent official visit to the United States of America.

Mr. Channon: I visited Washington and New York between 27 and 30 April. In Washington, I discussed a wide range of trade issues with members of the United States Administration and of Congress. In New York, I paid visits to the British trade development office and to Salomon Brothers; I also attended a lunch with the British American chamber of commerce.

Shipbuilding Industry

36. Mr. Ernie Ross asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the current state of negotiations in Brussels over the provisions of aid to the shipbuilding industry.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Commission has only just begun preliminary work on arrangements to replace the fifth directive on aid to shipbuilding. We have asked the Commission to ensure that its proposals for the next regime take account of the various subsidies for shipbuilding in member states. I am assured that the Commission is hard at work along these lines.

Manufacturing

37. Mr. Cunliffe asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the level of manufacturing over the last 12 months.

Mr. Butcher: Provisional data suggest that manufacturing output in the three months to February 1986 (the latest available) was 1 per cent. higher than in 1984. Manufacturing output has shown uninterrupted growth since 1981 and is 11·5 per cent. up on the 1981 first quarter trough. A further 3 per cent. growth is expected this year.

Steel Imports

38. Mr. Flannery asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what tonnage of steel, of what type, and from which countries has been imported into the United Kingdom in each of the last two years.

Mr. Butcher: The information is as follows:

Steel Industry

39. Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the current situation within the steel industry.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The United Kingdom steel industry, once heavily subsidised and inefficient, is now among the most competitive in Europe. Since 1979 productivity has improved by 94 per cent., a remarkable transformation. Prospects for the future, for both the British Steel Corporation and private sector steel companies, depend on their continuing ability to compete and on the market for their products, but I believe that sustained viability and profitability is a realistic ambition.

59. Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what was the total value of investment in the special or engineering steel industry in 1984 and in 1985; what is the level proposed for 1986; and what assessment he makes as to the adequacy of the volume of such investment in relation to competition from other European Economic Community member states.

Mr. Butcher: I regret the information sought is not available in the form requested. United Kingdom engineering steel producers will need to take into account competition from other European Community producers in determining their future investment programmes.

Multi-fibre Arrangement

41. Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the current state of negotiations on the multi-fibre arrangement.

Mr. Alan Clark: The GATT textiles committee met to discuss the renewal of the multi-fibre arrangement on 3 April. There will be a further meeting in early June. Negotiations on a protocol need to be concluded by the end of July when the MFA expires. I intend to remain in close touch with the industry and other interested parties.

Industrial Management

42. Mr. Phillip Oppenheim asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on his policy towards reforms in industrial management, in the light of the report of the Confederation of British Industry entitled "Change to Succeed — Action Now", acopy of which has been forwarded to him.

Mr. Butcher: I welome the report of the Confederation of British Industry as a contribution towards improving the United Kingdom's industrial performance. As the CBI recognises, the main responsibility for this lies with business and its management. The report calls for changes in business attitudes, and in particular for increased investment by companies in training and management development. My Department is actively engaged for its part, with the Manpower Services Commission and others, in seeking to promote such changes.

Filament Synthetic Cloth

43. Mr. Madden asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received about imports into the United Kingdom of filament synthetic cloth.

Mr. Alan Clark: I have received representations about disruption to the industry from low-cost imports of certain filament synthetics from Indonesia. I have also received representations from other companies in the industry that imports of polyester georgette, which falls in the same MFA category, should not be restricted as it is not produced in the United Kingdom.

British Steel

44. Mr. Michael Brown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the prospects for British Steel.

Mr. Butcher: The United Kingdom steel industry, once heavily subsidised and inefficient, is now among the most efficient in Europe. Since 1979 productivity has improved by 94 per cent., a remarkable transformation. Prospects for the future, for both the British Steel Corporation and private sector steel companies, depend on their ability to compete and on the market for their products, but I believe that sustained viability and profitability is a realistic ambition.

EUREKA Programme

45. Mr. Michael Marshall asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been made on the EUREKA programme.

Mr. Pattie: The EUREKA initiative was launched in July 1985. Substantial progress has already been achieved in making EUREKA a practical framework to encourage European industrial collaboration on high technology projects. I hope that this will be noted and endorsed by the next EUREKA ministerial conference in London on 30 June, to which we expect that a substantial number of new collaborative projects will be reported.

Manufactured Goods

46. Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will indicate the nature and size of the current deficit in the balance of trade in manufactured goods.

Mr. Butcher: In the first quarter there was a deficit of £1·4 billion. In the same period the current account as a whole showed a surplus of £900,000.

United States Exports (Controls)

47. Mr. Meadowcroft asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what recent advice he has given to British companies potentially affected by the changes in United States regulations introduced on 24 April further to control the export and re-export of technology.

Mr. Alan Clark: The advice given by this Department continues to be that companies and persons doing business in the United Kingdom should be guided by United Kingdom law and their own commercial judgment.

Exports

48. Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will give figures for each of the past five years of (a) invisible and (b) visible exports; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: The information is as follows:

United Kingdom Exports and Invisible Credits

£ billion

	1981	1982	1983	1984	1985
Visible Exports	51·0	55·6	60·8	70·4	78·1
Invisible Credits
Exports of Services	16·9	17·5	19·6	22·0	24·8
Other Credits	39·7	47·2	45·6	54·5	55·2

Community Trade Marks Office

49. Mr. Iain Mills asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he will make to support London's bid to house the Community Trade Marks Office.

Mr. Pattie: The Government stepped up their efforts to secure the Community office for London on 29 April by publishing a brochure describing London's advantages and explaining the sites available. I, other Ministers and officials and United Kingdom interests, will be active in support of our bid. In particular, we shall be speaking to the European Commission, to our opposite numbers in other Governments, to Members of the European Parliament and to foreign correspondents. It is the Government's intention that the case for London should get the widest possible publicity and support.

Design Excellence

50. Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what new initiatives his Department is taking to promote excellence in design.

Mr. Butcher: In addition to the Department's continuing work in established areas to promote design, there have already been two major new initiatives in 1986.

The first was the Department's design commitment conference in January to enlist the help of the top managers of 80 of the United Kingdom's leading companies to work with their suppliers and others to increase exploitation of good design in industry and commerce.

The second is a major national advertising campaign organised by the Design Council with funding from the Department. This was launched in April and is aimed at increasing management awareness of the contribution good design can make to company competitiveness.

Inward Investment

51. Mr. Brandon-Bravo asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what is his Department's estimate of the number of jobs created by inward investment since 1980.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The Department estimates that, as a result of the inward investment decisions notified to the Invest in Britain Bureau within the years 1980 to 1985, some 110,000 jobs will be created and many more have been safeguarded.

Takeovers

52. Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he will next meet the Director General of Fair Trading to discuss the recent spate of takeovers.

Mr. Channon: I meet the Director General regularly to discuss a range of questions within his responsibilities. The date of the next meeting has not yet been arranged.

Self-Changing Gears Ltd.

53. Mr. Nellist asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will now make a statement on the privatisation of Self-Changing Gears Ltd. from BL to Cummins Engines.

Mr. Peter Morrison: BL announced on 21 April that agreement in principle had been reached on the acquisition of Self-Changing Gears Ltd. by the Cummins Engine Company. The BL board had examined a number of options but concluded that the offer from Cummins was the most competitive and in the best long-term interests of the company.

US Investment

54. Mr. Sayeed asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what proportion of United States direct investment into the European Community is located in Britain.

Mr. Peter Morrison: The latest figures available from the United States Department of Commerce show that in 1984 the United Kingdom had a 36 per cent. share of accumulated United States foreign direct investment into the European Community, excluding oil. Including oil, this figure rises to 41 per cent., equivalent to over $32·1 billion of investment.

These figures and other reporting on the United Kingdom's significant success in attracting inward investment are published in the Invest in Britain Bureau's annual report for 1985. A copy of the report is available in the House of Commons Library.

Director General of Fair Trading

55. Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry when he last met the Director General of Fair Trading.

Mr. Channon: My last meeting with the Director General was held on 10 March.

Radio Frequencies

56. Mr. Tinn asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what representations he has received regarding proposed changes in radio frequencies allocated for industrial purposes.

Mr. Pattie: There is a problem of local interference from some industrial devices operating in the 900 MHz band now used for cellular radiotelephones. No representations as such have been received in this matter, but it is clearly of concern to the industrial users that a frequency change might prove necessary.

Monopolies and Mergers

57. Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the progress of his review of monopolies and mergers policy.

Mr. Channon: The review of competition law and policy has not yet begun and an announcement will be made shortly.

Unit Labour Costs

58. Mr. Alan Howarth asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what are the latest figures available for the year-on-year increase in unit labour costs in manufacturing industry in the United Kingdom, the United States of America, Germany and Japan; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: In 1985 the increases in unit labour costs (in national currencies) in manufacturing industry in the United Kingdom, United States of America, Germany and Japan were 5·5 per cent., 1·5 per cent., 0 per cent. and 0 per cent. respectively. It is discouraging that the United Kingdom's unit labour costs are rising significantly faster than in main competitor countries and, therefore, adversely affecting competitiveness and ultimately jobs. It is essential that both sides of industry recognise the need for realistic pay deals and improved productivity.

Rolls-Royce

Mr. Gerald Bowden asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on Her Majesty's Government's plans for the privatisation of Rolls-Royce.

Mr. Pattie: Subject to market conditions, the Government intend to return Rolls-Royce to the private sector in the first half of 1987.

Council of Ministers Meeting

Mr. Hanley asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the Council of Ministers' meeting on consumer affairs which took place on 6 May.

Mr. Howard: I attended the Council on 6 May, which was the first on consumer affairs to be held under the Netherlands presidency.

The Council unanimously adopted a resolution concerning the future orientation of the policy of the European Economic Community for the protection and promotion of consumer interests. This resolution followed the Commission's communication to the Council in August 1985 entitled "A new impetus for consumer protection policy," which had been discussed at the previous Internal Market/Consumer Protection Council on 12 December 1985.

The resolution welcomed the Commission's communication, particularly the intention to give priority to proposals concerned with providing a high level of consumer safety and with creating an increased ability for consumers to benefit from the Community market. It also highlighted the important objective of taking greater account of consumers' interest in other Community policies, especially those concerned with completion of the internal market, and in particular regarding improvements to the quality of products and services, and agricultural policy, competition and transport. The resolution invited the Commission to report to the Council on how it intends to achieve this objective.

The Council also stated in the resolution that it considered that any future proposals from the Commission for legislation should focus on those areas which have a real Community dimension and emphasised that it was important that alternative approaches to legislation should be promoted whenever they offered real opportunities for progress. The Commission was also requested, when preparing its proposals, to consult widely with all who may have an interest in them.

This resolution represents a significant and welcome change to Community policy on consumer matters. It should ensure that not only will the consumer interest be given a higher profile in the more important Community decisions in future but that there will be a better balance between the provision of essential consumer protection and the avoidance of unnecessary burdens on business.

The Council also had further discussions on proposals for directives on consumer credit and on unit pricing, concluding that further work should continue on both proposals in the respective working groups.

Soviet Union (Tourism)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) what representations he has received from people with package tours booked to the Soviet Union about the terms of cancellation of tours and the eligibility for refunds, in the light of the Government's advice to avoid travelling to certain areas of the Soviet Union; and if he will make a statement;

(2) whether he will initiate urgent discussions with tour companies with a view to ensuring that they observe a common practice in repayment of deposits to travellers cancelling visits to the Soviet Union on the basis of Her Majesty's Government's advice in the light of the recent nuclear accident at Chernobyl; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard [pursuant to his reply, 13 May 1986, c. 410]: I have received no representations concerning the cancellation of package tours to the Soviet Union, nor am I planning to initiate discussions with tour companies on the subject of repayment of deposits. Such matters will be governed by the terms of individual contracts between travellers and tour operators by the terms of any insurance arrangements and by any particular voluntary agreements reached by the parties to those contracts in the special circumstances.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Imports

Mr. Terlezki asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what type of agricultural products are imported into the United Kingdom from the Ukraine, Bielorussia, and from the Soviet Union in general (a) in canned form, (b) as fresh products and (c) as bakery and confectionery; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner: The trade statistics do not distinguish between imports from different parts of the Soviet Union. However, in 1985, imports from the Soviet Union were recorded under the following agricultural and food headings:

Trade heading	Type of food	1985 value £ million
00 Live animals chiefly for food	n/r	n/r

* Less than £50,000.
n/r=None recorded.

Action on imports from the Eastern bloc is currently under consideration by member states.

Milk

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much milk has been thrown away in Scotland and the North of England since the beginning of May.

Mrs. Fenner: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Common Agricultural Policy

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing annual expenditure under the common agricultural policy each year since 1972 in terms of the European currency unit and the then open market rate for sterling, the increase of expenditure since 1972 each year in real terms, the proportion of the budget each year devoted to the common agricultural policy and the amount received by the United Kingdom each year under the common agricultural policy.

Mr. Jopling: The information requested is set out in the following table:

	CAP expenditure		Year on year increase in real terms	CAP expenditure as a percentage of total EC expenditure	United Kingdom receipts under the CAP*†
	mecu	£ million*	per cent.	per cent.	£ million

† Figures in ecus for expenditure under the CAP funded outside the EAGGF are not available for the years 1973-77. Figures for United Kingdom receipts of this expenditure are also not available for all years. However, in both cases the amounts are negligible.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each product the increase in farm support prices this year in the United Kingdom in terms of sterling, together with the increase in productivity expected on the basis of past trends.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Intervention Storage (Costs)

Mr. Deakins asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food why he agreed a reduction in European Economic Community reimbursement to member states for national expenditure on the financing and technical costs of intervention storage: what estimate he has made of the effect on United Kingdom public expenditure in 1986-87: and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Jopling: These reductions formed part of a package of measures designed to offset additional Community expenditure in 1986 and to keep expenditure within the financial guideline in 1987. The United Kingdom supports these objectives. The effect of the reductions on United Kingdom public expenditure is expected to be broadly neutral as the reduction in receipts will be offset by lower contributions to the Community budget.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether West Germany has been authorised to take national measures to help its farmers as a result of the price settlement under the common agricultural policy.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

Bees

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment he has made of the changes in the numbers of Britain's bee population over the past 12 months; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner [pursuant to her reply, 12 May 1986, c. 372]: From the latest information available my Department estimates that at the end of the 1985 season there were approximately 237,000 bee colonies in Great Britain compared with 235,000 12 months earlier.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Iran and Iraq (Armaments)

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will make a statement about the export of spare armament parts to Iran and Iraq.

Mr. Renton: I refer the hon. Member to the answer my right hon. and learned Friend gave to the right hon. Member for Tweeddale, Etterick and Lauderdale (Mr. Steel) on 29 October 1985 at column 454. There has been no change in our policy since then.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Betting Duty

Mr. Dubs asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received in support of the abolition or reduction of on-course greyhound betting duty.

Mr. Brooke: A number of racing and betting bodies have urged the abolition or reduction of on-course betting duty generally. The British Greyhound Racing Board specifically came to see me in advance of the Budget.

EC Budget

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing for each year since 1973 the gross amount contributed by the United Kingdom to the European Economic Community budget as a percentage of the gross total, the share of the European Economic Community value added tax base accounted for by the United Kingdom value added tax and contribution, the formula for calculating the United Kingdom rebate, and the amount of the rebate; and if he will provide an estimate for the current year and a forecast for 1987.

Mr. Brooke: The information requested is as follows:

¶ Estimated.

The formula for calculating the United Kingdom rebates in 1980 and 1981 is set out in the Council conclusions of 30 May 1980, published in OJ C158, 27 June 1980, of which a copy is in the Library of the House. The size of the rebates for 1982 and 1983 was agreed by negotiation. The "risk-sharing" formula for 1982 is set out in Council regulation 624/83 (OJ C73 March 1983). The size of the abatement in 1984 was agreed by negotiation. The total (gross) amounts received in respect of each year were:

Year	£ million
1980	790
1981	1,011
1982	807
1983	589
1984	605

The formula for calculating the United Kingdom's abatement under the Fontainebleau system is set out in the "Own Resources Decision" of 7 May 1985 (Cmnd. 9549). The latest estimate for the abatement due in respect of 1985 and paid in 1986 is £1,220 million (1,900 mecu). It is likely that the Commission will include in the 1987 PDB provision for our abatement due in respect of 1986 and paid in 1987 of £1,050 million (1,640 mecu). This will need to be corrected in the light of outturn information on our contributions and receipts in 1986. The United Kingdom does not contribute towards its own abatements. It did, however, have to contribute towards budget refunds.

EC (Expenditure)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how much of the recent increase in the value added tax contribution to the EEC budget will be taken up by an increase in non-agricultural spending after allowing for the growth of own resources in real terms; and if he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the increase in EEC expenditure in real terms each year since 1979 in relation to the increase in United Kingdom Government expenditure.

Mr. Brooke [pursuant to his reply, 6 May 1986, c. 99]: The following table shows the increase (after allowing for inflation) in VAT own resources payments and expenditure other than that on agricultural guarantee between 1985 and 1986. The increase in expenditure is a little over 70 per cent. of the increase in VAT contributions.

*million ecu

Note:
The growth rates for Community expenditure have been calculated from a current price series of Community spending deflated by the GDP deflator at market prices measured in ecu for a Community of Ten (source: European Economy). Community spending in 1985 is based on the payment appropriations in the 1985 budget. The 1986 figure is based on the 1986 budget as agreed at the Council's second reading. The United Kingdom GDP deflator at market prices was used in deriving the constant price growth rates for United Kingdom public expenditure.

ENVIRONMENT

Protomised Timber

60. Mr. Terry Lewis asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what representations he has had concerning the use of protomised timber in the construction industry.

Sir George Young I am not aware of any such representations to my Department.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Alexander asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many lorry loads of earth and other soil will be required to excavate the proposed nuclear waste dump at Fulbeck; over what period they will be excavated; and how many lorry loads per day this will entail consequently.

Mrs. Rumbold: Precise assessments for the period of construction of a facility are not possible until NIREX has indicated its preferred site, and its intended repository design and methods of transport. It is unlikely that the small amounts of earth to be excavated during geological investigations at Fulbeck will need to be removed from the site.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the local authorities and organisations which have made representations on the proposed special development order on nuclear dumping, specifying whether each has asked for it to be (a) not laid, (b) delayed, (c) changed by deletion of one particular site and (d) changed in some other way.

Mr. Waldegrave: County, district and parish councils from the areas concerned and other bodies, have made representations, making one or more of the requests mentioned by the hon. Member.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when the nuclear waste storage depot at Harwell will be full; and what kind of waste is stored in it.

Mr. Waldegrave: Harwell provides only temporary storage for low-level waste awaiting transit. It also stores waste originally destined for sea disposal. Other intermediate-level waste is stored at Harwell and present capacity is expected to be filled by about 1989. Plans are currently in hand to extend this.

Housing Waiting List

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what discussions his Department has held with local authorities about the position of people who are forced to move from a borough in which they have lived due to the effects of the regulations of bed-and-breakfast accommodation, as to their rights to remain on the council housing waiting list; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: The Department has held no such discussions. The criteria for remaining on a local authority's housing waiting list are matters for each local authority to decide. I understand that surveys by the Department of Health and Social Security in various parts of the country, including London and the south-east, since changes in the relevant regulations, show barely any movements from one area to another of people receiving supplementary benefit board and lodging allowances.

Nitrates

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Environment why Her Majesty's Government agreed to the incorporation in law of the principle that the polluter should pay for the cost of clearing the pollution created; and how he intends to implement this policy in relation to the pollution of public water supplies with nitrates.

Mrs. Rumbold: The polluter pays principle is not formally incorporated into United Kingdom law, although it is an aim of Government policy that the principle should be observed. This is reflected, for example, in parts of the Control of Pollution Act 1974. The Government also support the 1972 OECD and 1975 EC recommendations on the PPP, but these are not legally binding; nor do they require payment where discharges are within the level acceptable to the control authority. Nitrate enters public water supplies from a variety of sources, some of which present practical problems for the application of the PPP. However, the principle is already being observed by farmers who incur costs or lose revenue, in order to follow the requirements of the code of good agricultural practice so as to reduce the risk of nitrate pollution. This issue is one of several being considered further by the Nitrate Co-ordination Group.

Local Authorities (Accounting Procedures)

Mr. Heddle asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps he proposes to take to introduce standard accounting procedures in local authorities.

Mrs. Rumbold: I refer my hon. Friend to the reply which my right hon. Friend gave to my hon. Friend the Member for Banbury (Mr. Baldry) on 28 February 1986, at column 736. Following my right hon. Friend's statement then, local government has the opportunity itself to take steps to secure greater standardisation in its accounts, building on the work which it is already doing.

Radiation

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will publish for each region the figures giving (a) normal background radiation, (b) background radiation for each day since 1 May, (c) the highest recorded radioactivity of a litre of milk, (d) the highest recorded radioactivity of a litre of rainwater and (e) the highest hypothetical dose received.

Mrs. Rumbold: My Department, with the National Radiological Protection Board, has issued raw data on the levels of radiation detected at monitoring stations in the United Kingdom and a daily statement indicating in general terms the significance of these measurements. A statement was given to the press by my Department on 9 May 1986 and is available in the Library of the House. It gave estimates of the average dose levels to the public in the United Kingdom in the previous week, as a result of the accident at Chernobyl.

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps are being taken to increase the public supply of radiation monitoring equipment.

Mrs. Rumbold: No restrictions are placed on the purchase or sale of radiation monitoring equipment to the public. If sufficient demand exists manufacturers will respond.

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what steps are being taken to protect the public from the long-term effects of radionuclides that have settled on the soil.

Mrs. Rumbold: My Department has already taken steps to let a research contract with UKAEA, Harwell to assess the longer-term effects of radioactivity deposited in the United Kingdom following the Chernobyl accident. The results will be made available to the public in due course.

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the Government will take steps to standardise the units of measurement of radioactivity and dose limits; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Standard international units for radioactivity (becquerel) absorbed dose (gray) and dose equivalent (sievert) already exist. Reference may occasionally be made to the curie, rad and rem when quoting from older reports.

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he is satisfied with the monitoring that has been carried out in Britain as a result of the accident at Chernobyl.

Mrs. Rumbold: Yes.

Nuclear Waste

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what instructions he has given to hospitals, universities and research laboratories using the national disposal service of Harwell on low-level nuclear waste and its collection; and what kinds of waste may be disposed of through normal non-nuclear rubbish collection;

(2) if he will list the institutions, laboratories and organisations at present producing low-level nuclear waste;

(3) if he will set out the collection procedures for low-level nuclear waste;

(4) what instructions he has given to hospitals, universities and research laboratories on collection and safety procedures for low-level nuclear waste;

(5) when he proposes to introduce compacting of nuclear waste at Drigg; and what assessment he has made of the costs of this;

(6) how many institutions use the national nuclear waste disposal service; what method of transport is used, and what are the annual costs of providing this service.

Mr. Waldegrave: I shall answer these questions shortly.

Homeless Persons

Mr. Lilley asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to those foreign countries in which homeless persons are entitled to be rehoused.

Sir George Young: We have no comprehensive information about the position of homeless people in other countries.

Widdecombe Report

Mr. Patrick Thompson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he expects to receive the main report of the Widdecombe inquiry.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The report was submitted to me on 9 May. It is now being printed, together with its accompanying research volumes, and I expect it to be ready for publication in June.

DEFENCE

Libya (Cyprus Bases)

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Defence what part was played by Royal Air Force establishments in Cyprus in the recent United States Air Force air strike on Libya.

Mr. Stanley: It is not our normal practice to comment on operational matters, but in this instance I can confirm that British service establishments in Cyprus were not involved in the United States action against Libya.

Youth Training

Mr. Colvin asked the Secretary of State for Defence if he will estimate how many YTS places will be taken up by his Department during the current year.

Mr. Lee [pursuant to his reply, 27 March 1986, c. 600]: An error has been found. In 1985-86 the Ministry of Defence offered 876 places on the civilian YTS and not 1,125, the higher figure referred to the earlier year.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Domestic Violence

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether the Government have any plans to implement the proposal of the Select Committee on violence in marriage that there should be one refuge place per 10,000 of the population.

Mr. Whitney: Estimates of need and financial provision for refuge places are matters for local authorities which, under the Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977, have a duty to provide accommodation for battered women with dependent children. Since the Select Committee on violence in marriage reported in 1975, the number of refuges in the United Kingdom known to the Government has risen from under 40 to some 220.

Immunisation

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations his Department has had regarding the low uptake of poliomyelitis, pertussis, measles, rubella and tetanus immunisation; and what replies have been given.

Mr. Whitney: Five letters have been received in the last year, including one from the right hon. Member. The replies have stressed the importance we attach to improving uptake of immunisation against these diseases.

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give the most recent figures for the uptake of poliomyelitis, pertussis, measles, rubella and tetanus immunisation by regions; and what steps he plans to take to bring the regions with the lowest uptake rates up to the level of those with the higher rates.

Mr. Whitney: The available information on uptake of immunisation is shown in the table. We will be considering with regional health authorities how low uptake might be tackled

Table Percentage Uptake Rates: 1984, England

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what assessment he has made of the cost-effectiveness of the poliomyelitis, pertussis, measles, rubella and tetanus elements of his Department's preventive medicine strategy; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: Studies of immunisation programmes against these diseases in other countries indicate that they are highly cost-effective. We consider that these findings are applicable to this country, but we nevertheless keep the need for such studies of our own programmes under review.

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will redesign the preventive medicine strategy of his Department with a view to improving the uptake of immunisation.

Mr. Whitney: We see no need for this. Immunisation remains a key element in our prevention strategy. We monitor uptake of health authority immunisations through performance indicators and the review system, and we are seeking further to strengthen this.

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will take steps to require medical officers to submit an annual report on the steps being taken to improve the uptake of vaccine in their districts.

Mr. Whitney: We have asked district health authorities to designate an officer to be accountable for immunisation performance in the district. We would expect authorities to look to that officer for reports on the steps being taken to improve uptake of immunisation.

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what assessment his Department has made of the state of public awareness of the contra-indications to immunisation, if he will take steps to assist consultants, general practitioners and community physicians and nurses to improve this level of awareness by means of an education programme directed at the general public; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Whitney: The Department attaches importance to public awareness of the contra-indications to immunisation and funds Health Education Council literature which explains the risks attaching to childhood immunisations. Doctors and community nurses have also been advised by the Department about the contra-indications to these immunisations and urged to discuss these matters with parents to help them make informed decisions.

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will seek to empower nurses to immunise at home children who have been missed in the normal immunisation arrangements; and if he will also arrange for these nurses to be indemnified appropriately, if necessary.

Mr. Whitney: These are matters for health authorities to decide as a matter of local policy, in discussion with the professionals concerned.

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what representations he has received in support of a meeting of experts in the field of immunisation to consider means of improving the immunisation uptake; and what consideration he has given to the suggestion that the disabilities study unit should convene such a meeting in association with his Department.

Mr. Whitney: We have been unable to trace any such suggestion but will consider it if it is made.

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much research is being carried out into improving vaccines in the United Kingdom; and how much research is being carried out into improving the uptake of immunisation in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Whitney: We understand that the Medical Research Council which receives grant-in-aid from the science vote of the Department of Education and Science is supporting research aimed at the development and improvement of vaccines for hepatitis, herpes virus, influenza virus, respiratory syncytial virus, rubella, measles, varicella and whooping cough.

The Department is funding the following research projects which relate to improving the uptake of immunisation:

1. Dr. C. L. Miller, Public Health Laboratory Service Communicable Disease Surveillance Centre, London. PHLS Rubella monitoring and research programme.
2. Professor R. M. Anderson, Imperial College of Science and Technology, London. Quantitative investigations into the design of vaccination programmes for the control of childhood viral and bacterial diseases.
3. Professor E. G. Knox, Health Services Research Centre, Birmingham University. Simulation systems of rubella vaccination and pertussis vaccination programmes.
4. Professor W. W. Holland, Dr. A. Lakhani, Social Medicine and Health Services Research Unit, United Medical Schools of Guy's and St. Thomas' Hospitals. An investigation of the low uptake of measles immunisation in the Maidstone Health Authority.
5. Professor E. Alberman, London Hospital Medical College Effectiveness, efficiency, acceptability and cost in the preventive child health services.

Handicapped Children

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will give the estimated lifetime cost of caring for a child severely handicapped as a result of rubella; and if he will give the estimated lifetime cost of caring for all children handicapped as a result of rubella in the United Kingdom;

(2) if he will give the estimated lifetime cost of caring for a child severely disabled as a result of measles; and if he will give the estimated lifetime cost of caring for all children handicapped as a result of measles in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Whitney: I regret that the information on which a reliable estimate could be based is not available.

"Care in Action"

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will produce an amended edition of "Care in Action"; and if he will make this publication available free on application to members of the medical profession.

Mr. Whitney: We have no plans to do so. "Care in Action" represents the Government's most comprehensive statement of policy priorities in the field of health and personal social services. Whilst a limited number of other priority areas have been identified subsequently, the priorities set out in "Care in Action" remain current.

Measles

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will give figures for the measles immunisation rates and for the incidence of measles in the United Kingdom; and what information he has about the comparable proportional figures for the United States of America and for Czechoslovakia.

Mr. Whitney: The available information is as follows:

	Percentage immunisation uptake	Reported cases‖
1983
England and Wales	*59	103,700
Czechoslovakia	†99	31
United States of America	‡96	‡1,497

Radiation (Monitoring and Advice)

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what follow-up monitoring and advice is being offered to the 70 British students who returned from Kiev and to other members of the public returning from eastern Europe.

Mr. Whitney: These students were carefully monitored on arrival. We are advised that the levels of radioactivity detected were such that there is no good medical reason for further monitoring. Although there is no need for further action, any student at all worried following return to this country and after arrival monitoring can consult their general practitioner.

Arrangements were made for people returning subsequently to be monitored at specific hospitals. It is not expected that they will need further monitoring, but should it be necessary the hospitals will be able to provide this.

War Widows

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what recent representations Her Majesty's Government have received concerning the position of pre-1973 war widows in relation to their pension entitlement.

Mr. Major: Representations are periodically received by this department and by my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence, suggesting that pre-1973 war widows should be entitled to the Ministry of Defence pension currently paid only to widows of service men who served on or after 31 March 1973 and whose death was attibutable to service.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will estimate the total cost of making available the Ministry of Defence pension to all war widows in addition to the Department of Health and Social Security pension.

Mr. Major: I understand from my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Defence that the estimated cost at current rates is in the region of £200 million a year.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has as to the total number of women who became war widows before 1973 in (a) the first world war, (b) the second world war, (c) the Korean war and (d) other conflicts.

Mr. Major: The information is not available in the form requested and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. Of the 65,000 war widows' pensions in payment in December 1985, 8,000 were for service up to 30 September 1921 and 57,000 for service since 3 September 1939.

Mr. Nicholas Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what information he has concerning the numbers of war widows who are in receipt only of the Department of Health and Social Security pension.

Mr. Major: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Housing Benefit

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he intends to institute a pro rata non-dependants deduction for housing benefit for part-time workers.

Mr. Major: The future arrangements for non-dependant contributions under the reformed housing benefit scheme are still under consideration.

Board and Lodging

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will now publish in the Official Report the results of his Department's analysis of the statistical returns from local offices on supplementary benefit ordinary board and lodging claimants between April and July 1985.

Mr. Newton: I intend to make the findings available shortly.

Maternity Services

Dr. McDonald asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report (i) the total number of maternity units in England and Wales and (ii) the number of maternity units which include a special care baby unit.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 27 February 1986 c.684]: Of the 369 National Health Service hospitals in England with maternity departments there were 227 with a special care baby unit in 1984, the latest year for which figures are available centrally. Figures for Wales are a matter for my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Wales.

Dentistry

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what has been the proportion of people with no remaining natural teeth in each year since 1974.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 6 May 1986, c.87]: These figures are not collected annually. Surveys in 1978 and in 1983 indicate that the proportion of adults in England and Wales with no remaining natural teeth was as follows:

	per cent.
1978	29
1983	25

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will list those areas covered by the pilot scheme of capitation fees for dentists for child patients;

(2) if he will list those areas to be covered by the extended experiment in paying capitation fees for dentists for child patients.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 6 May 1986, c. 87]: The pilot study was limited to a small number of dentists in each of the following areas:

Gloucestershire
Manchester
Redbridge and Waltham Forest
South Glamorgan
Greater Glasgow.

The areas which it is proposed should be covered by the extended experiment are:

Bromley or Kingston and Richmond
Doncaster or Salford
Hereford and Worcester or Norfolk
Fife or Grampian.

Doctors

Mr. Dobson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many doctors are practising who began their medical training in 1979 or afterwards.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 6 May 1986, c. 88]: I regret that information in the form requested is not available.

The latest available figures for doctors working in National Health Service hospitals in England are for 30 September 1985. They show 3,524 senior house officers in post who had been in the grade for less than one year, and 2,838 pre-registration house officers in post. Although these figures include overseas graduates, they correspond to the normal 1985 career stage of entrants to medical schools in 1979 and 1980 respectively. Entrants to medical schools after 1980 have not yet graduated.

No information related to these particular years of medical school entry is readily available about doctors working outside the hospital sector or outside the National Health Service.

Written Answers to Questions

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

British Sugar Corporation

Mr. Spearing asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement concerning any communication he has received from the Director General of Fair Trading concerning the future ownership or control of the British Sugar Corporation.

Mr. Howard: My right hon. Friend will make a statement as soon as is practicable.

Small Businesses

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he is considering introducing a review procedure for small businesses in place of the current audit system following the proposals of the White Paper, "Lifting the Burden", Cmnd. 9571, in July 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Howard: This was one of the possible options referred to in the consultative document "Accounting and Audit Requirements For Small Firms", which my Department published last June. However, it attracted little support from consultees and has therefore not been pursued. An announcement about the outcome of the consultation as a whole will be made shortly.

Surface Mount Club

Mr. Warren asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if, following his announcement in February of the formation of the Surface Mount Club relating to electronic design and manufacture, he will make public the telephone number of Mr. Trevor Gilpin of his Department, the organiser of the club; and if he will take steps to allow those interested in this technology to contact Mr. Gilpin without obtaining prior approval.

Mr. Butcher: Mr. Trevor Gilpin, secretary of the DTI Surface Mount Club, can be contacted on 01-213-5310. No prior approval is necessary to make contact.

Airbus Industrie

Mr. Warren asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what progress has been achieved in the discussions between the Governments of the United Kingdom, France, West Germany and the United States of America on the methods of finance of Airbus Industrie; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: Some progress has been made towards achieving a better understanding of mutual concerns on a number of issues relating to trade in civil aircraft, including Government supports for the aircraft industry. Further discussions are expected to take place in June.

Post Office Act

Mr. Ashdown asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what steps he is taking to consider reform of the Post Office Act to enable the Post Office to compete better and broaden its services to the public; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: My right hon. Friend has discussed with the Post Office its plans to secure the future of the counters business. The Government recognise the case for improving the competitiveness of the Post Office by enabling it to provide a broader range of services. My right hon. Friend has therefore told the Post Office that he will seek an early opportunity to introduce legislation to extend its powers.

Krugerrands

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry how many Krugerrands were imported into the United Kingdom in each month in 1985 and 1986 to date.

Mr. Alan Clark: The information is not available, as Krugerrands are not separately identified from other gold coins.

General Motors

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what discussions took place at the meeting between the Minister for Trade and Mr. Robert Stempel of General Motors on 4 May in New York; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Morrison: I met Mr. Stempel of General Motors during my recent visit to the United States of America. The meeting had been arranged many weeks earlier as one of several with United States companies. The visit was a useful opportunity to maintain normal good contacts between the Department and American companies which have significant investment in the United Kingdom.

Import Substitution (Awards)

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry whether he will give consideration to establishing an award scheme, similar to existing awards for exports, for companies which record outstanding achievements in the field of import substitution.

Mr. Butcher: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Travel-to-Work Areas

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what magnitude of error in the employment census returns for a travel-to-work area would be regarded by his Department as sufficient to determine that that area should be included in the assisted area map, despite an original decision, based on the faulty returns, not to do so; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

China

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry if he will make a statement on the take-up of cheap credit facilities for trade with China and give details of its allocation to date.

Mr. Alan Clark [pursuant to his reply, 13 May 1986, c. 408]: My right hon. and learned Friend the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs and Mr. Zheng Tuobin, the Chinese Minister for Foreign Economic Relations and Trade, have today signed a formal agreement covering our support under the aid and trade provision for £300 million business in China on favourable loan terms. Four projects have already been agreed as suitable for further consideration under this arrangement and commercial negotiations are continuing between the relevant United Kingdom companies and Chinese organisations. If agreed, these projects will take up a large part of the facility. The Government hope that use of this facility will be accompanied by a more general expansion in our economic and commercial relations with China.

FOREIGN AND COMMONWEALTH AFFAIRS

Food Imports

Mr. Fry asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs if he will ensure that whatever agreement is made by the European Economic Community on the temporary banning of agricultural produce and other food from eastern Europe, there will not be any political discrimination, particularly against Yugoslavia.

Mrs. Chalker: The food import ban agreed by the Community on 12 May has been applied to all those countries falling substantially within a radius of 1,000 km from Chernobyl, including Yugoslavia. The ban is a short-term precautionary measure which will be reviewed on 20 May on the basis of the latest scientific evidence which the relevant countries are being urged to provide as rapidly as possible. We have already asked that the next review should pay particular attention to the position of Yugoslavia.

Krugerrands

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs when he expects to make effective the ban on the import of Krugerrands; what is the reason for the delay; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Chalker: We expect to make an announcement shortly.

ENERGY

Oil Industry (Investment)

Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Energy what recent evidence he has of oil companies postponing or cancelling planned investments in the North sea; and what specific evidence he has about the implications of the fall in oil prices for the rate of incremental investment.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: Oil companies, as a matter of course, regularly review their North sea investment plans. Recently some drilling programmes have also been reviewed: the implications of any consideration by the operators of modifying their investment plans are not yet clear.

Electricity and Coal Industries

Dr. Michael Clark asked the Secretary of State for Energy if he will make a statement on the estimated outturn external financing requirements of the electricity supply industry in England and Wales and of the National Coal Board for 1985-86.

Mr. Peter Walker: The outturn external financing requirement for the electricity supply industry in England and Wales in 1985-86 is provisionally estimated at minus £457 million. The improvement over the estimated outturn of minus £400 million given in the 1986 public expenditure White Paper (Cmnd. 9702.II) mainly reflects higher sales of electricity during the cold winter. The main reason for the lower level of repayment compared with the external financing limit of minus £1,128 million was the cost of rebuilding coal stocks and higher interest charges resulting from the costs incurred during the miners' strike. These were not allowed for when the EFL was set before the start of 1985-86. There is therefore no question of any consequential reduction in the 1986-87 external financing limit.

The outturn external financing requirement of the National Coal Board for 1985-86 has provisionally been estimated at £435 million. This welcome improvement over the EFL of £929 million and the estimated outturn for the year of £740 million given in the 1986 public expenditure White Paper, reflects the sale of coal stocks to the electricity supply industry and faster than anticipated progress made by the board in recovering after the strike.

The net change in public expenditure comparing estimated outturn with EFL plans for these two industries taken together is £177 million. This was charged to the reserve and was therefore within the public expenditure planning total.

EMPLOYMENT

Loan Guarantee Scheme

48. Mr. Alton asked the Paymaster General whether he expects the recent changes to the loan guarantee system to produce more demand for loans over £15,000 from small unincorporated traders; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Trippier: The premium paid by borrowers has been reduced from 5 per cent. to 2·5 per cent. per annum. I expect this to lead to an increased demand for loans of all sizes up to the maximum of £75,000 from both incorporated and unincorporated traders.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Paymaster General, further to his answer on 6 May, Official Report, column 34, regarding the errors made by Central Regional council in submitting its returns for the 1981 census of employment, if he will list the effects on all the relevant travel-to-work areas of the published unemployment figures.

Mr. Lang: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Paymaster General, pursuant to his reply to the hon. Member for Norfolk North on 28 April, Official Report, column 343, why there is no information available about the number of severely disabled claimants included in the unemployment figures for the years 1983, 1984, 1985 and 1986.

Mr. Lang: The information is not available because it is not needed for the purpose of administering benefits at unemployment benefit offices and is therefore not included in the systematic records on which the statistics are based.

Microwave Radiation

Sir Bernard Braine asked the Paymaster General when he expects the new guidelines on standards of protection for the public against microwave radiation to be published by the National Radiological Protection Board.

Mr. Trippier [pursuant to his reply, 13 May 1986, c. 442]: I understand that the National Radiological Protection Board hopes to publish within the next few weeks a consultative document on guidelines for protection against the possible hazards of electromagnetic fields with frequencies below 300 GHz, which include microwave frequencies.

SCOTLAND

Torness Power Station

Mr. Home Robertson asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will make a statement on the progress of the Torness power station, and on the likely timetable for loading fuel into the reactor.

Mr. Allan Stewart: I am advised by the South of Scotland Electricity Board (SSEB) that work on completing Torness advanced gas-cooled reactor nuclear power station is proceeding to programme with the intention of providing power output to the Scottish grid early next year. A small quantity of nuclear fuel has, with the approval of Her Majesty's Nuclear Installations Inspectorate (NII), been loaded into reactor 1 for testing purposes as part of the commissioning procedure. A further approval will be required from NII to allow the board to load the balance of the fuel into that reactor and the inspectorate is being provided by the board with all the information it requires.

Environmental Health Officers

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Scotland how many environmental health officers are employed by each islands and district authority in Scotland.

Mr. John MacKay: This information is not held centrally. The designation of "environmental health officers" is imprecise and can be applied to officers with a variety of different duties.

Radioactivity

Mr. Wallace asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) for each islands and district authority in Scotland, what is the number of environmental health officers who have received special training in monitoring radioactivity in milk and rainwater;

(2) if he will list the local authorities in Scotland which held proper equipment for monitoring radioactivity in milk on 25 April.

Mr. John MacKay: Information about the special training of environmental health officers in this field is not held centrally. To my knowledge, no equipment for monitoring radioactivity in milk or rainwater is held by local authorities. The function of environmental health officers is to obtain samples where there is cause for concern about risks to public health, and to refer the samples to the appropriate laboratory for analysis. Monitoring is undertaken in Scotland principally by the National Radiological Protection Board's office in Glasgow, and this includes the analysis of samples. A number of nuclear establishments in Scotland, including those at Chapel cross, Hunterston and Dounreay, undertake regular local monitoring of radioactivity in milk and rainwater, and have undertaken additional analyses in the last two weeks, some on behalf of departments of environmental health.

Pipeline Assembly Yard, Tain

Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Scotland (1) what is his estimate of the length of time likely to elapse between his Department first receiving formal notice of the application for a proposed pipeline assembly yard at Tain, Ross-shire, by Land and Marine Engineering Ltd and his having finally evaluated the application;

(2) if he will estimate the length of time he now expects will be necessary for the further evaluation of the planning application by Land and Marine Engineering Limited for a development of a pipeline assembly yard at Tain, Ross-shire.

Mr. Ancram: My right hon. and learned Friend received notification of the planning application on 7 April and called it in on 7 May. The time taken to reach a final decision will depend on a number of factors, not all of which are within the Government's control, but I hope that a decision will be issued before the end of the year.

Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will detail in the Official Report the total area within the relevant site of special scientific interest which the proposed pipeline assembly yard at Tain, Ross-shire would affect; and if he will express that area as a percentage figure of the total extent of the land mass constituting the relevant site of special scientific interest.

Mr. Ancram: Approximately 7 ha, 0·24 per cent. of the total area of the Morrich More site of special scientific interest (SSSI), would be directly affected by construction works associated with the proposal. It has been put to my right hon. and learned Friend, however, that a substantially greater part of the SSSI would be affected indirectly.

Mr. Kennedy asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will list in the Official Report each of the respective objectors to the planning application by Land and Marine Engineering Ltd. for development of a pipeline assembly yard at Tain, Ross-shire.

Mr. Ancram: When Highland regional council notified the planning application to my right hon. and learned Friend, it enclosed copies of letters objecting to, or expressing concern about, the proposed development from the following organisations and individuals:

The Nature Conservancy Council
The Royal Society for the Protection of Birds
The Scottish Wildlife Trust
The Highlands and Islands Fishermen's Association (S.G.)
The Kyle of Sutherland District Fishery Board
The Mammal Society, London
The Countryside Commission for Scotland
Kestrel Subsea Systems Ltd., Wick
Fearn, Seaboard, Tarbat and Nigg Community Council

Salmon Fishing (Nets)

Mr. Onslow asked the Secretary of State for Scotland why his Department decided to impose a ban on the use of nylon monofilament nets in fishing for salmon in Scottish waters; what is his preliminary assessment of the effect of the ban; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John MacKay: Since 1962 there has been a ban on the use of drift nets set from a boat to catch salmon in Scottish waters. That ban was extended to cover the use of gill nets, however set, with effect from 31 March 1986; at the same time an order was made prohibiting the carriage of monofilament gill nets for any purpose in any British fishing boat in Scottish inshore waters. These measures were designed to conserve salmon stocks and to aid the law enforcement agencies in dealing with illegal salmon fishing.

It is too soon to assess the effect of the recent orders.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Metropolitan Police Stations (24-hour Solicitor Scheme)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Attorney-General which police stations in the Metropolitan police area are not currently operating the 24-hour solicitor scheme.

The Attorney-General: The Law Society expects the number of local 24-hour duty solicitor schemes in the Metropolitan police area to increase considerably over the next months, reflecting increased participation by solicitors. 57 police stations in the Metropolitan police area are currently covered by the scheme. However, it has not yet been possible to implement a scheme covering the following 134 police stations:

TRANSPORT

M4 Motorway

Mr. Coombs asked the Secretary of State for Transport (1) whether he has any plans to increase the capacity of the M4 between the M25 and central London;

(2) what information he has on traffic congestion on the M4 between the M25 and central London in the period after the opening of the M4/M25 interchange; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The M4 has recently been widened between M25 and the airport spur. We have appointed consultants to examine a wide range of options for improving surface access between Heathrow and Central London, including the possibility of increasing the capacity of the M4/A4 corridor. Traffic monitoring will form part of the study which is expected to be finished next January.

Driver and Vehicle Licensing Centre

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for Transport what are the latest available figures for the overall cost of the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Centre; and how that cost is divided between collection of road tax and other activities.

Mr. Michael Spicer: £114·7 million in 1985-86 for the Driver and Vehicle Licensing Directorate, including the centre at Swansea and its local office network. The cost of excise duty collection and vehicle registration in the United Kingdom accounting for £93 million; the other main activity of driver licensing £21·7 million.

Water Supplies (Devon)

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for Transport, in view of the possible contamination of water supplies in Devon by arsenic arising from the construction of the Okehampton bypass along the southern route, he will make the results of the supplementary soil tests currently being undertaken by Wimpey Laboratories available to the South-West water authority.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The hon. Member will be aware from previous answers on this matter that the soil tests currently being undertaken arise not from any concern of contamination. They are to assist the design and construction of the road. The South West water authority is responsible for the water supplies in Devon. If it would be of assistance to it in safeguarding the water supply, we would of course make available to it such information as it may require from any of our investigations.

Driving Tests (Highland Region)

Mr. Maclennan asked the Secretary of State for Transport what is the average waiting time for driving tests in the Highland region of Scotland; if he will list the comparable figures for each of the last seven years; and what proposals he has to increase the number of examiners in the region.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Highland region of Scotland is served by two permanent test centres at Inverness and Wick. The wating times at these in April this year and the preceding six years (those for 1979 and earlier are no longer avaialble) were as follows:

	Inverness (weeks)	Wick (weeks)
1980	25	20
1981	22	18
1982	11	6
1983	5	5
1984	5	4
1986	17	19

There are no plans to increase the number of examiners in the Highland region, but we are trying to recruit 11 more examiners for Scotland as a whole. The traffic area aims to keep waiting times at all centres throughout Scotland as even as possible. The Highland region ought therefore to benefit from the general improvement this further recruitment will produce.

A1-M1 (Diversions)

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will ensure that, when traffic is diverted or advised to divert from the A1, the road to which that traffic is diverted is not itself blocked or subject to delay, as a result of roadworks.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: When planning diversions in advance, we aim to avoid roads that would be unsuitable because of delays form roadworks. In emergencies traffic is diverted on to the most suitable road or roads available.

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretry of State for Transport if he will ensure that when traffic on the M1 motorway is subject to serious delay as a result of roadworks, that on the A1 is enabled to move satisfactorily.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: In planning major roadworks we seek to avoid combinations of works close together that would cause serious cumulative delays for traffic. It would be impractical to keep the A1 entirely clear of works, as we have a substantial programme of renewals. Two schemes are under way now and two others will follow later in the year.

Rothersthorpe Service Area, M1

Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport when the Rothersthorpe service area on the M1 was last closed; and for how long.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The Rothersthorpe service area was last closed to motorway traffic for a period of about four and a half weeks in autumn 1983.

Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport what compensation was paid to the operators of the Rothersthorpe service area the last time it was closed.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: None. Such compensation is exluded by the terms of the lease.

Mr. Michael Morris asked the Secretary of State for Transport what work on the north and south carriageways of the M1 led to the last closure of the Rothersthorpe service area.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The maintenance work causing the closure of the Rothersthorpe service area in 1983 was the reconstruction of the M1 northbound carriageway between junctions 15 and 16, with contra-flow traffic operation on the southbound carriageway.

Trunk Roads (Accident Reduction Schemes)

Mr. Sheerman asked the Secretary of State for Transport if, pursuant to the answer given in the Official Report of 2 May on a specific allocation of resources for small schemes for accident reduction on trunk roads, he will make a statement as to when and why practice in allocating funds for expenditure on small cost-effective engineering schemes on trunk roads changed from that outlined in the answer given to the hon. Member for Beckenham (Sir P. Goodhart) on 25 July 1984, Official Report, column 689.

Mr. Peter Bottomley: The allocation referred to was made in 1984-85 only. Its purpose was to ensure that a minimum of £4·5 million from the regional programme was spent on safety-orientated schemes. The experiment was discontinued because experience showed that in practice the safety schemes bought forward by agent authorities accounted for a much larger share of regional programme funds than that represented by the specific allocations. Such schemes continue to attract a substantial share of the programme.

DVLC Computer

Mr. Michael McNair-Wilson asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he is satisfied that members of the public are prevented from gaining electronic entry into the computer system at the driver and vehicle licensing centre, Swansea.

Mr. Michael Spicer: Yes. The security measures in place on the driver and vehicle licensing centre's computers are in keeping with the sensitivity of the data held.

Pedestrian Crossings

Mr. Michael Cocks asked the Secretary of State for Transport what are the criteria for providing pedestrian crossings on main roads; and if he will make a statement on the application of this policy in the particular case of the crossing being sought in Leinster avenue, Knowle West, Bristol.

Mr. Ridley: General guidance is given in departmental advice note TA-10-80, "Design Considerations for Pelican and Zebra Crossings", a copy of which is in the Library of the House. It is, however, a matter for local highway authorities to decide whether or not to install a pedestrian crossing at a particular site on a road for which they are responsible taking into account local circumstances. It would therefore not be appropriate for me to comment on the particular crossing mentioned.

London Regional Transport

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will detail the immediate past employment or the current employment, other than as members of the board, of members of the London Regional Transport board.

Mr. David Mitchell: This information is contained in the following Department of Transport press notices, copies of which are available in the Library of the House:

Press Notice No.	Date of Issue
300	29 June 1984
468	18 October 1984

Severn Tunnel

Mr. Adley asked the Secretary of State for Transport what steps he is taking to celebrate the centenary of the opening of the Severn tunnel; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. David Mitchell: This is a matter for British Rail. I understand that it has yet to decide what celebrations, if any, will be held.

London Taxi Fares

Mr. Bendall asked the Secretary of State for Transport whether he will make a statement on London taxi fares.

Mr. David Mitchell: My right hon. Friend has made an order increasing London taxi fares by about 5·3 per cent. on average with effect from Sunday 15 June 1986. The new tariff will incorporate a minimum fare of 80p (including an unchanged hire charge of 40p) for the first 990 yards or 3 minutes 30 seconds. The rate will then be 20p for every 495 yards, or 1 minute 45 seconds up to 6 miles, and 20p for each 330 yards or 70 seconds thereafter.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

School Leavers

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the percentage of school leavers in England, Wales and Northern Ireland, separately, obtaining one or more A-levels, five or more higher grade O-levels or CSE grade 1 passes, one or more higher grade O-level or CSE grade 1 passes, and no graded O-level or CSE results, in each year from 1965 to 1985.

Mr. Chris Patten: Information for Wales and Northern Ireland is the responsibility of my right hon. Friends the Secretaries of State for Wales and for Northern Ireland. The information requested for England is shown in the following table:

School Leavers, England

† The raising of the school leaving age in 1973 affected the total number of school leavers, which was unusually low in 1972-73. Percentages are therefore unrepresentative and have been omitted.

Education Expenditure

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science, for each year since 1978-79, together with whatever projections are available for future years, what is spent in cash and real terms in England (a) in total and per child on primary, secondary and all schools, (b) in total and per full-time student on non-advanced further education and (c) the effect on these figures of including expenditure on other educational initiatives such as the micro-electronic programme and the technical and vocational education initiative.

Sir Keith Joseph: The information that is given in the following table has been drawn from the annual White Paper on public expenditure (Cmnd. 9143, 9428 and 9702). The figures exclude expenditure on the micro-electronics in education programme which ran from 1980-81 to 1985-86 and the technical and vocational education initiative which began in 1983-84. It is estimated that the addition of the expenditure under these programmes would raise the average unit cost for all schools by at most £10 per pupil per annum.

Plant Breeding Institute

Sir Anthony Grant asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to reply to the letter of the hon. Member for Cambridgeshire, South-West dated 9 April referring to the privatisation of the Plant Breeding Institute.

Sir Keith Joseph: I wrote to my hon. Friend on 13 May.

Sir Anthony Grant asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science when he expects to receive the report of Lazard Brothers on the privatisation of the National Seed Development Organisation and part of the Plant Breeding Institute; if he will publish the report; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Walden: The Agriculture Ministers and I expect to receive the report of Lazard Brothers and Company Ltd. on the proposed privatisation of the National Seed Development Company and part of the Plant Breeding Institute shortly. The report will contain commercially confidential material and will not be published. My right hon. Friend will make a statement as soon as decisions have been taken.

University Grants Committee

Dr. Marek asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will make it his policy to obtain and place in the Library copies of the letters concerning grant entitlements from the University Grants Committee to the various universities and colleges as soon as they have been issued.

Mr. Walden: This is already my right hon. Friend's normal practice.

PRIME MINISTER

Political Adviser

Q37. Mr. Dalyell asked the Prime Minister if she has any plans to appoint a further political adviser for press matters at 10 Downing street.

The Prime Minister: There are no political advisers in the No. 10 press office.

Settle-Carlisle Railway Line

Mr. Adley asked the Prime Minister if she is satisfied with the co-ordination between the Department of Employment and the Department of Transport in connection with discussions over the future of the Settle-Carlisle railway line; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Transport has a duty under the statutory procedures to take account of all relevant factors, including social and economic considerations, in reaching a decision on the British Railways Board's proposals for the Settle-Carlisle line. The Department of Employment, with its interest in tourism, as well as all other interested Government Departments, will be fully consulted before any decision is taken.

Data Protection Registration

Mr. Ashdown asked the Prime Minister if she will list any Government Departments that did not put in their registration forms for data protection registration on time.

The Prime Minister: Each Department is responsible for its own data protection registration arrangements. Information is not held centrally.

Dr. Kurt Waldheim

Mr. Alfred Morris asked the Prime Minister, pursuant to the reply of 6 May to the hon. and learned Member for Leicester, West, (Mr. Janner) Official Report, column 3, why Her Majesty's Government are unwilling to seek from the United Nations copies of all documents in their possession relating to Dr. Kurt Waldheim's wartime activities; and if she will make a statement.

The Prime Minister: The Government have not hitherto requested access to United Nations files on Dr. Waldheim because there appeared to be no direct British interest in the allegations made against him. However, in view of recent new allegations about the disappearance of British subjects in the Balkans during the second world war, the Ministry of Defence is searching military records to see whether they contain any information relevant in this context.

New Zealand (Security Briefings)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister why Her Majesty's Government have excluded New Zealand from security briefings and information.

The Prime Minister: It is not our practice to comment on intelligence matters.

Syria

Mr. Adley asked the Prime Minister if she will seek to pay an official visit to Syria.

The Prime Minister: I have at present no plans to do so.

Protea Coins

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Prime Minister if Her Majesty's Government intend to ban the import of South African protea coins.

The Prime Minister: We are considering whether the spirit of our undertaking at the Commonwealth Heads of Government conference in 1985 covers new coins as well as Krugerrands.

Israel (Visit)

Mr. Adley asked the Prime Minister if, on her forthcoming visit to Israel, she will ask her hosts to take her to Syrian territory presently occupied by Israelis.

The Prime Minister: No.

Engagements

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagments for Thursday 15 May.

Mr. Greenway asked the Prime Minister if she will list her official engagments for Thursday 15 May.

The Prime Minister: This morning I presided at a meeting of the Cabinet and had meetings with ministerial colleagues and others. In addition to my duties in this House I shall be having further meetings later today.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Foreign Visitors

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department to what extent immigration records accurately show the number of foreigners leaving the United Kingdom; how many foreigners have overstayed their visa; how many Libyans have overstayed their visa; if he is taking any steps to find out how many Libyans are in the United Kingdom illegally; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: I shall reply as soon as possible.

Prison Population

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the prison population at the most recent date for which figures are available; and what was the figure in May 1979.

Mr. Mellor: On 9 May 1986 the total prison population in England and Wales was 46,348. On 30 April 1979, the nearest equivalent date for which figures are available, the total was 42,130.

Prison Officers

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what discussions he has had with the Prison Officers Association on the standards of work of private contractors employed to repair or maintain prison officers' quarters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: None. My right hon. Friend is not aware of any complaint by the POA on this matter.

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the present waiting list for prison officers working at Wandsworth prison to be allocated housing accommodation.

Mr. Mellor: Fifteen.

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the present number of empty prison officer quarters at Wandsworth prison; and for what period of time these quarters have been empty.

Mr. Mellor: Thirteen. On average, quarters are reoccupied within two months of vacation.

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is his policy towards assistance to a prison officer living in prison quarters when a member of his family becomes disabled and work is required within the quarters to help the disabled person; who pays for such work; what advice is given to the officer and his family; if contact is made with the local social services department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: Assistance is available from the prison department and from local authorities, and staff in need of help are encouraged to seek guidance and apply for help.

Immigration

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the pesent number of (a) men and (b) women waiting for interview for entry into the United Kingdom in India and Pakistan; and what the numbers were on 1 January 1985.

Mr. Waddington: Information on husbands, wives and fiance(e)s is given in the following table: corresponding data separately identifying men and women are not available for other categories.

Persons awaiting a first interview for their application for entry clearance to the United Kingdom

Number

	Husbands, male fiances	*Wives, female fiancees
India
End December 1984	1,000	180
End December 1985	800	340
Pakistan
End December 1984	1,300	1,000
End December 1985	1,700	1,400

* Before 26 August 1985 female fiancees were not required to have entry clearance in order to enter the United Kingdom.

Mr. Kaufman asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what was the reason for the delays in the interviewing by the immigration service of passengers arriving from Pakistan at terminal 3, Heathrow airport, on Saturday 10 May; how many passengers were affected; what was the average delay, the shortest delay and the longest delay; from which other countries arriving passengers were subject to similar or comparable delays on that day at Heathrow; and what steps he intends to take to prevent a recurrence.

Mr. Waddington: The reason for a build-up of delay on the immigration arrivals control at Heathrow terminal 3 on 10 May was the large number of passengers arriving in the early morning period. The Pakistan International Airline flight which arrived at 1100 was the 24th international arrival at terminal 3 that morning. An additional cause of delay was a bomb alert which resulted in no passengers reaching the control between 0815 and 0900. Approximately 1,300 passengers who arrived between 0800 and 0915 were subject to delay because of this incident.

On 10 May nationals of the following countries were required to submit to further examination at terminal 3:

	Number
Ghana	25
Nigeria	24
India	18
Pakistan	12
Zimbabwe	1
Turkey	1
Tanzania	1
Seychelles	1
Kenya	1
Iraq	1
Ecuador	1

For the 12 Pakistani nationals, the shortest period of time involved, including the time spent in interviewing, was 1 hour 15 minutes; the longest, 11 hours 15 minutes; and the average 5 hours 20 minutes. The periods of time in respect of other nationals required to submit to further examination were similar.

On 10 May immigration service resources were sensibly deployed to handle scheduled aircraft arrivals and the expected mix of passengers. Staff will continue to make every effort to minimise the length of delays despite the increased pressures on the control.

Domestic Violence

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether Her Majesty's Government plan to collect national statistics on domestic violence;

(2) what was (a) the number of reported incidents of domestic violence and (b) the percentage of incidents which resulted in prosecutions for each year from 1976.

Mr. Mellor: The information requested is not collected. Statistics of offences of violence between spouses recorded by the police in 1979 and 1980 were published in "Criminal Statistics, England and Wales 1980" (Cmnd. 8376, table 2.5). The recording of these offences was then discontinued as it was incomplete, of doubtful reliability and did not justify the cost. We have no further plans to attempt to collect national statistics on domestic violence.

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the Government have any plans to introduce a system whereby injunctions awarded by courts for cases of domestic violence are centralised so as to be available to all police stations immediately.

Mr. Giles Shaw: We are considering with the Association of Chief Police Officers the recommendations of the Women's National Commission's report on violence against women, which concerns domestic violence. This includes the enforcement of injunctions. There is no formal means for informing the police of the existence of injunctions, and it is advisable for a person who has obtained one to bring it to the attention of the local police. This is a speedy way of making the police aware of injunctions applying in their area and, as most injunctions are likely to be of local effect, a central record is unlikely to prove helpful.

Violent Crime

Mrs. Clwyd asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has any proposals to improve the collection of statistics on victims of crime.

Mr. Mellor: I would refer the hon. Member to the reply given to a question from the hon. Member for Bradford, South (Mr. Torney) on 20 February 1986, at column 294.

Fraud Trials (Juries)

Mr. Stern asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has yet come to a decision on the Roskill report's recommendations on the abolition of juries in complex fraud trials.

Mr. Mellor: The Government will reach decisions on these recommendations later this year in the light of the comments invited in the White Paper on plans for criminal justice legislation (Cmnd. 9658).

Police (Statistics)

Mr. Heathcoat-Amory asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the percentage of policemen who are of (a) Afro-Caribbean and (b) Asian origin; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: On 28 February 1986, 779 police officers—0·64 per cent. of the total police strength in England and Wales — were members of the ethnic minorities. No central record of their racial origin is maintained.

Police and Prison Officers (Pay)

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the present basic salary of (a) a 21-year-old police officer, and (b) a 21-year-old prison officer, assuming each to have had the same length of service.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The minimum age for joining the prison service is 21 years. Following initial training, a 21-year-old prison officer will receive an annual salary of about £6,989 (of which £5,388 is basic pay). The annual basic salary of a 21-year-old police officer with less than one year's service is £7,212.

Prisons (Drugs)

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what has been the number of prisoners in Her Majesty's prisons who have been charged with possessing drugs in each of the last three years;

(2) what has been the number of people in each of the last three years who have been charged with possessing drugs while on a visit to Her Majesty's prisons.

Mr. Mellor: I regret that information is not available in the form requested.

Neighbourhood Watch Schemes

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will make a statement about the effectiveness of neighbourhood watch schemes in the north-west.

Mr. Giles Shaw: There are over 3,700 neighbourhood or home watch schemes in the Cheshire, Cumbria, Greater Manchester, Lancashire and Merseyside police force areas, the number having trebled over the past year.

Although many of these schemes have been in existence for too short a time for their contribution towards reducing crime to be properly measured, I understand from the police forces concerned that there are encouraging indications that such schemes can be effective in reducing crime and the fear of crime, in increasing public awareness of the part they can play in preventing crime, in raising the degree of collaboration between police and the community in fostering community attitudes which are hostile to crime and in providing a focus for action for those who wish to work against crime.

Terrorism

Mr. Latham asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list all terrorist atrocities in the area of the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis since 1980 where the alleged perpetrators, whether subsequently arrested and charged or not, are believed to have been Arabs, indicating also where the victims were other Arabs; and whether he will indicate which cases have resulted in convictions.

Mr. Hurd: Details of incidents which the Metropolitan police attribute to Arab terrorists are as follows:

Arab Terrorist Incidents 1980-1986—London

Independent Broadcasting Authority

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will introduce legislation separating the radio and television elements of the Independent Broadcasting Authority; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: My right hon. Friend has no present plans to do so, but possible future arrangements for the provision and regulation of radio broadcasting will be considered in a Green Paper which the Government hope to publish later in the year, as explained in the reply to a question from my hon. Friend the Member for Leominster (Mr. Temple-Morris) on 8 May, at column 206.

Local Radio

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he has had recent discussions with the BBC regarding its proposals to establish local radio stations where there exists a station run by independent radio; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The third report of the Home Office local radio working party, published in 1980, set out proposals for the provision of new local radio services by the BBC and IBA. These proposals, which clearly envisaged competition for audiences between the BBC and IBA, were approved in principle by the then Home Secretary in 1981, and suitable frequency assignments were authorised. The timing of the introduction of services in approved areas then became a matter for the BBC and IBA in the light of the individual circumstances. We have had no recent discussions with the BBC on this matter.

Community Radio

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take into consideration, when granting franchises to community radio stations in Wales, the linguistic balance of the service being offered.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Yes.

News International, Wapping

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) what information he has as to the number of members of the public injured in Wapping on the night of 10 May and as to how many required hospital treatment;

(2) how many police officers were injured in Wapping on the night of 10 May; and how many required hospital treatment;

(3) how many police officers were on duty in Wapping on the night of 10 May; and how many were from Newham.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the Commissioner that 1,165 officers were deployed on the evening of 10 May, of whom 27 were from Newham. The Commissioner informs me that 20 police officers were injured that night, of whom three required hospital treatment. According to his information, which may be incomplete, no member of the public received hospital treatment: information about other injuries is not available.

Metropolitan Police (Vehicles)

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what is the total vehicle fleet of the Metropolitan police; and how many of these vehicles are (a) British built and (b) of foreign origin.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis informs me that the total vehicle fleet of the Metropolitan police, including cars, vans, motorcycles and other vehicles, was 4,004 as at 31 March 1986. Of these, 53 motorcycles and 51 cars-vans were manufactured outside the European Community. The country of manufacture of vehicles made by international companies within the EC is not always known, but at least two thirds of the remaining vehicles were manufactured in the United Kingdom.

Fire Services (London)

Mr. Leighton asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) whether Her Majesty's Inspectorate of Fire Services, during Her Majesty's Inspectorate's 1986 annual inspection of the London fire brigade in the current month, will be examining the operational implications for fire cover in east London of the loss of the hose-laying lorry appliance from F21 Stratford fire station on 1 April;

(2) if he will provide details as to the projected attendance time of a hose-laying lorry appliance mobilised by the London fire brigade to an incident in Newham, North-East constituency (a) prior to the loss of the hose-laying lorry appliance from F21 Stratford fire station and (b) after the implementation of that loss;

(3) if he will publish the evidence presented to him in connection with the London Fire and Civil Defence Authority's proposal to reduce establishment by the loss of the hose-laying lorry from F21 Stratford;

(4) if he or the London Fire and Civil Defence Authority consulted Essex county council over the proposed loss of the hose-laying lorry from F21 Stratford;

(5) if he will make it his policy not to accept any further proposals from the London Fire and Civil Defence Authority for reductions in establishment of the London fire brigade in 1987-88 and 1988-89;

(6) what allowance he made for potential traffic congestion in east London in accepting the proposal of the London Fire and Civil Defence Authority to reduce establishment by the loss of the hose-laying lorry at F21 Stratford.

Mr. Giles Shaw: The deployment of appliances to maintain appropriate standards of fire cover is in the first instance a matter for the London Fire and Civil Defence Authority. My right hon. Friend has approved and remains satisfied with the arrangements for 1986-87. Her Majesty's Fire Service Inspectorate was involved in the recent review of all special appliances undertaken by the London Fire Brigade which resulted in the withdrawal of a hose laying lorry from F21 Stratford fire station, and it will not be specifically re-examining this point during the present inspection. The London Fire and Civil Defence Authority did not, and was not required to, consult neighbouring fire authorities about its proposals for the deployment of special appliances.

We will consider arrangements for 1987-88 and 1988-89 at the right times in the light of the authority's proposals.

Avon Multicultural Education Centre

Mr. Michael Cocks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how much in total was the funding to the Avon Multicultural Education Centre from his Department under section 11 of the Local Government Act 1966; whether any guidance was given from his Department as to the conduct of the Avon Multicultural Education Centre; and whether such guidance will be affected by the review of the criteria for section 11 spending currently under way.

Mr. Waddington: For 1985-86 (the last financial year for which the relevant information is available), the Home Office has approved a claim of £703,215 for grant under section 11 in respect of staff at the Avon Multicultural Education Centre. The Avon county council has been reminded of the criteria under which section 11 grant is paid and asked to provide further information about the functions of certain posts.

Local Government Reform

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what arrangements have been made to service the Lieutenancy following abolition of the Greater London council.

Mr. Mellor: Following abolition of the Greater London council, the servicing of the Lieutenancy has been assumed by the London Residuary Body, the chairman of which acts as clerk to the Lieutenancy.

SOCIAL SERVICES

Supplementary Benefit

Mr. Lilley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services whether he has yet reached decisions on future arrangements for supplementary benefit mortgage interest payments.

Mr. Newton: As indicated in the Green and White Papers on social security reform (Cmnds 9517 and 9691) the Government have been considering in discussion with the building societies and other major lenders, what changes might be appropriate in the present arrangements for meeting mortgage interest payments with supplementary benefit.

My right hon. Friend the Secretary of State for Social Services, has today referred to the Social Security Advisory Committee for consultation draft regulations which incorporate the Government's proposals for change. The main proposal is to alter the balance of responsibility between taxpayers, borrower and lender. The amount of mortgage interest payable with supplementary benefit will be limited to 50 per cent. for the first six months on benefit for all claimants aged under 60.

Those remaining on benefit after this period would, as now, have their mortgage interest payments met in full. The Government propose to allow interest on arrears which have accumulated because of the six months limitation to qualify for benefit. This should assist lending organisations to reschedule loans in appropriate cases where interruption of earnings is longer term. A further change will enable homeowners who take out mortgage protection policies to benefit from them through a special supplementary benefit disregard of income from such policies.

The draft regulations also incorporate other minor proposals, including a beneficial amendment to ensure that a mortgage or loan taken out to replace an earlier advance will attract benefit on the same basis as the original loan. Subject to consultation and the passage of the necessary regulations, it is intended that the changes should take effect in the autumn. I am placing copies of the draft regulations and the Department's consultation paper to the Social Security Advisory Committee and also a copy of the Social Security Policy Inspectorate's Enquiry into Mortgage Interest in the Library today.

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people in Wales are currently in receipt of supplementary benefit; and what was the figure in May 1979.

Mr. Major: The latest information available is as follows:

	Numbers
May 1979	175,000
February 1985	279,000

Source: Quarterly Statistical Enquiries

Housing Benefit

Sir Peter Hordern asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he intends to change the way that income from home income plans is taken into account in the housing benefit assessment.

Mr. Newton: We have received a number representations about the way that income generated by home income plans is treated in the housing benefit assessment. At present, following legal advice, our guidance manual states that the whole of such income should be taken into account, including that portion which is deducted at source as mortgage interest. We have decided that in future, in view of the special nature of these plans, the mortgage interest deduction should be disregarded in the assessment. This will require an amendment to the housing benefits regulations. We hope to introduce the change in the near future following consultation with the relevant organisations.

Hearing Aids

Dr. Roger Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what response he proposes to make to proposals by the general medical services committee of the British Medical Association to the effect that where there are long delays in waiting for an assessment by ear, nose and throat surgeons before hearing aids are prescribed such patients should be referred directly to audio-technicians and examined by consultants at a later stage; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Newton: As I announced on 7 April at the launch of the "Breaking the Sound Barrier" campaign being staged by the Royal National Institute for the Deaf, Age Concern and the British Association of the Hard of Hearing, we are consulting all the professional and other bodies concerned about how direct reference of adult patients to hearing aid centres could be more widely used.

Unemployed Persons (Benefits)

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the total cost in (a) Wirral metropolitan borough council and (b) Liverpool city council of payments to the unemployed of each of the following benefits for each year since 1979: (i) unemployment benefit, (ii) supplementary allowances and (iii) housing benefit.

Mr. Major: I regret that this information is not available.

Mr. Frank Field asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will present a table showing the numbers of unemployed people in (a) Wirral metropolitan borough council and (b) Liverpool city council by entitlement to benefit for each year since 1979 and distinguishing between the following: (i) unemployment benefit only, (ii) unemployment benefit and supplementary benefit, (iii) supplementary benefit only, (iv) no benefit, and (v) housing benefit.

Mr. Major: The following table shows the numbers of unemployed people in (a) Wirral metropolitan borough council and (b) Liverpool city council in November each year since 1979 receiving the following benefits: (i) unemployment benefit only (ii) unemployment benefit and supplementary benefits (iii) supplementary benefit only (iv) no benefit. Similar information is not available for housing benefit.

Retirement Pensioners (Overseas)

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list each country or dependency outside the United Kingdom where United Kingdom retirement pensioners are known to live and draw their pension, showing for each country how many pensioners there are, whether they get pension increases and, for those countries where they do not, what is the average pension paid.

Mr. Major: United Kingdom retirement pensions are paid to beneficiaries living in the following countries outside the United Kingdom. The number of beneficiaries in each country at 31 December 1985 (the latest date for which figures are available) is shown in each case. The average pension paid in countries where no increases are payable is £13·32.

Christmas Bonus

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list those countries where the Christmas bonus is paid to people who are (a) there on holiday on the qualifying date or (b) ordinarily resident there on the qualifying date.

Mr. Major: The Christmas bonus is payable to people in receipt of a qualifying benefit who are present or ordinarily resident in the United Kingdom (which for this purpose includes Northern Ireland, the Channel Islands, the Isle of Man and Gibraltar) or in any country of the European Community at any time during the qualifying week.

Pregnancies (Computers)

Mr. Thurnham asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement about the use of computers in monitoring pregnancies within the National Health Service.

Mr. Whitney: We support the continuing development of the wide range of computer technology available to assist Health Service staff in monitoring pregnancies. The provision of the equipment is a matter for induvidual health authorities.

Phenol Poisoning

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the long-term effects on health of low-level phenol poisoning.

Mr. Whitney: No. We are advised that phenol in strong concentrations is known to be a caustic, but there is no evidence to suggest that low concentrations taken orally over long periods will adversely affect human health.

Invalid Care Allowance

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many married women in Wales would be entitled to receive invalid care allowance if eligibility was extended to them.

Mr. Newton: I regret that it is not possible to make an estimate.

Organ Donations

Mr. McCrindle asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if any studies have been undertaken by his Department to establish the practicability of requiring general practitioners to seek approval for the donations of organs to be obtained from relatives prior to the death of the donor.

Mr. Whitney: No. Donated organs normally come from patients in hospital intensive care units. Even if the general practitioner and the relatives knew each other, it is most unlikely that they will be in contact at the relevant time.

A law was enacted in the state of New York in March 1985 requiring hospital administrators to ensure that the relatives of all suitable organ donors are asked for their consent that the organs be removed. I will be visiting New York later this month to learn about the practical effects of the law's implementation.

Geriatric Beds, Leicestershire

Mr. Janner asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what is the rate of occupancy of geriatric beds in Leicestershire.

Mr. Whitney: During 1984, the latest year for which figures are available centrally, 811 beds in departments of geriatric medicine were occupied daily on average in National Health Service hospitals in Leicestershire district health authority, representing 92·5 per cent. of available beds.

Abortions

Mrs. Roe asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the substance of the replies received to his letter of 11 December to proprietors of approved nursing homes and registered pregnancy advice bureaux concerning abortions; what specific reply was received from the Raleigh nursing home, Brixton hill and the Robert nursing home, Birmingham; and what action he proposes to take in the light of these responses.

Mr. Hayhoe: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

District Health Authorities

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will publish in the Official Report a list of district health authorities which are conterminous with the local authority dealing with services for senior citizens, environmental health, mental illness and provisions for the disabled.

Mr. Whitney: I shall let the hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Invalidity Benefit

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many people in Wales are currently in receipt of invalidity benefit.

Mr. Major: One hundred and eight thousand as at 30 March 1985, the latest date for which information is available.

Nursing Homes

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list the names and locations of the six residential care homes and two nursing homes which have had their registrations cancelled, and the reasons for cancellation in each case.

Mr. Whitney: I refer the hon. Member to my reply to the hon. Member for Birkenhead (Mr. Field) on 1 May at column 468 in respect of residential care homes. Nursing homes are registered with district health authorities, and I suggest that the hon. Members asks the health authorities concerned for details of the cancellations. The registration authorities for the homes concerned were:

Bedfordshire county council
Cambridgeshire county council
Lancashire county council
Dudley metropolitan borough
South Tyneside metropolitan borough
Blackpool, Wyre and Fylde health authority
Worcester and district health authority

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Social Services what surveillance is carried out by his Department to ensure that district health authorities and local authorities adhere to their statutory requirements under the Registered Homes Act 1984 and the Mental Nursing Homes Regulations 1984 in respect of the inspection of private nursing homes; and if he is satisfied with the current performance by health and local authorities of their duties in this regard.

Mr. Whitney: Nursing homes are registered and inspected by district health authorities who are accountable to regional health authorities. RHAs monitor all aspects of DHAs' performance. As regards residential care homes, I refer the hon. Member to my reply to my hon. Friend the Member for Leicester, East (Mr. Bruinvels) on 28 January at column 487.

NHS (General Services)

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if, in the manner of the answer to the hon. Member for Norfolk North, of 21 December 1984, Official Report, columns 412-14, he will provide figures for expenditure by the family practitioner services, the Dental Estimates Board, the Prescription Pricing Authority and other special health authorities providing National Health Service central services for 1983-84; and if he will also publish comparable figures, at current and at 1983-84 prices, and comparable percentages for 1960 and 1970, for the above categories and those in the original answer.

Mr. Hayhoe I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Fraud (Staff Deployment)

Mr. Lilley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services, pursuant to his reply of 7 March to the hon. Member for Nuneaton, Official Report, column 322, how he intends to deploy the additional 500 staff for fraud work; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Fowler: These extra staff will strengthen my Department's anti-fraud effort in two important areas. At present we have a complement of nearly 2,500 staff for fraud work—2,300 in local offices and the remainder in regionally based teams. We shall continue to base most of our effort against fraud in local offices, 180 of the extra staff will be put into selected offices specifically to reinforce their efforts to combat benefit fraud by claimants resident in hotels and other board and lodging accommodation, to uncover collusion by landlords, and to bring prosecutions where evidence is available. The other 320 extra staff will be added to the regionally based teams: these teams will be re-grouped into 31 benefit fraud teams, one for each management group of offices. They will help the local office in fully investigating allegations of fraud and bringing prosecutions where justified.

Psychiatric Patients, Lincoln

Mr. Meacher asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how much additional funding has been allocated to North Lincolnshire district health authority to provide community care of psychiatric patients discharged from St. John's hospital.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 6 May 1986, c. 77]: Health Authorities make arrangements for bridging finance and joint funding to be provided to establish community care services for long stay psychiatric patients moving out of hospital. The hon. Member may wish to contact the chairman of the Trent regional health authority for the details he requires. Trent RHA has the responsibility for the allocation of funds to the North Lincolnshire health authority.

Hip Replacement Operations

Mrs. Renée Short asked the Secretary of State for Social Services how many hip replacement operations have taken place in health authorities in the West Midlands region in each of the last seven years; and what was the range of length of hospital stay for such operations.

Mr. Whitney [pursuant to his reply, 7 March 1986, c. 318]: I am sorry I cannot give the hon. Member all the information she seeks. Some of it could be provided only at disproportionate cost. In National Health Service hospitals in the West Midlands region it is estimated that in 1983, the latest year for which information is available centrally, an estimated 5 per cent. of in-patient cases undergoing hip replacement operations remained in hospital for five days or less, and 5 per cent. for six weeks or more. The available information on the number of such operations is given in the table.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Agricultural Prices

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what increase in prices is expected in each European Economic Community country under the package now being agreed for farm prices, taking into account changes in monetary compensatory allowances; what will be the increase in each case for each of the products now in surplus; and what effect the package is expected to have on European Economic Community output of each of the products in surplus in terms of tonnage produced.

Mr. Gummer: The expected changes in the common support prices for the major commodities are set out in table I. In Germany and the Netherlands the green rates have not been changed and the support prices in national currencies will be modified by amounts corresponding to table I. In other member states supprt prices in national currencies will be further adjusted to take account of the green rate changes which are expected to be as set out in table II. The overall effect of these changes on production levels will depend also on other measures being applied such as the reduction in milk quotas, the cereals co-responsibility levy and changes related to cereals quality, as well as other factors including the weather.

Milk Quotas

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps he intends to take to assist those dairy farmers affected by the decision to make a three per cent. cut in milk quotas over the next three years.

Mr. Gummer: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

CAP (Expenditure)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food whether he will publish in the Official Report a table showing the amount of expenditure in the United Kingdom under the common agricultural policy per acre of cereals, rapeseed and sugarbeet, together with the amount spent per beef unit, per dairy cow, per pig, per sheep and per 1,000 chickens; and what is his estimate of the total amount of expenditure under the common agricultural policy per acre of agricultural land.

Mrs. Fenner: Expenditure in the United Kingdom in 1985 under the common agricultural policy (CAP), expressed per hectare of different crops, was set out in my reply of 30 April at columns 437-38. The corresponding information on livestock products, where expenditure can be specifically allocated, is shown in the table. Total (provisional) expenditure in the United Kingdom under the CAP, expressed per hectare of total agricultural area, was some £112 per hectare in 1985-86.

‖ total cattle other than those used, or intended to be used, for milk production.

Cereal Substitutes

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the current level of imports of cereal substitutes into the United Kingdom from third countries.

Mrs. Fenner: I understand that my hon. Friend is specifically interested in manioc. Recent levels of imports originating from third countries (excluding Spain and Portugal throughout) are shown below. January 1986 is the latest period for which information is currently available.

Imports of manioc from third countries

Wheat

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will give the average ex-farm price of wheat in the United Kingdom for 1979, 1980, 1981, 1982, 1983 and 1984 at constant prices, showing the 1979 price as 100.

Mrs. Fenner: The information requested is presented in the table:

	Ex-farm price of wheat

Exports

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what is the total value of exports of (a) cereals and (b) other agricultural products in each year since 1979 in actual and constant prices; and what is the percentage increase in each case in constant prices show.ng 1979 as 100.

Mrs. Fenner: The information requested is presented in the following table:

Milk

Mr. Willie W. Hamilton asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food how much milk has been thrown away in Scotland and the north of England since the beginning of May.

Mrs. Fenner [pursuant to her reply, 14 May 1986, c. 485]: No milk has had to be disposed of in Scotland and the north of England since the beginning of May as a result of the incident at the Chernobyl reactor. Levels of iodine 131 in milk arising from the activity deposited during the weekend of 3 to 4 May, which have always been well below levels at which precautionary action would need to be considered, are falling. Levels of radiocaesium, which are also well below the action level, are beginning to show signs of decreasing.

Sherry

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what steps Her Majesty's Government have taken to implement the provisions of the treaty of accession of Spain and Portugal concerning the import or sale of Australian sherry in the United Kingdom.

Mr. Gummer [pursuant to his reply, 28 April 1986, c. 314]: The product marketed before Spanish accession as "Australian sherry" may continue to be imported and sold in the United Kingdom under a different description. However, following the accession of Spain and Portugal, the European Commission takes the preliminary view that it is no longer permissible to market the product under this designation in virtue of Community Regulation 338/79. The relevant provisions of this regulation are implemented into United Kingdom law by regulation 5(1) of the Common Agricultural Policy (Wine) Regulations 1982.

Imports (Radiation)

Mr. Terlezki asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food what assessment his Department has made, following the Chernobyl nuclear disaster in the Ukraine, of the long term effect on agricultural products produced in the Ukraine, Bielorussia, the Baltic States of Poland; if he envisages a long-term ban on importation of agricultural products from all those countries; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Fenner: It is not possible to make such an assessment on the information at present available. As a precautionary measure the importation of a range of agricultural products from the countries mentioned in the question has been banned by the European Community until 31 May before which date a scientific review will be undertaken.

WALES

YTS (Cardiff)

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many people are currently on the YTS (a) in Cardiff and (b) in Cardiff West; what will be the effect of the introduction of the recently launched two-year scheme in the same area; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Available information relates to the counties of South and Mid Glamorgan where there are 5,339 trainees currently on YTS. As a result of two year YTS, 2,273 continuation (second year) places will be available in the area in addition to the 6,524 planned first-year places.

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many people have completed YTS schemes in (a) Cardiff and (b) Cardiff West, since the scheme's inception; how many persons completing the scheme have found full-time or part-time employment; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The information as requested is not available. Available information relates to the counties of South and Mid Glamorgan, where, since the inception of YTS in April 1983, there have been 19,732 entrants. The most recent Manpower Services Commission 100 per cent. follow-up survey showed that 46 per cent. of those leaving YTS in this area between April and November 1985 found full or part-time employment.

Job Creation

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many new jobs have been created in the Cardiff travel-to-work area during the last five years; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: This information is not available. Available statistics relate to net changes in numbers of employees in employment and not to gross numbers of jobs created or lost. These figures are not available below regional level between census of employment dates.

Enterprise Allowance Scheme

Mr. Terlezki asked the Secretary of State for Wales what has been the total number of entrants to date to the enterprise allowance scheme in the Cardiff area; at what cost to his Department; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Available figures relate to the counties of South and Mid Glamorgan, where, between August 1983 and April 1986, 2,574 people entered the enterprise allowance scheme at a cost of £3·8 million. This is a highly successful scheme which following the Budget, is to be expanded in Wales to a target of 5,585 places by March 1987.

Welsh Development Agency

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will itemise the sum totals and headings which account for the increases in the estimated 1986-87 cash budget to the Welsh Development Agency over the provisional cash budget in 1985-86.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The information is published each year in the Supply Estimates.

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many people have been employed by the Welsh Development Agency in each year from 1979 to 1986.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The number of staff employed in the Welsh Development Agency at 31 March each year is given in the following table:

Year at 31 March
1979	499
1980	500
1981	491
1982	501
1983	482
1984	433
1985	404
1986	421·5

Schoolchildren (Welsh Language)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what percentage of the primary school children in the local education authority areas of Wales speak Welsh as their principal language.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Assessments of fluency made by head teachers in September 1985 indicate that the proportions of all pupils in primary schools whose principal language was Welsh were as follows:

	Per cent.
Clwyd	4·7
Dyfed	20·3
Gwent	0·1
Gwynedd	41·1
Mid Glamorgan	0·6
Powys	5·5
South Glamorgan	1·0
West Glamorgan	2·5
WALES	7·0

These figures exclude pupils whose principal language was not Welsh, but who could speak Welsh fluently.

General Certificate of Secondary Education

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales what funds have been made available, and to whom, to ensure the production and translation of new textbooks into the Welsh language for the proposed General Certificate of Secondary Education examinations courses.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: The Department is funding two projects involving the preparation of new Welsh medium materials appropriate to GCSE courses. One is in the department of education, University College of Swansea costing some £30,000 and the other in the department of education, University College of Wales, Aberystwyth, at an estimated cost of over £500,000.

Mr. D.E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales what funds are being made available to local education authorities to purchase Welsh language textbooks needed for the new general certificate of secondary education examination courses.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Local education authorities determine both the levels and the degree of priority of funding for school text books. As far as GCSE courses are concerned, they are free to apply for additional resources for books and equipment for 1987-88 and 1988-89 under the education support grant mechanism.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales what funds have been made available for the translation of general certificate of secondary education syllabuses into the Welsh language; and if these funds have been sufficient.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: No central assistance has been made available for the production of GCSE syllabuses in any language.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many subject syllabuses for the proposed GCSE examination have been translated into the Welsh language.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: None.

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales if teachers who teach through the medium of the Welsh language will have facilities equal to their counterparts who teach through the medium of English in Wales for teaching the new courses for the general certificate of secondary education examination.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply given by my hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, to the hon. Member for Caernarfon (Mr. Wigley) on 17 March 1986, at column 37.

Sheep Rustling

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he has any plans to introduce measures to curb sheep rustling in Wales.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: This is a matter for the chief constables of Wales who are responsible for enforcing the law concerning theft of livestock.

Welsh Water Authority

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is the estimated cost of the proposal to privatise the Welsh water authority; and what proportion of this cost will be borne by ratepayers.

Mr. Mark Robinson: It is too early to estimate the costs of privatisation, but the costs will be more than offset by the sale proceeds.

Dyfed (Residential Children's Homes)

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales (1) how many children will be affected by proposals to close all of Dyfed county council residential children's homes;

(2) in the light of recent proposals to close Dyfed's residential children's homes, what provisions will be made for those adolescents who cannot be placed in resource centres or foster homes because of severe emotional and social problems.

Mr. Mark Robinson: This is a matter for Dyfed county council to determine in line with its assessment of the needs and best interests of the children in care. I understand that the council has not reached any final decisions and that the proposals do not include the closure of all residential children's homes in the county.

Bus Services

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales what measures have been taken to ensure the future of non-profit-making bus routes in rural Wales after deregulation.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Section 63 of the Transport Act 1985 places a duty on county councils to secure any public passenger transport service within their areas which they consider appropriate and which would not otherwise be available. It also empowers district councils to take similar action. Section 108 of the Act provides for the introduction of a rural transport innovation grant, and £100 000 has been allocated to this grant scheme in Wales in 1986-87. Section 109 of the Act makes provision for a transitional rural bus grant to assist rural bus services during the changeover to the new system. £50 million will be made available in Great Britain over a four-year period from 1 April 1986.

Farm Prices

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will outline the effects of the Council of Agriculture Ministers' decision on farm prices on Welsh farmers.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: The basis of the Council of Agriculture Ministers' agreement on farm support prices for 1986-87 involves a freeze in common support prices for those commodities of particular significance to Wales. However, as a result of the devaluing significance to Wales. However, as a result of the devaluing of the green pound our farmers will receive increases in support prices, in national currencies, of 2·75 per cent. in the livestock sector and 1·35 per cent. in the arable sector.

Although there is to be a further 3 per cent. cut in milk quotas to be achieved over the next three years, this is necessary to reduce the continuing milk surplus. The arrangements for achieving the reduction include a reasonable degree of flexibility for each member state according to its own circumstances.

For beef and sheep the existing support schemes continue essentially unchanged and we were successful in removing a number of unsatisfactory features in the proposals which would have discriminated against United Kingdom and Welsh producers.

The agreement will have a negligible effect on food prices and represents a further significant step towards improving the common agricultural policy while safeguarding the competitive position of our own farmers.

Schools (Closure)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what guidelines his Department offers to local education authorities on the closure of small schools.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Guidance is given in Welsh Office Circular 30/81 issued to local education authorities on 20 July 1981.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many schools with (a) fewer than 15 pupils, (b) between 15 and 20 pupils, (c) between 20 and 24 pupils, (d) between 25 and 29 pupils and (e) over 30 pupils have been closed by each local education authority in Wales in each year since 1970.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Comprehensive information in the form requested is not available. A figure for the total number of nursery and primary schools closed could be misleading; many closures occur as part of wider schemes of reorganisation or amalgamation which can incorporate the establishment of new schools. During the period January 1970 to January 1986 there was a net increase of 17 maintained nursery schools and a net reduction of 194 maintained primary schools in Wales.

Gittins Report

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what developments there have been with regard to policy on primary education in Wales since the Gittins report.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: Government policy in respect of primary schools is stated in the White Paper "Better Schools" (Cmnd. 9469, published March 1985). Within Wales, Her Majesty's Inspectorate has issued the following papers: "Curriculum and Organisation of Primary Schools in Wales" (Her Majesty's Stationery Office 1984); "Links between Parents, Community and Primary Schools" (June 1985); and "Leadership in Primary Schools" (June 1985), copies of which I have placed in the Library.

Homeless Persons

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many people classified as homeless in Wales are currently accommodated at local authority expense in hostels or boarding houses.

Mr. Mark Robinson: At 31 December 1985 the number of households in Wales classified as homeless and resident at local authority expense in bed-and-breakfast accommodation or hostels was 20 and 127 respectively.

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is the cost per week to each local authority in Wales currently of housing people classified as homeless in hostels or boarding houses; and what was the total expense incurred for all of Wales in 1985.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Figures for local authority expenditure on homelessness including bed-and-breakfast accommodation are collected annually. Figures from the last financial year for which information is available (1984-85) are shown in the following table:

*Local Authority	Net cost per week†
Alyn and Deeside	9·46
Carmarthen	25·83
Ceredigion	71·77
Dinefwr	93·54
Llanelli	114·31
Preseli	201·06
South Pembrokeshire	6·92
Newport	138·02
Aberconwy	39·83

Taff-Ely	11·25
Cardiff	1,206·33
Neath	0·79
Swansea	2·08
Total Wales (per week)	2,063·52

The all Wales total for the financial year was £107,303.

* Local authorities not shown incurred no expenditure in this category.

† Total expenditure less income from fees and charges (which includes any income which may be received direct from DHSS).

NHS Employees

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary State for Wales how many people are currently employed by the National Health Service in Wales; and what was the figure for each year from 1979 to 1985.

Mr. Mark Robinson: It is estimated that the National Health Service in Wales employed the equivalent of 55,151 whole-time staff at 30 April 1986. Figures for previous years are given in the following table:

Staff employed by the NHS in Wales†*

	Number
1979	50,320

* Including staff of the Welsh Health Common Services Authority.

† Whole-time equivalents at 30 September each year.

House Building

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary State for Wales what information he has as to how many new build schemes are currently under way in Wales in (a) private and (b) public sector housing; and what has been the figure of new build completions in each sector for each year since 1979 to 1985.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Fifty-five local authority schemes were currently under way in Wales at 31 March 1986. No data are available for housing association or private sector new build schemes. The number of new build completions in the private and public sectors for each year since 1979 to 1985 is shown in the following table:

Year	Private Sector	Public Sector
1979	6,914	4,351
1980	5,838	4,622
1981	4,985	4,076
1982	5,225	2,676
1983	5,539	2,267
1984	6,433	2,744
1985	6,521	1,673

Residential Care and Nursing Homes (Inspectors)

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales how many inspectors there are for residential care and nursing homes within Wales.

Mr. Mark Robinson: Under the provisions of the Registered Homes Act 1984 the registration and inspection of private and voluntary residential care homes is the responsibility of local authority social services departments. For private and voluntary nursing homes the responsibility rests with district health authorities. The numbers of staff required by each authority to carry out their inspection duties under the Act is a matter for them to determine. No information is available centrally of the numbers of such staff in Wales.

Wages

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what was the average amount earned in Wales by people working (a) less than 30 hours each week, (b) less than 25 hours each week and (c) less than 20 hours each week, at the latest date for which such information is available.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: This information is not available.

Labour Statistics

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales if he will estimate the number of Welsh people under the age of 21 years who have never been engaged in full-time employment, other than on youth training and associated schemes.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: This information is not available.

Playgroups and Nursery Schools

Mr. Barry Jones asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is the current provision of (a) playgroups and (b) nursery schools in each Welsh county, expressed in days available each week.

Mr. Mark Robinson: The information available is given in the following table:

	Number of premises
	*Nursery schools	Day nurseries/ centres†‡	Playgroups†‡
Clwyd	5	14	174
Dyfed	4	—	160
Gwent	15	4	114
Gwynedd	—	4	147
Mid Glamorgan	23	6	123
Powys	—	—	61
South Glamorgan	10	17	119
West Glamorgan	2	7	49

* At September 1985.
† At 31 March 1985.
‡ Includes facilities provided by local authorities and other registered premises.

The nursery schools are open for five days each week, but no information is available centrally on the number of days for which day nurseries/centres and playgroups are open. These figures exclude provision for nursery classes in maintained primary schools.

Rate Registers

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales (1) if he will introduce legislation to give increased rights of inspection to the general public of the rate registers of councils existing prior to the 1974 reorganisation of local government in Wales; and if he will make a statement;

(2) what recent representations he has received about the arrangements for custody of, and for public access to, the rate registers of local authorities in Wales existing prior to the 1974 local government reorganisation; if he has any plans to seek powers to transfer these from the custody of county councils; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mark Robinson: I am writing to the hon. Gentleman.

DEFENCE

Binary Nerve Gas Weapons

Mr. Denzil Davies asked the Secretary of State for Defence, pursuant to the statement to the House by the Minister of State for the Armed Forces, the right hon. Member for Tonbridge and Malling (Mr. Stanley) 28 April, Official Report, column 665, regarding the non-deployment of United States binary nerve gas weapons in the United Kingdom in peacetime, if he will define the term peacetime in this context; whether deployment of such weapons in the United Kingdom would be allowed at a time of heightened international tension preceding actual hostilities, or only after a formal declaration of war; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Stanley: If a request for deployment of United States binary chemical munitions were ever to be received, it would be a matter for decision by the British Government of the day in the light of all the circumstances prevailing at the time. Any deployment to the United Kingdom at any time would require the consent of Her Majesty's Government.

US Air Force (Military Aircraft)

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether he plans to allow the United States air force to deploy F-111 aircraft at Boscombe Down.

Mr. Stanley: The United States Air Force deploys F-111 aircraft to Boscombe Down from time to time on a temporary basis, in order to give US-based crews experience of operating in Europe and to demonstrate their ability to reinforce NATO rapidly. Boscombe Down is designated a "Colocated Operating Base", which means that in times of tension or war the base would be shared with the USAF.

Mr. Donald Stewart asked the Secretary of State for Defence whether any civil airports in Scotland have been authorised for use by United States air force fighter planes or bombers.

Mr. Stanley: I shall answer shortly.

Property Services Agency

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Defence why the Property Services Agency gave an extra payment of £1 million to the Association of Metropolitan Authorities in respect of 35, Great Smith street.

Mr. Norman Lamont: The Property Services Agency has made no such payment. I understand, however, that £1·037 million was paid recently by International Military Services limited as a reverse premium for the disposal of its interest in the lease of 35 Great Smith street.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Anglo-Irish Agreement

Mr. A. Cecil Walker asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what has been the cost to Her Majesty's Government of transporting journalists to Hillsborough for the signing of the Anglo-Irish agreement; what other expenses of journalists were met; and whether the Government of the Irish Republic shared in any such costs.

Mr. Scott: On the day that the Anglo-Irish agreement was signed, journalists were transported from Belfast international airport to Hillsborough castle and back at a cost of £700 to Her Majesty's Government.

Telecommunications facilities and refreshments were provided at Hillsborough. The Irish Government were not asked to contribute towards the cost.

Harland and Wolff

Mr. Denzil Davies asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, pursuant to the reply given by him on 24 April, Official Report, column 201, if he will explain whether the calculation of a possible cost overrun by Harland and Wolff when building the auxiliary oiler replenishment vessel will include a consideration of fixed costs as well as more direct on-costs; and if he will make a statement.

Dr. Boyson: Harland and Wolff's tender price provided for direct labour and material costs and a full allocation of overheads. Calculation of actual costs on the contract will be on the same basis.

Mr. Denzil Davies asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the nature and extent of the subsidy available to Harland and Wolff for merchant shipbuilding and if it covers the yard's capital expenditure.

Dr. Boyson: Direct merchant shipbuilding subsidy to Harland and Wolff takes the form of intervention fund grants at 20·5 per cent. of contract price of ships up to 70,000 dwt; 25·5 per cent. for larger vessels. Harland and Wolff also receive interest-free loans and other miscellaneous grants to fund its operating costs, including capital expenditure. In 1985-86 those grants and loans totalled £36·5 million.

Mr. Denzil Davies asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what criteria will be used to judge whether Harland and Wolff keep within, or exceed, their tendered cost estimate for the construction of the first auxiliary oiler replenishment vessel.

Dr. Boyson: Actual costs incurred on the contract will be monitored and compared with the detailed breakdown of estimates included in Harland and Wolff's tender.

Public Employment (Equality)

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland waht action he proposes to take to ensure equal employment and promotion opportunites for all within Government Departments and public bodies.

Dr. Boyson: The equal opportunites policy statement published on 4 December 1984 sets out the Government's policy for the Northern Ireland Civil Service. A comprehensive system for monitoring the religous affiliations of its non-industrial staff has been introduced. I expect the first monitoring report to be available before the summer recess. It is also proposed to extend these arrangements in due course to industrial staff following consultation with the trade unions.

As for organisations outside the Northern Ireland Civil Service, consideration is being given to how the approach to equality of opportunity in employment could be made more comprehensive, consistent and effective.

Southern Health Board

Mr. Mallon asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1) what assessment he has made of the implications for the level of employment in the ambulance service within the Southern health board area of the financial cut-backs imposed on the board by his Department;

(2) what assessment he has made of the implications for the numbers employed in the home help service within the Southern health board area of the financial cut-backs imposed on the board by his Department;

(3) what assessment he has made of the implications for the hours worked in the home help service within the Southern health board area of the financial cut-backs imposed on the board by his Department;

(4) what assessment he has made of the implications for the numbers employed by the Southern health board area of the financial cut-backs imposed on the board by his Department;

(5) what assessment he has made of the implications for the number of operative ambulance vehicles used within the Southern health board area of the financial cut-backs imposed on the board by his Department;

(6) what account he has made of the implications for the level of hospital provision in the Southern health board area of the financial cut-backs imposed on the board by his Department.

Mr. Needham: There have been no cut-backs in the financial allocations to the Southern health and social services board. Since 1979-80 its allocations have in fact been increased by 15·5 per cent. in real terms. In common with all other health authorities throughout the United Kingdom, the Southern board has to live within its budget and to improve its efficiency in order to free resources to meet emerging pressures for both service development and pay increases. The detailed measures taken to achieve these objectives are a matter for the board.

Central Services Agency

Mr. Wareing asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what responsibility he has for the Northern Ireland Central Services Agency.

Mr. Needham: The agency is appointed by and operates under the direction of the Department of Health and Social Services for Northern Ireland, which is in turn subject to the direction and control of my right hon. Friend the Secretary of State.

ENVIRONMENT

Soviet Nuclear Accident

Mr. Dalyell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when scientists employed by the Government Departments or in nationalised industries first had contacts with Soviet scientists of officials concerning the consequences of the Chernobyl nuclear power station incident.

Mrs. Rumbold: Discussions between officials on the supply and use of protective clothing commenced on Tuesday 6 May.

Urban Programme

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list in the Official Report bids made under phase 26 of the traditional urban programme for both holiday projects and main phase schemes, indicating approvals given.

Sir George Young: The information is given in summary form in the following table:

Traditional urban programme 1986-87

Region	Main phase	Holiday	Total
	Total number of bids received
London	128	75	203
Northern	34	30	64
West Midlands	51	23	74
East Midlands	40	7	47
Yorkshire and Humberside	79	8	87
Eastern	33	5	38
Merseyside	57	11	68
North West	55	27	82
South West	27	12	39
South East	14	—	14
Total	518	198	716
	Total number of projects approved
London	51	35	86
Northern	12	17	29
West Midlands	20	14	34
East Midlands	11	5	16
Yorkshire and Humberside	21	28	49
Eastern	6	2	8
Merseyside	21	12	33
North West	24	20	44
South West	11	4	15
South East	1	—	1
Total	177	137	314

I shall send the hon. Member a full list of approved schemes shortly, and place a copy in the Library of the House. A total of £36·5 million has been allocated to the traditional urban programme in 1986-87, of which £6·62 million was available for new approvals, including £800,000 for holiday projects.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) when he received the letter of 4 April 1985 sent by Mr. R. A Shearing of 43 Lansdowne avenue, Grimsby, with regard to the proposed nuclear dump at Killingholme; if he has yet replied to this letter; and if he will make it his policy to allow Mr. Shearing time to reply to him before he brings forward the special development order;

(2) when he received the letter of 7 April 1985 from Mrs. V. Ingram of 116 Pelham avenue, Grimsby, with regard to the proposed nuclear dump site at Killingholme; if he has yet replied to this letter; and if he will allow Mrs. Ingram time to reply to him before he brings forward his proposals;

(3) whether he intends to collect evidence from the Anglian water authority on the four possible nuclear dump sites before a special development order is laid;

(4) what consultations he has had with the Anglian water authority about the drainage, water table, dampness and water flow problems of the land at Killingholme, South Humberside, selected by NIREX as a possible nuclear dump;

(5) if he will reply to Councillor John Colebrook of 56 Gloucester avenue, Grimsby, South Humberside DN34 5BZ, about the South Killingholme potential nuclear waste disposal site in sufficient time for the recipient to reply before the special development order is laid; and if he will make a statement;

(6) what account was taken by NIREX of drainage and water table problems of sites considered for nuclear dumping;

(7) whether his review of the question of radioactive dose equivalent to critical groups will be completed before the geological exploration of near-surface disposal sites begins; and what implications it has for the design, siting and operation of nuclear dumps;

(8) how many sites will be producing waste which will be taken to the Government's proposed low-level nuclear waste dump once it is in operation; how many are accessible for rail transportation; how many would be sending waste by road; what preference he has expressed to NIREX for transportation; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: I shall answer these questions shortly.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what study has been made of the implications of the nuclear incident at the Russian nuclear waste dump in the Southern Urals in the 1950s for nuclear dumping in Britain; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Soviet Union has never acknowledged that such an incident took place. If a waste disposal site was involved, it is unlikely that the site was constructed to the standards the Government would require for a site in this country.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what information he has as to (a) how many other countries use near-surface disposal facilities for low-level nuclear waste, (b) how many use deep disposal facilities and (c) what are the comparative cost ratios of the one method to the other; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waldegrave: (a) In the Western industrialised countries, France, the United States and Canada use near-surface disposal facilities for low-level nuclear waste.

(b) Only Sweden and West Germany will have deep disposal facilities before 1990.

(c) Comparative costs are given in "Assessment of Best Practicable Environmental Options" Her Majesty's Stationery Office March 1986. However, these costs are kept under review by UK NIREX Ltd. as new information becomes available.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what proportion and acreage of the British Isles has clay soil suitable for the shallow trench disposal of nuclear waste.

Mr. Waldegrave: Acreage figures are not available. However, I shall send to the hon. Member a pamphlet issued by UK NIREX Ltd. which identifies the main clay areas in the United Kingdom and the areas of search for sites based on clay which NIREX has considered.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will give his reaction to recommendations 6, 9, 12, 20, 23, 24, 25, 29, 30, 34, 35, 37, 39, 40 and 41 of the report of the Environment Committee on nuclear waste before laying any special development order.

Mr. Waldegrave: No. The Government are considering these recommendations and will respond in due course.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will list the institutions, laboratories and organisations at present producing low-level nuclear waste.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his reply, 14 May 1986, c. 492]: I shall arrange for a list to be placed in the Library of the House.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Envirionment if he will set out the collection procedures for low-level nuclear waste.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his answer, 14 May 1986, c. 492]: Certificates of registration issued under section 1 of the Radioactive Substances Act 1960 require that the user keeps records showing:

(i) the date upon which each registered substance was brought on to the premises.

(ii) the date on which each registered substance was removed from the premises, the address of the premises to which it was removed, and the name of the occupier of those premises.

(iii) the names of and the sum total of becquerels of all the specified radionuclides contained in each registered substance at the time it was brought on to the premises and at the time it was removed therefrom.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what instructions he has given to hospitals, universities and research laboratories on collection and safety procedures for low-level nuclear waste;

(2) what instructions he has given to hospitals, universities and research laboratories using the national disposal service at Harwell on low-level nuclear waste and its collection; and what kinds of waste may be disposed of through normal non-nuclear rubbish collection.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his reply, 14 May 1986, c. 492]: All authorities to dispose of radioactive waste are issued uner section 6 of the Radioactive Substances act 1960 and permission to store is given uner section 7. These authorisations are issued subject to conditions set out in the certificates, which vary depending on individual circumstances. Conditions for the disposal of waste through normal non-nuclear disposal routes are set out in paragraph 54 of the "Guide to the Administration of the Act". Her Majesty's Stationery Office 1982.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment when he proposes to introduce compacting of nuclear waste at Drigg; and what assessment he has made of the costs of this.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his reply, 14 May 1986, c. 492]: The Drigg site is operated by British Nuclear Fuels Ltd. under the terms of an authorisation issued by my Department and the Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food. BNFL is planning to compact wastes from Sellafield in 1987. The authorising Departments are reviewing the terms of the present authorisation.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how many institutions use the nuclear waste disposal service; what method of transport is used, and what are the annual costs of providing this service.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his reply, 14 May 1986, c. 492]: 169 institutions are currently authorised to use the national disposal service. Transport is almost entirely by road and the costs are borne by the user.

Royal Parks

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment how much his Department has received each year from the London Marathon Board since 1981 for net costs of additional works and facilities provided in the royal parks specifically for the marathon.

Mr. Tracey: Net costs are as follows:

1981	1,884
1982	681
1983	920
1984	474
1985	264
1986	*440

*still to be charged

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what was the income received from facility fees for the use of the royal parks in 1984-85 and 1985-86.

Mr. Tracey: Income received from facility fees (principally for filming) is as follows:

1984-85	23,450
1985-86	27,550

Housing (London)

Mr. Squire asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what assessment has been made of the balance between the number of dwellings in London and the number of households there; and if he will make a statement of the implications of this balance for planning policy in London.

Mr. Tracey: The 1981 population census indicated a numerical excess of dwellings compared with households in London, but such an excess is not necessarily a satisfactory indicator of absence of pressure of demand for housing in an area; correspondingly it does not imply that housing provision can now be given a low weight in London planning policy. Some dwellings are not actually available (being vacant and awaiting or undergoing repair and renovation, second homes and so on; and the census total of households does not include some potential households that would live separately if they could, or would be attracted to London if they could find accommodation there.

Okehampton Bypass

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment (1) what steps he intends to take to ensure the South-West water authority has access to all the information arising from the supplementary soil tests currently being conducted along the proposed route of the Okehampton bypass;

(2) following the letter of 26 March from the Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State, the hon. Member for Mitcham and Morden (Mrs Rumbold) to Lady Sayer, what consultations he intends to have with the South-West water authority on the possible contamination by arsenic of the rivers East and West Okement arising from the construction of the Okehampton bypass on the southern route;

(3) what consultations he had with the South-West water authority about the possible contamination of the rivers West and East Okement by metals, including arsenic, during the construction of the Okehampton bypass along the southern route;

(4) if he will publish the correspondence he has had with the South-West water authority on the subject of the metallic contamination of water courses in the vicinity of the southern route of the Okehampton bypass.

Mrs. Rumbold: I shall answer these questions shortly.

Anglian Water Authority

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is satisfied that the Anglian water authority has complied with its statutory obligations under the Water Resources Act 1963 in refusing to determine minimum flows for the river Wensum; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: Under the 1963 Act water authorities are required to consider for which inland waters minimum acceptable flows ought to be determined. My information is that the Anglian water authority has considered this matter in respect of the river Wensum.

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is satisfied that the Anglian water authority has complied with all its statutory consultation procedures in respect of the Costessey Intake Order 1985; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: My right hon. Friend made the Costessey intake order on 23 October 1985. Consequently, he is now functus officio in this matter. Any questions about compliance with statutory procedures would be for the courts to resolve.

Dr. David Clark asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he is satisfied that the Anglian water authority has complied with its statutory duty under the Wildlife and Countryside Act 1981 in serving notice of variation to abstraction licence 7/34/11/5/399; and if he will make a statement.

Mrs. Rumbold: A water authority is required to consult the Nature Conservancy Council before carrying out works or operations only if the council has notified it that the area affected is of special interest. I understand that in this case no such notification has been made.

Local Government Grant

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if, pursuant to his answer to the hon. Member for Hyndburn (Mr. Hargreaves) of 7 May, Official Report, columns 146-62, he will set out the means by which the calculation of the additional amount of recycled grant was arrived at for (a) Newham, (b) Croydon, (c) Ealing, (d) Barnet and (e) Hillingdon.

Mrs. Rumbold: The amount of recycled grant is the difference between the total of block grant payable under the settlement poundage schedule on the basis of latest estimates of local authority spending and the total available for block grant under the Rate Support Grant Report 1986-87. It is distributed to authorities through a reduction in the grant-related poundage (GRP) schedule.

Recycling £500 million block grant would reduce the national GRP by 8·12p and the GRP of the outer London boroughs by 6·36p. The underclaim of £628 million, estimated from local authority budgeted expenditures returned on BG/1986/87/12 forms, reduces the national GRP by 10·19p, and the GRP of the outer London boroughs by 7·97p.

To calculate an individual authority's entitlement to recycled grant, it is necessary to multiply the product of its rateable value and settlement multiplier by the reduction in the GRP for its class of authority. This applies to all authorities except those who are out of block grant and those in receipt of 100 per cent. grant. Hillingdon was in the former category at the settlement spending assumption.

Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he proposes to allow the Radioactive Waste Management Advisory Committee to commission independent research and build up its own independent secretariat.

Mr. Waldegrave: The Government are considering the Environment Committee's recommendation and will respond in due course.

Parking Fines

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if, pursuant to his reply of 12 May, Official Report, column 370, he will provide a breakdown of the parking paid on behalf of Government Departments.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: The information requested is as follows:

	Numbers
Scottish Office	167
Department of Energy	157
Welsh Office	34
Department of Employment	11
Cabinet Office	10
Department of Environment	7
Management and Personnel Office	7
Ministry of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food	6
National Audit Office	6
Foreign and Commonwealth Office	5
Department of Trade and Industry	5

Radiation

Mr. Crouch asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he will make public details of incidents involving the release of radioactivity.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: All incidents which are reported to the Radiochemical Inspectorate and which involve the release of radioactivity into the environment, however small, will be reported to Ministers at the Department of the Environment. All these will be published.

NATIONAL FINANCE

Job Creation

15. Mr. Terry Davis asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if, further to the statement of the right hon. Member for Norfolk, South (Mr. MacGregor) of 29 April, Official Report, column 818, he will give his latest estimate of the number of net new jobs created in the economy since June 1983.

Mr. Lawson: Almost one million.

Interest Rates

16. Mr. Pike asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a statement on the current levels of United Kingdom interest rates.

17. Mr. Forman asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a statement about the level of interest rates.

28. Mr. Latham asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he will make a statement on interest rates.

Dr. Twinn asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement about the current level of interest rates.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I refer the hon. Members to the answer my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer gave earlier today to my hon. Friend the Member for Sherwood (Mr. Stewart).

39. Mr. Sean Hughes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer to what causes he attributes the current real level of interest rates in the United Kingdom in comparison with those prevailing in the other Group of Five countries.

Mr. Ian Stewart: A number of factors influence the relative levels of real interest rates in different countries.

Public Sector Borrowing Requirement

18. Mr. Yeo asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest forecast for the public sector borrowing requirement for 1986-87.

Mr. MacGregor: The forecast is £7·1 billion, as published in the financial statement and Budget report.

Unemployment Costs

19. Mr. Clay asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his estimate of (a) the total cost and (b) the cost per person of unemployment for 1986-87.

Mr. MacGregor: The overall cost of unemployment and supplementary benefit paid to the unemployed is estimated to be £5·6 billion in 1986-87. In addition, it is estimated that £1·15 billion will be paid in housing benefit, a benefit which can continue to be paid if the recipient finds employment. Taken together these benefits average about £2,500 per head.

23. Mr. Frank Cook asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the cost to the Exchequer of the current level of unemployment.

Mr. MacGregor: The overall cost to the Exchequer of unemployment and supplementary benefit to the unemployed is estimated at £5·6 billion. In addition, it is estimated that £1·15 billion will be paid in housing benefit, a benefit which can continue to be paid if the claimant finds employment.

24. Mr. Marlow asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the cost of unemployment pay to single persons under the age of 25 years.

Mr. MacGregor: I regret that estimates of expenditure on this group of beneficiaries could be obtained only at disproportionate cost.

Company Taxation

20. Mr. Wrigglesworth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received concerning the effect of mergers and acquisitions on the criteria governing the liability to and incidence of company taxation.

Mr. Brooke: None.

Petrol Prices

21. Mr. Harris asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how petrol pump prices have moved since the Budget; and whether he will make a statement.

Mr. Lawson: Since the Budget petrol prices have fallen by more than 10p per gallon.

Value Added Tax

22. Mr. Heddle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has any plans to discuss the EEC sixth directive on value added tax with his European counterparts.

Mr. Brooke: Ministers of all member states regularly discuss aspects of the EC value added tax system.

14. Mr. Nicholas Brown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about automatic penalties for value added tax defaults, introduced in the Finance Act 1985.

Mr. Brooke: A number.

Raw Material (Costs)

25. Mr. Heathcoat-Amory asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the estimated benefit to industry of the fall in fuel and raw material costs over the past year.

Mr. Ian Stewart: In the year to April 1986, the prices of materials and fuel purchased by manufacturing industry fell by 9 per cent. This has resulted in substantial cost savings, and profits of non-North sea industrial and commercial companies are expected to show a further rise in 1986.

Third-World Debt

26. Mr. Skinner asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what recent discussions he has had with other Finance Ministers regarding Third-world debt; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer regularly meets his foreign counterparts and in recent weeks has attended the IMF interim committee meeting in Washington and the Tokyo economic summit which endorsed the current strategy towards international debt.

Opposition Parties (Policies)

27. Mr. Neil Hamilton asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether Her Majesty's Treasury has revised the figures given in the written answer given by the Chief Secretary to the hon. Member for Southampton, Itchen (Mr. Chope) on 3 March, Official Report, columns 29-30, concerning the cost of Opposition policies.

Mr. MacGregor: I wrote to the right hon. Member for Birmingham, Sparkbrook (Mr. Hattersley) on 12 March in response to a letter from him of 10 March. I accepted an amendment to increase the aid figure from £900 million to £1,133 million. I also accepted that there had been an overestimate in my original figure of £625 million on school buildings, maintenance and repair, which under Labour proposals should be phased more than I allowed for. I have had no response from the right hon. Member to my letter of 10 March on this or any other points in my original costing of the Labour programme. In the absence of such a response, the total of around £24 billion stands.

Privatisation

29. Mr. Dykes asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will make a statement on the progress of Her Majesty's Government's programme of privatisation of public sector corporations.

Mr. Moore: Since 1979, we have privatised 12 major businesses with over 400,000 employees. This represents over 20 per cent. of the state industrial sector we inherited in 1979. By the end of next year, the privatisations currently under preparation will have reduced state ownership of industry by almost half.

31. Mr. Lofthouse asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the cumulative revenue effects of the privatisation programme.

Mr. Moore: The privatisation programme affects Government finances in a number of ways. Privatisation proceeds offset public expenditure in the year in which they are received. There will be changes (in that year and subsequently) in the total net external finance of the nationalised industries; there may also be changes in the interest and dividend payments made to the Government. And, as the effects of privatisation feed through into company performance, there will be increases in receipts from direct and indirect taxation. It is not possible to estimate the net effect of these changes, as this would require knowledge of the way state-owned companies would have performed had they not been privatised.

World Debt

30. Mr. Sedgemore asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what proposals he made at the Tokyo summit to assist a resolution of the problems of world debt.

Mr. MacGregor: All those participating in the Tokyo summit endorsed the current approach to tackling international debt problems and welcomed the progress made in implementing the Baker initiative. This is reflected in the economic declaration which was agreed, in particular paragraphs 8 to 12.

1981 Budget Proposals

32. Mr. Nicholls asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has received any further representations from the 364 economists who wrote to his predecessor following the Budget five years ago.

Mr. MacGregor: No. Given the strong performance of the economy and the five and a half years of uninterrupted growth since then, it is not too surprising that we have received no such further representations.

Income Tax

33. Mr. Forth asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer by how much it would be necessary to increase the basic rate of income tax to finance an additional £1 billion of spending.

Mr. Moore: By about one penny.

46. Mr. Chapman asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has commissioned any studies into the reasons why an increasing proportion of income tax revenue is paid by the 10 per cent. of taxpayers with the highest incomes; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: The share of income tax borne by this group has increased as a result of the growth in real earnings encouraged by the Government's economic policies.

Mr. Frank Field asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the total amount of income tax collected from unemployed people for each year since 1982 in Great Britain.

Mr. Moore: I assume that the hon. Member has in mind the yield of income tax arising from taxation of benefits paid to unemployed people. The yield, since these benefits were brought within the charge to income tax, is now estimated to have been of the order of £600 million in each full year. These estimates are subject to a wide margin of error and may be revised in the light of further information from the survey of personal incomes.

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will publish the latest figures available on the gross income in pound sterling equivalent at which income tax on earned income becomes payable at 29 per cent. and 50 per cent. in the United Kingdom, the United States of America, France, Germany and Japan, for (a) a single person, (b) a single-wage married couple and (c) a single-wage couple with two children.

Mr. Moore: The information requested is given in the tables:

Table 1
Gross income in £ sterling at which income tax on employment income becomes payable at 29 per cent.

	Single person	Married couple	Married couple with two dependent children
United Kingdom	2,336	3,656	3,656
United States of America	9,285	14,900	16,260
		(30)	(28)
France	13,095	18,520	21,515
	(28)	(28)	(28·8)
Germany	6,640	12,920	14,030
Japan	14,700	14,700	16,510
	(29·7)	(29·7)	(29·7)

Table 2
Gross income in £ sterling at which income tax on employment income becomes payable at 50 per cent.

	Single person	Married couple	Married couple with two dependent children
United Kingdom	27,736	29,056	29,056
United States of America	25,240	53,365	54,110
	(48·4)	(51·05)	(51·05)
France	51,435	51,650	51,650
	(52)	(55)	(55)
Germany	15,670	30,970	32,090
Japan	32,770	33,630	35,340
	(52·25)	(52·25)	(52·25)

Note:

1. The figures relate to income of the year 1986 (1986-87 in the case of the United Kingdom) except for France where they relate to 1985, as France does not fix its 1986 rates until the end of the year.

2. Conversions to sterling were made at the purchasing power equivalent of sterling in November 1985 (the latest date for which we have figures). The purchasing power equivalents are calculated on the basis of updated OECD figures. Purchasing power parities give a better indication of real values than exchange rates as they are calculated by reference to prices of the same basket of commodities.

3. It is assumed that the income of the married couple is wholly employment income of the husband.

4. Personal reliefs (including child tax allowances, where given, but not child benefits) employment income reliefs and other standard reliefs have been taken into account, as well as income tax relief for social security contributions in certain countries.

5.(i) The rates of 30 per cent. and 50 per cent. in the tables are actual tax rates, that is, nominal rates adjusted where appropriate for the reliefs mentioned above.

(ii) Where the actual tax rate is never precisely 30 per cent. or 50 per cent., the rate applicable to the income level in the table is given in brackets.

6. The figures in the tables reflect national taxes and, where applicable (United States of America and Japan), local income taxes at typical rates. The inclusion of local income taxes gives a more appropriate comparison.

Inflation

34. Mr. Ashdown asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is (a) the United Kingdom's current year on year inflation rate and (b) the current average year on year inflation rate of countries in the European monetary system.

Mr. Ian Stewart: Over the 12 months to March 1986, the retail prices index increased by 4·2 per cent. The annual rates of consumer price inflation, using the latest OECD data available, for other countries in the European monetary system are:

	per cent.
Belgium	*1·5
Denmark	*1·7
Germany	*0·1
France	*3·0
Netherlands	*0·7
Ireland	†4·6
Italy	*7·2

* March 1986.
† Quarter to February 1986.

36. Mr. Robert B. Jones asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the latest estimate of inflation.

Mr. Ian Stewart: I refer my hon. Friend to the answer given today by my right hon. Friend the Chancellor of the Exchequer to my hon. Friend the Member for Berkshire, East (Mr. MacKay).

Balance of Payments

35. Mr. Evans asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what has been the effect on the balance of payments of the recent drop in oil revenues; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. MacGregor: The balance of trade in oil was £200 million higher in the first quarter of 1986 than in the previous quarter. If oil prices had been unchanged the balance of trade in oil would have been £½ billion higher. Lower oil prices will have reduced profits of foreign oil companies operating in the United Kingdom, thereby improving the IPD component of the invisible balance, but figures on this are not yet available.

OECD Countries (Economic Performance)

37. Mr. Jim Callaghan asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has about the current economic performance of the main organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development countries.

Mr. MacGregor: The communiqué issued following the OECD ministerial meeting on 17-18 April recording the conclusions and agreements reached by the Ministers starts off by noting:

"The overall economic situation in OECD countries is improving; and despite continuing concerns and difficulties, there are good grounds for confidence about the future".

A copy of the full text of the communiqué is available in the Library.

Governor of the Bank of England

38. Mr. Sheerman asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when was his most recent meeting with the Governor of the Bank of England; and what matters were discussed.

Mr. Ian Stewart: My right hon. Friend the Chancellor meets the Governor regularly to discuss a wide range of matters, but it is not the practice to disclose them.

Profit-sharing Schemes

40. Mr. Kenneth Carlisle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer how many companies now operate Treasury approved profit-sharing schemes.

Mr. Moore: A total of 1,063 all-employee share schemes have been approved by the Inland Revenue. Five hundred and forty are profit-sharing schemes and 523 are savings-related share option schemes. Some companies have established both types of scheme.

Share Ownership

41. Mr. Fallon asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is his latest estimate of the extent of personal share ownership.

Mr. Moore: A recent survey commissioned by the Office of Population, Censuses and Surveys on behalf of the Treasury and conducted by NOP Market Research Limited indicated that about 14 per cent. of adults (6 million) in Great Britain own shares. The survey was conducted between 12 February and 10 March 1986. Over 7,000 interviews were carried out with adults aged 16 years and above, who were selected according to a systematic probability sample designed to be representative of all adults in Great Britain.

The British Market Research Bureau's regular target group index survey of 24,000 adults aged 16 and over found that, in 1978-79, around 7 per cent. of the adult population owned shares. These surveys suggest, therefore, that the number of shareholders has roughly doubled since 1979.

Economic Management

42. Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what he regards as the priority objectives in managing the economy.

Mr. MacGregor: The objectives of economic policy are set out in the medium term financial strategy, updated in the 1986-87 financial statement and budget report.

Budget Strategy (Oil Prices)

43. Mr. Nellist asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what assessment he makes of the impact of the present level of oil prices on his Budget announcements.

Mr. MacGregor: My right hon. Friend's budget strategy allowed for the possibility of short-term fluctuations in oil prices.

Funds (Income Accumulation)

44. Mr. John Mark Taylor asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received about possible adverse effect on accumulations by the trustees of smaller funds of his recent incentives to charities.

Mr. Moore: We have received a number of representations that the Budget proposals to prevent abuse of charity tax reliefs may cause difficulty for some bona fide charities. As my hon. Friend the Economic Secretary said on 6 May 1986, at column 81, we fully recognise the questions that have been raised; we are considering them most carefully, and we will respond to them during the passage of the Finance Bill.

Part-time Study (Tax Deductible Costs)

45. Mr. Greenway asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received in support of making fees and other costs involved as a consequence of part-time study tax deductible; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Moore: This is one matter among many raised in representations from time to time.

Channel Tunnel

47. Mr. Evennett asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what discussions his Department has held concerning customs control arrangements for the Channel fixed link.

Mr. Brooke: Customs and Excise has held wide-ranging discussions wih the promoters of the Channel fixed link and with other interested Government Departments on all aspects of control requirements and visits have been made with the promoters to Dover to study the practical arrangements for control of various types of cross-Channel traffic. Discussions are continuing, including consultation with British Rail on the procedures for the control of through rail traffic using the fixed link. There has also been initial discussion with French officials concerning the operation of juxtaposed customs controls which will require, for example, certain United Kingdom inward controls to be located in the French terminal.

Single European Act

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what information he has as to the proportion of total Government revenue in each European Economic Community state which is represented by receipts from the taxes and duties mentioned in the articles of the European Economic Community Single European Act.

Mr. Brooke: The latest available information relates to 1983, and shows indirect taxes on goods and services as a percentage of total taxation:

	per cent.
Belgium	26·3
Denmark	35·8
France	29·0
Germany	27·5
Greece*	43·3
Ireland	46·0
Italy	23·4
Luxembourg	23·7
Netherlands	24·1
Portugal*	43·8
Spain*	24·0
United Kingdom	29·7

Source: Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development.
* Greece, Portugal and Spain did not operate value added tax in 1983.

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give, for each form of indirect tax and excise duty mentioned in the European Economic Community Single European Act, the United Kingdom rates of tax or duty, the yield from each such tax or duty and the proportion of total Government revenue represented by receipts from such taxes and duties.

Mr. Brooke: The Single European Act refers to "turnover taxes, excise duties and other forms of indirect taxation". The relevant indirect taxes in the United Kingdom are value added tax, car tax and the excise duties on hydrocarbon oils, tobacco products and alcoholic drinks. The current rates of tax or duty, the latest estimate of revenue yield for 1985-86 and the proportion of Government revenue represented by these taxes and duties are as follows:

Tax/duty	Rate(s)	Yield in 1985-86* £ million	Yield as a proportion of Government revenue*† Per cent.
(a) Value added tax	15 per cent., 0 per cent.	19,300	18·2
(b) Car tax	10 per cent.	880	0·8
(c) Excise duties on:
(i) Hydrocarbon oils:
light oils (except AVGAS)	19·38p per litre	6,500	6·1
derv	16·39p per litre
gas oil	1·10p per litre
AVGAS and road fuel gas	9·69p per litre
(ii) Tobacco products:
cigarettes	£30·61 per 1,000 plus 21 per cent. of retail price	4,300	4·1
hand rolling tobacco	£49·64 per kg
cigars	£47·05 per kg
other smoking and chewing tobacco	£24·95 per kg
(iii) Alcoholic drinks:
spirits	£15·77 per litre	4,200	4·0
beer	£25·80 per hectolitre of beer at 1030° gravity plus £0·86 for every degree in excess of 1030°

over 15 per cent. and up to 18 per cent.	£169·00 per hectolitre
over 18 per cent. and up to 22 per cent.	£194·00 per hectolitre

* Provisional figures.
† Consolidated fund revenue.

Stamp Duty

Mr. Heddle asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer whether he has any plans to review the provisions of section 57 of the Stamp Duty Act 1891; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ian Stewart: No; but if my hon. Friend has a particular case in mind and will send me details I will look into it.

European Monetary System

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he has published any assessment of the advantages to the United Kingdom of joining the exchange rate mechanism of the European monetary system.

Mr. Ian Stewart: A memorandum was submitted by Her Majesty's Treasury to the Treasury and Civil Service Committee during the course of its inquiry into the financial and economic consequences of United Kingdom membership of the European Communities 13th report, Session 1984-85, Volume II).

North Sea Oil

Mr. Kennedy asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from oil companies about the implications of his Budget statement and of the recent fall in oil prices for the rate of incremental investment in North sea oil production.

Mr. Moore: Two letters have been received which refer to the implications for incremental investment of the recent fall in oil prices.

Income Tax and National Insurance

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer if he will give the total revenue obtained from income tax plus national insurance contributions together in each year since 1978-79 at current and at constant 1978-79 prices.

Mr. Moore: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Public Expenditure

Mr. Ralph Howell asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the average amount by which public expenditure has exceeded the amount spent in 1978-79, in each year from 1979-80, in actual and real terms and as a percentage of 1978-79 figures.

Mr. MacGregor: I shall let my hon. Friend have a reply as soon as possible.

Economic Costs and Changing Prices (Report)

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer why the report to the Treasury by an advisory group, accounting for economic costs and changing prices, completed in March 1986, has not been published.

Mr. MacGregor [pursuant to his reply, 12 May 1986, c. 349-50]: This substantial report on accounting in nationalised industries was completed at the end of March. It is being considered by Ministers, and will be published in due course.

Written Answers to Questions

Friday 16 May 1986

DEFENCE

Small Arms Supplies

Mrs. Ann Winterton asked the Secretary of State for Defence what information he has concerning the total value of anticipated orders for small arms supplies to be placed with United Kingdom suppliers in the present year; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Lee: It has been decided to place contracts on Royal Ordnance plc in respect of our outstanding requirements in 1986-87 for 5·56 mm and 7·62 mm ammunition. The ammunition will be produced at Royal Ordnance plc's factory at Radway Green and the value of the contracts will be about £35 million. This is additional to orders already placed with the factory. Discussions are continuing with the company concerning requirements for the two subsequent years.

PRIME MINISTER

Nurses (Pay)

Mr. Pavitt asked the Prime Minister if she expects to announce her decision on the pay award to nurses which was due for payment as from 1 April before the Whitsun recess.

The Prime Minister: An announcement will be made in due course.

Ministerial Responsibilities

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Prime Minister which Ministers in the Scottish, Welsh and Northern Ireland Offices were undertaking ministerial responsibilities, in Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, respectively, at midnight on 14 April.

The Prime Minister: My hon. Friend the Parliamentary Under-Secretary at the Northern Ireland Office the hon. Member for Peterborough (Dr. Mawhinney) was duty Minister in Northern Ireland on the night of 14-15 April. Similar arrangements do not apply in the Scottish and Welsh Offices.

Cyprus

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she will make a statement following her meeting with the Greek Cypriot leader, President Kyprianou, on the Greek Cypriot response to the present United Nations initiative for a settlement in Cyprus.

The Prime Minister: On my meeting with President Kyprianou, I have nothing to add to the answer given by my right hon. and noble Friend the Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Affairs in another place on 8 May. Meanwhile the UN Secretary General, with whom I discussed Cyprus on 14 May, is actively pursuing his initiative, which we continue strongly to support. I do not believe it would be helpful to comment on progress in the negotiations at this stage.

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Prime Minister if she has any plans to meet the Turkish Cypriot leader, Mr. Rauf Denktash, to discuss the favourable response by the Turkish Cypriot leadership to the present United Nations initiative for a settlement on Cyprus.

The Prime Minister: No. Mr. Denktash is kept fully in touch with our views through our High Commission in Nicosia.

Libya (American Raid)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Prime Minister what weight was given to the bombing of the discotheque in Berlin in her decision to authorise the use of British bases to bomb Libya.

The Prime Minister: The Government's decision was made in the light of clear evidence of the Libyan state's complicity in terrorist activity. Evidence of Libya's role in the Berlin bombing was one factor of that decision.

Dr. Kurt Waldeheim

Mr. Greville Janner asked the Prime Minister why the following documents are missing from the Public Record Office, namely, JIC (42) 507(0), JIC (43) 285(0) 3 August 1943, DEFE 3/573, CX/MSS 1250/T13, 1350/T2, 1588 Para 29, CX/MSS 1421 Para 46, 1477 Para 33, 1986 Para 46; whether any of these documents refer, directly or indirectly, to Dr. Kurt Waldheim or to German Army group E; and whether she will make copies of these documents available to the hon. and learned Gentleman for Leicester, West.

The Prime Minister: I shall reply to the hon. and learned Gentleman shortly.

NORTHERN IRELAND

Extradition

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland how many persons have been extradited from the Republic of Ireland to Northern Ireland in the six months ended 15 May.

Mr. Scott: One.

Fatalities

Mr. John David Taylor asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland what is the total number of deaths due to terrorist and paramilitary activity in Northern Ireland during the six months since 15 November 1985.

Mr. Scott: I shall reply to the right hon. Gentleman as soon as possible.

Royal Ulster Constabulary

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for Northern Ireland if he will make a statement on the general trend in the levels of numbers of serving members of the Royal Ulster Constabulary about whom recruitment inquiries have been made by police forces in Great Britain in the past three years.

Mr. Scott [pursuant to his reply, 13 May 1986, c. 425]: Detailed statistics on the number of recruitment inquiries received from GB forces about Royal Ulster Constabulary officers are not available prior to 1 January 1986 and could be obtained only at disproportionate cost. From 1 January to 2 May 1986 the number of recruitment inquiries from GB forces in respect of Royal Ulster Constabulary officers was 43.

EDUCATION AND SCIENCE

Education Statistics

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is his estimate, for each year from 1970 to 2000, of the number of young people reaching or projected to reach (a) minimum school-leaving age and (b) the age of one, two, and three years after minimum school-leaving age and, in each case, his estimate of the number known or expected to come onto the labour market in each year, separating all answers into male and female.

Mr. Dunn: I shall write to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

University Grants Committee

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science if he will arrange for copies of the University Grants Committee letters to universities and to specific universities and any appendices to those letters to be sent out in the next three weeks to be placed in the Library as soon as those letters are sent.

Mr. Walden: I refer the hon. Gentleman to the reply I gave to the hon. Member for Wrexham (Dr. Marek) on 15 May at column 515.

Mr. Jonathan Savery

Mr. Michael Cocks asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what discussions he has had about the case of Mr. Jonathan Savery with the Avon local education authority.

Mr. Dunn: A formal hearing into the charges made against Mr. Savery is being held today. The authority has been asked to inform the Department of its outcome. In the circumstances it would not be appropriate to comment further on the case.

General Certificate of Secondary Education

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what representations he has had from local education authorities and from teachers' unions about the need to provide extra funds to purchase books for this autumn for the new general certificate of secondary education courses.

Mr. Dunn: My right hon. Friend discussed the costs of, and planning for, the GCSE with the local authority associations on 30 April and has held meetings with the NUT and the NAHT. My right hon. Friend has indicated that he stands ready to meet all the teachers' associations to discuss these issues. Meetings will be held shortly with the PAT and the NAS/UWT. In addition, since the beginning of this year my right hon. Friend has received letters from 12 local education authorities which refer to the provision of additional resources for books.

Mr. Andrew F. Bennett asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what estimates he has of the cost per pupil for local education authorities of providing new books for the general certificate of secondary education courses this autumn: how much extra he has allocated per pupil for this purpose; and if he will now make extra funds available.

Mr. Dunn: It is not possible to estimate precisely, for each local education authority, the cost of providing new books for the GCSE. Demand will vary from school to school in the light of existing stocks and the individual GCSE syllabus in each subject which teachers have chosen to follow. The Department is discussing these and other matters connected with the introduction of the GCSE with the teachers' associations. These discussions will be taken into account in our consideration with the local authority associations of local authority expenditure on education generally and including the GCSE. Under the education support grant programme, as announced by my right hon. Friend on 12 May at columns 325-28, we propose to devote £20 million to the provision of books and equipment for the GCSE as a contribution to local authority expenditure in this area. This would amount to an average of £5,000 per secondary school over two years.

Teachers (Pay)

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what are teachers' salaries at all levels following the interim rise; what were the comparable figures in 1979; and what percentage increase over 1979 levels in real terms the 1986 interim award represents at all levels.

Sir Keith Joseph: The attached table shows teachers' salaries at the minimum and maximum of each scale:

£ per annum

	Scale 1	Scale 2	Scale 3	Scale 4	Senior teacher	*Deputy head	Head teacher
(i) 1 April 1979
Minimum	3,231	3,714	4,590	5,463	5,838	4,041	5,637
Maximum	5,082‡	5,652‡	6,495	7,218	7,722	9,462	12,585
(ii) 1 April 1979 at 1 April 1986 prices (adjusted by the RPI)
Minimum	5,822	6,693	8,271	9,845	10,520	7,282	10,158
Maximum	9,158	10,185	11,704	13,007	13,915	17,051	22,679
(iii) 1 April 1986

	Scale 1	Scale 2	Scale 3	Scale 4	Senior teacher	*Deputy head	Head teacher

Maximum	9,804‡	10,986‡	12,627	14,151	15,330	19,104	26,259
(iv) The percentage real increase between 1 April 1979 and 1 April 1986 (iii) over (ii)
Minimum	+10·3	+9·1	+7·7	+7·0	+7·9	+8·6	+7·9
Maximum	+7·1	+7·9	+7·9	+8·8	+10·2	+12·0	+15·8

Notes:
(i) 1 April 1979 in cash terms.
(ii) 1 April 1979 at 1 April 1986 prices (adjusted by the RPI).
(iii) 1 April 1986 including the pay rise agreed on 9 May 1986.
(iv) The percentage real increase between 1 April 1979 and 1 April 1986 ((iii) over (ii)).

Mr. Greenway asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science what is the average teacher's salary following the 1 April interim award; what was the comparable figure in 1979 in real and money terms; and if he will make a statement.

Sir Keith Joseph: The average annual salary of full-time teachers in maintained primary and secondary schools in England and Wales following the 1 April 1986 payment is estimated to be £10,500. The average salary of teachers at 1 April 1979 was £5,400 or £9,731 at 1 April 1986 prices (adjusted by the RPI). These figures exclude all allowances.

Llandough Hospital (Pneumoconiosis Research Unit)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Education and Science where research work previously done at the pneumoconiosis research unit at Llandough hospital is now being done since the closure of that unit.

Mr. Walden: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

TRADE AND INDUSTRY

Copyright

Mr. Fisher asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1) when Her Majesty's Government intend to ratify the Paris text of the Berne convention;

(2) if he will introduce legislation to incorporate into United Kingdom law the provisions of article 9 of the Paris text of the Berne convention, in so far as it relates to copyright protection for visual artists and photographers; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Pattie: The requirements of article 9 of the Paris text of the Berne convention, so far as they relate to visual artists and photographers, are met by section 3 of the Copyright Act 1956. There are, however, a number of changes which will need to be made to other parts of our law before the Government can ratify the Paris text. The Government intend to make these changes as part of the general reform of copyright law proposed in the White Paper "Intellectual Property and Innovation", Cmnd. 9712. The necessary legislation will be introduced as soon as the parliamentary timetable permits and ratification of the Paris text will follow.

Newspaper Wholesaling

Mr. Robert B. Jones asked the Secretary of State for Trade and industry if he will make a statement on the Director-General of Fair Trading's review of newspaper wholesaling, published on 14 May.

Mr. Howard: I welcome the publication of this timely review of newspaper wholesaling. Both I and the Director-General of Fair Trading have for some time been concerned about features of the market, in particular the refusal to supply newspapers to certain retailers with its effect on small shopkeepers and new businesses.

The Director-General has made some constructive proposals for further action which will involve discussions with interested parties. I hope that all sectors of the trade will give him their fullest co-operation and that the outcome of this review will help to remedy the grievances which exist at present.

Travel-to-Work Areas

Mr. Michael Forsyth asked the Secretary of State for Trade and Industry what magnitude of error in the employment census returns for a travel-to-work area would be regarded by his Department as sufficient to determine that that area should be included in the assisted area map, despite an original decision, based on the faulty returns, not to do so; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Butcher [pursuant to his reply, 15 May 1986, c. 502]: Although relative annual average unemployment was the main criterion used for assessing an area's need for assisted area status, a number of other factors were also taken into account. Any corrected unemployment rate would, therefore, have to be related to those other factors. The errors which have been discovered would not justify amendments to the assisted areas map introduced in November 1984.

HOME DEPARTMENT

Prison Officers

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will list the work now taking place on empty prison officers' quarters at Wandsworth prison; what is the cost of this work; and if money has already been allocated for all work to be done.

Mr. Mellor: Rewiring vacant quarters at a cost of £2,250 has begun; funds have been allocated for future work.

Motoring Offences

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many motorists in the Metropolitan police area were (a) cautioned for exceeding the speed limit under section 89 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984 and (b) convicted for exceeding the speed limit for each year since 1976.

Mr. Mellor: The readily available information relates to written warnings and findings of guilt for all speed limit offences and is published annually by police force area in "Offences Relating to Motor Vehicles, England and Wales, Supplementary Tables" (tables 18 and 19 of the issue for 1984). In 1983 and 1984 there were, respectively, about 1,300 and 900 written warnings and about 24,500 and 32,700 findings of guilt for these offences in the Metropolitan police district. Of the latter, about 24,300 and 31,700 respectively were for speeding offences which the police would normally prosecute under section 89 of the Road Traffic Regulation Act 1984, or equivalent earlier legislation (that is offences not involving speed limits for special types of vehicle or speeding on motorways). Earlier figures for findings of guilt under section 89 could be provided only at disproportionate cost.

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department (1) how many motorists were convicted of (a) driving or attempting to drive when unfit through drink or drugs under section 5(1) of the Road Traffic Act 1972 and (b) driving or attempting to drive with blood alcohol concentrations above the prescribed limit under section 6(1) of the Road Traffic Act 1972 in the Metropolitan police area for the last 10 years;

(2) how many (a) screening breath tests and (b) evidential breath tests were given by the specialist traffic police and by divisional officers, respectively, for the most recent 10-year period or any convenient period in the Metropolitan police area;

(3) how many motorists in the Metropolitan police area were given (a) screening breath tests and (b) evidential breath tests; and what was the number of subsequent convictions for the last 10 years including the most recent year available.

Mr. Mellor: The latest available information is given in the table; that shown as not readily available could be provided only at disproportionate cost. The statistics on screening breath tests and evidential tests cannot be compared directly with those on court proceedings because they are obtained from separate collections which are not subsequently reconciled. Information on the functional status of the police officers administering screening or evidential breath tests is not available.

Violent Crime

Mr. Ron Davies asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what information he has as to the extent to which statistically either the perpetrators or the victims of crimes of violence against the person are under the influence of alcohol at the time of the offence in question; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Mellor: No statistics are collected on the consumption of alcohol by violent offenders or their victims. Research suggests that the relationship between alcohol and crime is very complex.

Mr. Pike asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if his Department has any plans to conduct further research into the effects of the fear of crime.

Mr. Mellor: Findings from the British crime survey on fear of crime have been published in Home Office research studies and two further reports, commissioned from outside researchers, are awaited. Further research is under consideration.

Victims Support Scheme

Mr. Tony Lloyd asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he make a statement on the priorities of the victims support scheme.

Mr. Mellor: The victims support movement does valuable work as a voluntary service providing practical and emotional support to the victims of crime. The determination of priorities must be a matter for the movement itself, in consultation with the police and other services with which local schemes are closely involved. The Government will continue to encourage victims support by providing financial assistance to the National Association of Victims Support Schemes and, under various central Government programmes, to some local schemes.

Drug Abuse

Mr. Nicholas Brown asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if funding for new police units to combat drug abuse will have to be found by police authorities from existing resources.

Mr. Giles Shaw: Yes. The rate support grant settlement for 1986-87 takes account of additional expenditure required for the deployment of 240 officers in drugs wings in England and Wales.

Wandsworth Prison

Mr. Tom Cox asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what action he proposes to take in the light of the 1985 annual report by the board of visitors at Wandsworth prison in relation to conditions in the prison.

Mr. Mellor: My noble Friend will shortly write to the chairman of the board of visitors indicating how the matters of concern to the board are being followed up.

A303 (Cruise Missile Convoy)

Mr. Soley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department what progress has been made in the police investigation of the incident on Wednesday 7 May at countess roundabout on the A303 when an unidentified liquid was allegedly squirted at members of the public from the vehicles of a cruise missile convoy.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the chief constable of Wiltshire that he is investigating allegations from six members of the public. Articles of their clothing are being sent for forensic examination. The investigation is still in its early stages.

Metropolitan Police (Air Surveillance)

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will detail the occasions on which the hele-tele surveillance camera has been used by the Metropolitan police since December 1985; and what was the cost of its use on each occasion.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I understand from the Commissioner of Police of the Metropolis that the hele-tele surveillance camera was used 11 times between 1 January and 12 May 1986 for the following purposes:

(a) to assist security operations connected with the Royal visit of the King of Spain;
(b) to assist with traffic control at major sporting events, including the FA and Rugby League cup finals; and
(c) to assist with the command and control of police officers at demonstrations and marches.

Separate costs for the use of this equipment are not available.

Metropolitan Police (Weapons)

Mr. Chris Smith asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether the Metropolitan police have purchased any of the following weapons from the Trebor Corporation of America: stun gun, stun burst and stinger 37; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Giles Shaw: No.

Leicester (Visit)

Mr. Peter Bruinvels asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will report on his visit to Leicester on Friday 9 May.

Mr. Hurd: During my visit I had discussions with the chief constable and some of his officers, in particular about the policing of inner city areas. Later I visited the Wesley hall community project and the central west area further education office where I discussed a range of subjects with members of the local community. I also visited the Anchor club—a club for ex-offenders—and undertook various party functions.

Community Radio (Wales)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department when he will be in a position to announce the grants of franchises for community radio stations in Wales.

Mr. Giles Shaw: I refer the hon. Member to the reply given to questions from my hon. Friend the Member for Rutland and Melton (Mr. Latham) and the hon. Member for Sunderland, North (Mr. Clay) on 6 May 1986 at column 19.

Magistrates' Courts (Wales)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department how many cases were heard (a) entirely through the medium of the Welsh language and (b) partly through the medium of the Welsh language in each of the magistrates' courts of Wales in each year since 1967.

Mr. Mellor: By virtue of the Welsh Language Act 1967, the Welsh language may be used in courts in Wales by any party, witness or person who desires to use it. There is no requirement for statistical records to be kept of such use, and the information requested is therefore not available.

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department which of the chief clerks to the magistrates' courts in Wales have a sufficient command of the Welsh language to be able to conduct their business through the medium of that language.

Mr. Mellor: This information is not maintained centrally.

Gwent Passport Office

Mr. Speller asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department if he will take steps to ensure that the telephone at the Gwent passport office is promptly answered; what have been the causes of recent delays in answering calls from members of the public; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Waddington: The telephone inquiry points at the Newport passport office are fully manned. However, the office is having to deal with an abnormal number of telephone inquiries about delays in dealing with postal passport applications. These delays arise from increased demand, recent disruption of postal services in south Wales and the residual effects of industrial action in passport offices earlier this year. Steps are being taken to reduce the backlog of postal applications as quickly as possible. This will reduce the number of telephone inquiries and should ensure that callers receive the normal prompt response.

British Overseas Citizens

Mr. Teddy Taylor asked the Secretary of State for the Home Department whether he has anything to add to the statement he made to the House on 13 May about the numbers of British overseas citizens throughout the world.

Mr. Hurd: I very much regret that a mistake was made in the information that I gave to the House. The number of British overseas citizens throughout the world is, as I suggested, probably about two million, but I was misinformed about the percentage who possess only that form of citizenship. The figure is probably something over 200,000, and not about 800,000. I apologise for having unwittingly misled the House by giving the latter figure.

WALES

Low-flying Aircraft

Mr. D. E. Thomas asked the Secretary of State for Wales if his Department has any plans to carry out research into the effects of low-flying aircraft on livestock.

Mr. Nicholas Edwards: There are no such plans.

Tourism

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what is the estimated effect on the Welsh tourist industry of the drop in numbers of United States tourists to Wales during the last few weeks in financial terms.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: This information is not available. I am however, well aware of the reports of cancellations from North America not just to Wales but to the whole of the United Kingdom. Steps have been taken to reassure Americans that the United Kingdom is a safe place to visit.

GCSE (Representations)

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Wales what representations his Department has received concerning the introduction of the general certificate of secondary education examination in Wales; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Wyn Roberts: Representations have been received from 18 Members of Parliament, three county councils, one local education authority, the Local Authorities Committee of the WJEC, the Assistant Masters and Mistresses Association, two county groups of secondary headteachers, a county branch of the National Association of Schoolmasters/Union of Woman Teachers, the governing bodies of 18 secondary schools, a federation of parent-teacher associations, 13 individual parent-teacher associations, nine heads of school departments, two teachers, three school associations, one school governor, the Welsh SDP conference and 146 individuals, all requesting postponement.

ENERGY

Oil Extraction

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Energy if there are any oilfields currently being exploited where there is a risk of premature abandonment or a likelihood of insufficient or discontinued investment leading to reduced levels of oil recovery.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: No well can be abandoned without the Secretary of State's consent. This consent will not be given so long as recovery remains economic and is not contrary to good oilfield practice. There must be a risk that a sustained period of low oil prices will bring forward the date at which production from some wells becomes uneconomic, but I have received no proposals to cease production for this reason and have no grounds at present for believing that planned ultimate recovery from currently producing fields will be affected by insufficient investment.

Mr. Hardy asked the Secretary of State for Energy what steps he is taking to ensure that adequate priority is given to the maximum attainable level of oil extraction from off shore fields now in the course of exploitation or development.

Mr. Buchanan-Smith: The Government's policy continues to be to achieve maximum economic recovery of petroleum reserves, subject to good oilfield practice. All development plans have to meet these criteria before they are approved; fields in production are monitored regularly to ensure production is in accordance with good oilfield practice.

Severn Barrage

Mr. Roy Hughes asked the Secretary of State for Energy when he received the report of the feasibility study into the proposed Severn barrage scheme; what information he has as to the proposed publication date; and if he will take steps to publicise the findings.

Mr. David Hunt: I refer to the reply given to my hon. Friend the Member for Wells (Mr. Heathcoat-Amory) on 12 May at column 333.

Atomic Reactors (Explosions)

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for Energy whether the Government have contingency plans for using the armed services to assist in smothering an atomic reactor in the event of a nuclear explosion causing pollution of the atmosphere; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Goodlad: The Health and Safety Executive's booklet "Emergency Plans for Civil Nuclear Installations" outlines the flexible contingency plans which have been drawn up and regularly tested to respond to any emergency at a United Kingdom civil nuclear installation. The arrangements have been designed to be capable of extension in the remote possibility of a serious accident. In these circumstances the part that might best be played by all the resources of Government, including those of the armed services would be considered as necessary.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Welsh Courts

Mr. Wigley asked the Attorney-General which of the chief clerks to the county courts of Wales have sufficient command of the Welsh language to be able to conduct their business through the medium of that language.

The Attorney-General: The Chief Clerks of Carmathen, Haverford West, Llangefni, Porthmadog and Swansea County Courts are able to conduct the business of their courts in Welsh.

Mr. Wigley asked the Attorney-General what are the criteria used in appointing interpreters (Welsh/English) in the Welsh courts.

The Attorney-General: Interpreters are selected on the basis of tested ability to provide rapid and accurate simultaneous translation from and into Welsh and English with particular reference to the special requirements of legal proceedings.

Trials (Statistics)

Mr. McNamara asked the Attorney-General if he will publish in the Official Report the number of persons tried, acquitted or convicted following trials (a) in which the evidence of a former accomplice was given on behalf of the Crown or (b) on the basis of their statements of admission made after inquiries based on the evidence of a former accomplice.

The Attorney-General: The information requested by the hon. Member is not centrally recorded and could be obtained only at disproportionate expense to the taxpayer.

Thomas Quigley and Paul Kavanagh

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Attorney-General why, when deciding want charges to make against Thomas Quigley and Paul Kavanagh in relation to terrorist activities, he did not charge them with treason.

The Attorney-General: The charges preferred against Thomas Quigley and Paul Kavanagh were those which were considered most appropriate in the light of the known facts and the nature of the conduct alleged of them.

Terrorism

Mr. Kilroy-Silk asked the Attorney-General if he will list all those who have been prosecuted for offences relating to terrorist incidents in Great Britain since 1983.

The Attorney-General: Prosecutions for offences arising out of terrorist incidents are not centrally recorded. However, I have arranged for the Director of Public Prosecutions to prepare a list of the main terrorist cases conducted by his Department since 1983 and will forward it to the hon. Member.

SCOTLAND

Homeless Persons

Mr. Maxton asked the Secretary of State for Scotland if he will produce four tables of information relating to Scottish applications under the Housing (Homeless Persons) Act 1977 for 1984-85 in a form similar to that published on pages 42-44 of "Scottish Housing Statistics 1984".

Mr. Ancram: The information requested is set out below. The figures are provisional and subject to change. The form of the tables reflects changes, effective from 1 April 1984, in the information collection system.

THE ARTS

British Library

Mr. Hardy asked the Minister for the Arts how many books were loaned by the British Library to local authority library services in each of the last four years; and how many were loaned in the first quarter of 1986.

Mr. Luce: The table shows the number of books loaned by the British Library document supply centre to local authority libraries for the period requested:

	Number
1982	92,083
1983	101,529

	Number
1984	106,070
1985	118,285

Benefits

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will set out for each social security benefit the rules governing recipients who wish to take a holiday (a) in the United Kingdom and (b) abroad, stating in each case the period for which the benefit may continue to be drawn.

Mr. Major: Legislation does not specifically provide for holidays, but temporary absence from home is permitted as follows.

Benefit	In the United Kingdom	Abroad
Sickness Benefit and Invalidity Benefit	No restriction	Persons who have been incapacitated for at least 6 months may receive Benefit, during temporary absence, normally not exceeding three months.
Severe Disablement allowance	No restriction
Maternity Allowance	No restriction	Not payable
Maternity Grant	No restriction	Not payable
Unemployment Benefit	Payable subject to continued availability for employment. Not normally more than two weeks	Not payable
Industrial Injuries Benefits	No restriction	No restriction
Attendance Allowance	No restriction	Not more than 26 continuous weeks
Invalid Care Allowance	No restriction if still caring for a person receiving Attendance Allowance for Constant Attendance Allowance, otherwise not more than four weeks	Not more than four weeks, except when absence is for purpose of caring for a person receiving Attendance Allowance or Constant Attendance Allowance while absent. In such cases ICA is payable for the period of absence.
Mobility Allowance	No restriction	Not more than 26 weeks
Retirement Pension and Widows Pension	No restriction	No restriction
Christmas Bonus	I refer the hon. Member to my reply to her on 15 May at column 530.	As for United Kingdom
Child Benefit and One Parent Benefit	No restriction	Not more than eight weeks
Child's Special Allowance and Guardian's Allowance	No restriction	Normally not more than eight weeks
Family Income Supplement	No restriction	No restriction
Supplementary Benefit	1. For recipients who are required to be available for work, the rules are the same as those for Unemployment Benefit. 2. For other recipients there is no restriction but benefit may be reviewed after 13 weeks.	1. Benefit is not payable for recipients who are required to be available for work. 2. For other recipients benefit is payable for not more than four weeks, except for some recipients claiming because of sickness or disability. These are entitled to benefit only if they have been sick or disabled for six months before departure or are going for the specific purpose of being treated for their illness or incapacity.
Housing Benefit	Standard Housing Benefit is payable for up to one year. Certificated Housing Benefit will cease when payment of the qualifying Supplementary Benefit ceases, and will normally be followed by Standard Housing Benefit. The claimant must intend to return and live in the home and must not let or sub-let it.	Housing Benefit is payable for up to one year under the same conditions as in the United Kingdom.

Note: There are provisions in European Community legislation which permit payment of benefits to EC nationals who go temporarily to another EC country, but as those are designed primarily for persons moving between member countries in connection with their work they would not normally apply to persons going on holiday. Similar provisions which exist in Reciprocal Agreements with a number of countries would again not normally apply to holiday absences.

Limited List Prescribing

Mr. Tim Smith asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make it his policy in relation to the limited list to ensure that general practioners may use brand name of a drug in lieu of the generic form when the manufacturer of that drug agrees to supply it to the National Health Service at the prevailing drug tariff price.

Mr. Hayhoe: I will consider this suggestion as part of the review to which I referred in my reply to my hon. Friend on 9 April at columns 121-22.

Advisory Committees

Mr. Pavitt asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will list in the Official Report the names of his expert advisory committees, the scope of their remits, together with an indication of those in respect of which the members are required to sign a declaration under the Official Secrets Acts.

Mr. Hayhoe: The names of my expert advisory committees which are classified as non-departmental public bodies are given on pages 36-38 of the MPO publication "Public Bodies 1985" published by HMSO ISBN 0 11 430008 9., a copy of which is available in the Library. A list of other advisory committees, not included in that publication, is given in the table. The Official Secrets Act applies to all official information whether or not a declaration has been signed. The Department does not normally call for a declaration to be made by members of advisory committees but it is generally the practice to make it clear, in letters appointing members to advisory committees, that the Official Secrets Act will apply.

Expert Advisory Committees not listed in "Public Bodies 1985"

1. Advisory Committee on Dangerous Pathogens
2. Advisory Committee on Dialysis Equipment
3. Advisory Committee on Gene Modification Therapy
4. Central Manpower Committee (Medical and Dental)
5. Committee on Medical Aspects of Radiation and the Environment
6. Committee on Research into the Behavioural Aspects of Smoking and Health
7. Community Medicine Inquiry
8. Dental Advisory Committee
9. Ethylene Oxide Working Party
10. Hospital Building Joint Liaison Committee
11. Information Advisory Group
12. Intermediate Treatment Fund
13. Leprosy Opinion Panel

Mobility Allowance

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) if he will give the number of applications for mobility allowance in each quarter of the last five years; and if he will give a percentage that are successful for each quarter;

(2) how many people applied for mobility allowance; and what percentage were successful in each quarter for the last five years.

Mr. Newton: I shall let the right hon. Member have a reply as soon as possible.

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many people have had their mobility allowance withdrawn in each month since the House of Lords decision on a test case one year ago;

(2) if he will categorise the reasons for which mobility allowance has been withdrawn during the last year.

Mr. Newton: Mobility allowance is withdrawn only where the independent adjudicating authorities have reviewed their original decision to award the allowance and are satisfied that the decision was made in ignorance of, or was based on a mistake as to, a material fact; or that there has been a relevant change of the recipient's circumstances since the decision was given. The number of cases where a review has led to the withdrawal or a reduction in the period of an award of mobility allowance, since April 1985, is as follows. It is not possible to analyse these figures by reference to the reason for withdrawal.

	Number

Mr. Ashley asked the Secretary of State for Social Services (1) how many people currently being paid mobility allowance suffer from (a) deaf-blindness, (b) autism,(c) spasticity and (d) mental handicap;

(2) how many people are currently receiving mobility allowance; and if he will categorise them according to their disability.

Mr. Newton: The information as at 9 May is as follows. The analysis is not available in greater detail.

	Number
Neoplasms	8,332
Endocrine, nutritional and metabolic diseases	2,919
Diseases of blood and blood forming organs	979
Diseases of the central nervous system	126,258
Diseases of the circulatory system	56,994
Diseases of the respiratory system	38,663
Diseases of bones and organs of movement	130,426
Congenital malformations	14,180
Amputations	7,259
Diseases of digestive systems, genito-urinary system; skin and cellular tissue	12,184
Total	398,194

In addition, there are 25,549 recipients who were formerly beneficiaries of the invalid vehicle scheme but the nature of their disability is not recorded.

Abortions

Mrs. Roe asked the Secretary of State for Social Services if he will make a statement on the substance of the replies received to his letter of 11 December to proprietors of approved nursing homes and registered pregnancy advice bureaux concerning abortions; what specific reply was received from the Raleigh nursing home, Brixton hill and the Robert nursing home, Birmingham; and what action he proposes to take in the light of these responses.

Mr. Hayhoe [pursuant to his reply, 15 May 1986, c. 531]: Replies to this letter—which was sent by an official on 17 December—noted the statement in it of the circumstances in which an abortion can lawfully be carried out under the provisions of the Abortion Act 1967 and gave assurances that the contents of the letter would be brought to the attention of the staff concerned. In its response, the Raleigh nursing home assured the Department that it had always been their policy not to terminate a pregnancy solely on the grounds of unwanted fetal sex and stated that it had circulated copies of the letter to all its counselling staff, doctors and surgeons and had pointed out that such action is unlawful. The Robert nursing home stated that it was arranging for the letter to be brought to the attention of all doctors in the consulting rooms who counsel patients under the terms of the Abortion Act. These responses did not require further action, but I regard the allegations in the Sunday Times of 11 May as very serious and I have instructed officials to investigate them urgently so that any necessary action can be taken.

TRANSPORT

Pilotage

Mr. Wigley asked the Secretary of State for Transport what recent representations he has received concerning the future of pilotage in British coastal waters; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Ridley: I refer to my reply to the hon. Member for Bristol, East (Mr. Sayeed) on 24 March, at column 365. Since that date 38 representations about the future of pilotage have been made either to me or my noble Friend the Minister for shipping. The representations have included expressions both of support for our proposals for new legislation, and of opposition to them.

Soviet Shipping

Mr. David Atkinson asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many Soviet (a) merchant ships, (b) fishing vessels and (c) cruise ships have visited British ports since 1980; and if he will list the names, tonnage, dates of visits and port visited, in respect of each ship.

Mr. Ridley: The total number of Soviet merchant ships and fishing vessels visiting United Kingdom ports since 1980 are as follows:

	Number
1980	1,143
1981	1,273
1982	1,233
1983	1,245
1984	1,492
1985	1,612

I shall write to my hon. Friend with details of calls made in individual ports. The other information sought in respect of each call is not available.

A5120 (Toddington)

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for Transport what discussions have taken place between officials of his Department and officials of the Bedfordshire county council regarding the additional traffic that will be generated on the A5120 through Toddington as a result of roadworks on the M1.

Mr. Ridley: I regret that roadworks on the M1 in July will require the closure of junction 11 for about nine weeks. Some of the traffic that would normally use junction 11 will be diverted to junction 12 and the A5120 will form part of the diversionary route. The Department has discussed these arrangements with officials of the Bedfordshire county council.

Mr. John Carlisle asked the Secretary of State for Transport, whether he will reconsider his decision to recommend a pedestrian crossing on the A5120 in Toddington, in the light of the additional traffic now expected because of roadworks and diversions on the M1.

Mr. Ridley: I am now satisfied that a crossing can be justified and it will be installed before the M1 roadworks begin.

Channel Tunnel

Mr. Aitken asked the Secretary of State for Transport if he will list the advertisements placed by his Department for the purposes of alerting people to the opportunity to petition on the Channel Tunnel Bill, stating the publication dates and the newspapers in which the advertisement appeared.

Mr. David Mitchell: The Department placed advertisements alerting people to the opportunity to petition against the Channel Tunnel Bill in the following newspapers on the dates indicated:

Newspaper	Date
Daily Express	21 April
London Standard	21 April
The Times	21 April
Daily Mail	22 April
Daily Telegraph	22 April
Guardian	22 April
Sun	22 April
South Kent Newspapers	24 April
Kent & Sussex Courier Group	25 April
Kent Messenger Group*	25 April
South London Press	25 April
Surrey Mirror	25 April
News of the World	27 April
Sunday Times	27 April
Canterbury Times	28 April

* Except Canterbury Times.

Mr. Aitken asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many copies of his Department's leaflet "Channel Tunnel: How to Make Your Voice Heard" have been distributed in Kent; and on what dates the distribution took place.

Mr. David Mitchell: Four thousand seven hundred copies of the Department's leaflet "Channel Tunnel: How to Make Your Voice Heard" were sent to Kent local authorities, Members of Parliament, the Channel Tunnel Group's information centre in Folkestone and other interested bodies on 21 April. Since then the Department has distributed a further 13,000 copies to individuals and groups, many of them in Kent.

Mr. Aitken asked the Secretary of State for Transport how many copies of his Department's leaflet entitled "Channel Tunnel: How to Make Your Voice Heard" were printed.

Mr. David Mitchell: Twenty five thousand.

Mr. Aitken asked the Secretary of State for Transport what was the publication date of his Department's leaflet entitled "Channel Tunnel: How to Make Your Voice Heard".

Mr. David Mitchell: 18 April.

ENVIRONMENT

Women's Aid Refuges

Ms. Richardson asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether the Government have any plans to collect and publish detailed information on the funding of women's aid refuges; and if he will make a statement.

Sir George Young: I refer the hon. Member to the answer I gave her on 13 May about the funding of women's aid refuges. We have no plans to collect and publish detailed information on such funding.

Dog licence

Mr. George Gardiner asked the Secretary of State for the Environment if he will now make a statement on the future of the dog licence.

Mrs. Rumbold: We will announce our conclusions as soon as possible.

Smith-type Housing

Mr. Gilroy Bevan asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what is the latest state of negotiations with regard to owner-occupied Smith-type houses in Birmingham; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. John Patten: I announced on 19 December 1985 that the Government, recognising the problems faced by Smith home owners in Birmingham and elsewhere, and in the light of latest Building Research Establishment evidence, intended to designate Smith houses nationally under the housing defects legislation. That designation was not made straight away in order to give Birmingham city council and certain other authorities the opportunity to make local designations to deal with additional foundation defects. The Government have now made the national designation and eligible home owners are therefore entitled to assistance, either reinstatement grant or, in certain circumstances, repurchase at 95 per cent. of defect-free value. As I explained to my hon. Friend, and to my hon. Friend the Member for Birmingham, Hall Green (Sir R. Eyre) when I met them on 15 May. We look to Birmingham, and other local authorities, to implement the legislation in a reasonable way. The council has indicated that it envisaged repurchase of the designated properties: I will wish to explore with it whether this is the right course of action, especially for those owners who have been looking forward to having their houses repaired with grant assistance under the legislation.

Urban Renewal (Wigan)

Mr. Sackville asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether he has reached a decision on proposals submitted to his urban housing renewal unit by the Wigan metropolitan borough council; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Kenneth Baker: I am pleased to announce my favourable response to a proposal for a scheme in Wigan which the metropolitan borough council has worked up in close collaboration with my Department's urban housing renewal unit and the North West Regional Office.

The estate which will benefit from today's decision is the Millers lane estate in Wigan. This rundown and unpopular estate which has voids of 13 per cent., dates from the 1960s, and consists of 665 dwellings. One third of them are traditional low-rise houses; the remainder are one and two-bedroomed flats and family maisonettes above ground floor level.

The council intends to set up a neighbourhood housing office on the estate to provide responsive local management and a locally-based repairs team and to improve tenant involvement. I see this as a vital part of the package which should enable the council to sustain the improvements which we expect to see as a result of the other steps being taken, and am pleased to approve in principle a contribution of £75,000 from the urban programme. A key part of the package is a two-year community refurbishment scheme to enable local unemployed people, funded jointly by my Department's urban programme and the Government's community programme, subject to consideration and support by the Manpower Services Commission's area board, to carry out improvements to the environment and communal areas on their own estate. Resources of the order of £1,964,280 will be involved includjng £906,566 of urban programme funding, which I am pleased to approve in principle.

I have also agreed to an additional capital allocation of £565,000 from UHRU's targeted housing investment programme resources in 1986-87, to enable the council to re-roof up to 37 blocks of three-storey flat-roofed and to change unsatisfactory heating systems.

This scheme is yet another example of the type of proposals being worked up through the close co-operation between a local authority, my Department's urban housing renewal unit and regional offices. I look forward to seeing these proposals being put into action for the benefit of the residents at Millers lane.

Radioactive Waste

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment what account was taken by NIREX of drainage and water table problems of sites considered for nuclear dumping.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his answer, 15 May 1986, c. 550]: I am informed that NIREX took account of all hydrogeological information available to it.

Mr. Austin Mitchell asked the Secretary of State for the Environment whether his review of the question of radioactive dose equivalents to critical groups will be completed before the geological exploration of near-surface disposal sites begins; and what implications it has for the design, siting and operation of nuclear dumps.

Mr. Waldegrave [pursuant to his answer, 15 May 1986 c. 550]: No. Although a generic review of radioactive dose equivalents to critical groups from various disposal options was undertaken as part of the BPEO study, site specific assessments cannot be undertaken until NIREX has obtained the necessary geological data.

NATIONAL FINANCE

EC (Taxes and Duties Harmonisation)

Mr. Deakins asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what is the policy of Her Majesty's Government towards the proposed harmonisation of indirect taxes and duties in connection with progress to a European Economic Community internal market; if it is envisaged that this process would involve the harmonisation of tax rates, value added tax exemptions and value added tax zero-rating; and if he will make a statement.

Mr. Brooke: The question how best to remove fiscal barriers to trade within the European Community is currently being studied by an ad hoc group of senior officials set up by the Council of Economic and Financial Ministers in January. They are considering both the Commission's proposals for completion of the internal market and possible alternatives which might achieve the same objective without harmonisation of indirect tax and duty rates. Decisions on what action may be necessary to complete the internal market will be taken in the light of the group's report.

Knitting Industry

Sir John Farr asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer what representations he has received from firms in the knitting industry objecting to the new measures in regard to the collection of value added tax; and what assessment he has made of the implications of these new arrangements for the viability of the firms concerned.

Mr. Brooke: I have received one such representation, which referred to the default surcharge to be imposed on those persistently late with their VAT returns and payments. The VAT accounting arrangements, which have not been changed, permit for between one and four months before tax charged has to be remitted to Customs and Excise. Many traders derive a cash flow benefit from this. The Government are, however, conscious of the problems faced by firms whose cutomers are dilatory in paying their bills and are to publish "Notes for Guidance to Buyers and Sellers" later this month. These will emphasise that terms for payment should be agreed in advance and stress that payment should then be made within the agreed period.

Imported Gifts

Mr. Wheeler asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer when the maximum value permitted for import of gifts free of excise was last reviewed; what information he has on the equivalent allowance in other European Community member states and the United States of America; and if he will review the current level.

Mr. Brooke: Common value limits (and quantitative limits for certain exercisable goods) apply throughout the Community. These were last reviewed in 1985 as a result of which the value limits on gifts imported from other member states were raised from £40 to £58 from 1 October 1985 and that on gifts imported from outside the Community will be raised from £20 to £27 from 1 July 1986. Information on equivalent limits in the United States of America is not readily available.

Mr. Wilfred Aspinwall

Mr. Pawsey asked the Chancellor of the Exchequer, pursuant to the answer of 25 April, Official Report, columns 260-61, concerning correspondence of 4 December, 6 March and 11 April about Wilfred Aspinwall of the Managerial, Professional and Staff Liaison Group, if he will now provide a prompt reply.

Mr. MacGregor: I replied to my hon. Friend today.

AGRICULTURE, FISHERIES AND FOOD

Intervention Costs

Mr. Tony Banks asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if, pursuant to his reply of 6 May, Official Report, column 94, he will provide a breakdown of the figure of £42 million given as the total intervention storage and relate costs for beef and butter between the two commodities.

Mr. Jopling: Estimated costs are £25 million for beef and £17 million for butter.

Pest Infestation Research Laboratory

Mr. Watts asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement about the future of the Pest Infestation Research Laboratory in London Road, Slough.

Mrs. Fenner: I shall reply to my hon. Friend as soon as possible.

Thames Barrier

Mr. Spearing asked the Minister of Agriculture, Fisheries and Food if he will make a statement concerning the condition of electrical control equipment of the Thames barrier and the extent to which it is currently restricted in its operation.

Mrs. Fenner: I shall reply to the hon. Member as soon as possible.

INDEX TO THE

PARLIAMENTARY DEBATES

OFFICIAL REPORT

SIXTH SERIES VOLUME 97

SESSION 1985–86

6th May—16th May 1986

SCOPE OF THE INDEX, ARRANGEMENT AND ABBREVIATIONS

This index is derived from the House of Commons Library's Parliamentary On-Line Information System (POLIS), and the subject terms used are based on those used in POLIS. There are often changes in column numbering, etc., between the daily part or weekly Hansard (which simply collects together the daily parts without revision) and the bound volume. The index for the bound volume is revised to take account of these changes.

Scope and arrangement of the Index

Oral and Written Parliamentary Questions are indexed under subject headings and the names of Members asking and Ministers replying to them. Questions are not listed under the names of Departments replying. Departmental listings can be arrived at indirectly by looking under the names of the Minister(s) of that Department. There will, however, be headings 'Northern Ireland', 'Scotland', and 'Wales' under which one will find not only most Questions answered by the Northern Ireland Office, Scottish Office, Welsh Office but also Questions about these areas of the United Kingdom which are answered by other Departments. Ministerial statements are indexed under subject headings, under 'Ministerial statements' and the names of Ministers making them and Members speaking on them. General debates are indexed under broad subject headings and under the names of all Members and Ministers taking part. Debates on legislation (Bills, Orders, Regulations etc.) are indexed under the name of the Bill, Statutory Instrument etc., under subject headings and under the names of those taking part.

Rulings and Statements by Mr. Speaker and his deputies are brought together under the heading Speakers rulings and statements.

Other contributions by Mr. Speaker and his deputies appear under the heading Speaker.

Opposition Day Debates, Estimates Day Debates and Standing Order No. 10 applications are listed under those respective headings and under subject headings too.

The date of each item except Parliamentary Questions is inserted immediately before the reference.

Members' names are given in the form by which they prefer to be known and are printed in bold italics. Under their names, entries are arranged under one of the two headings Debates etc. (to include interventions on statements, points of order and so on) or Questions.

Abbreviations

Bills 1R = first reading, 2R = second reading, Money res = money resolution, Com = Committee stage, Rep = Report stage, 3R = third reading, amendt/amendts = amendment/amendments, * = matter taken formally, without debate.

Column numbers followed by the letter W refer to Written Questions. These appear at the end of each daily part or volume with their own sequence of column numbers printed in italics.
